Air quality an issue for ice arena

Hallock - Kittson Central School Board members informally agreed to help the hockey board with funding to solve an air quality problem at the ice arena.

The building is not meeting polution requirements. Inspectors have recommended the installation of four fans to improve the air quality. The zamboni, the machine that cleans the ice, is causing the air problem.

Man in custody following chase

Red Lake - An argument and shooting incident between cousins on the Red Lake Reservation recently resulted in a high speed chase and ended with a collision between the suspect and a Red Lake Police Department squad car on Highway 89 near the reservation.

Frederick Dessjarlait, 18, of Red Lake, was arrested and is in custody at the Beltrami County Jail, pending charges of assaulting a Red Lake police officer, fleeing a police officer in a motor vehicle, possession of a stolen handgun, possession of a loaded handgun and possession of marijuana. The Pioneer

Warm weather lures fishermen

Roseau - This winter's unusually warm temperatures have had ice fishermen rushing to the lakes and so far, fishing has been described as fantastic by the owners of area sporting outlets.

The lack of snow is giving anglers more freedom on where to fish, but they are cautioned to be careful where they drive. Roseau Times-Region

New Flyer expands

Crookston - New Flyer of America, a Crookston-based bus manufacturer, has purchased the old Coca-Cola building on Main Street.

Currently the building is being used mostly as a warehouse to store overflow and to store several New Flyer buses which are normally parked outside.

New Flyer General Manager Ross Watson said that the company will modify the interior of the building in the hopes of doing some final assembly on the buses by the summer of 1998.

New Flyer is known as the world's far and away leader of low-floor transit buses. Currently the Crookston plant has approximately a 130-week backlog of orders. Three shifts produce about 35 buses per week, and the staff was recently expanded to approximately 230 workers.

Snowmobile ride to raise money for MS

Grygla - The Fourtown-Grygla Sportman's Club and the Roseau County Trailblazers are teaming up for an event today, January 3, to raise money for multiple sclerosis.

Riders in the "Trailblazer's Frostbite 250" were encouraged to raise money through pledges with prizes given out to top fund-raisers. Towns along the route are Roseau, Fourtown, Washkish, Baudette and Warroad.

Chief cooks Jerry Robinson, regular chef at the Evergreen Eating Emporium, and Ione Gonsorowski, who combined their considerable talents and skill to come up with a great Christmas eve dinner for the annual Community Christmas Eve dinner. They were among the 100 volunteers helping to bring about another successful event.

Christmas Eve dinner another successful event

Over 400 meals were served during the annual Christmas Eve dinner in Thief River Falls.

Organizers had prepared for about 500 because of overwhelming response last year, but were pleased none-the-less with the response this year. Of the 400 meals, 171 were delivered to residents who were unable to get out to the meal site, the Evergreen Eating Emporium. Helping organizers with this huge task were about 100 volunteers, including Chuck and Theresa Walrath who were the hosts, Dayton and Arlene Silk who were in charge of the waiter stations, Rev. John Wollenzien of Trinity Lutheran Church, who said grace, and Ione Gonsorowski and Jerry Robinson, who were the chefs. It went very well, said one organizer.

The meal has become a community event open to the entire community, and in at-least one case to visitors. A family with four children, ages five and under, were traveling through the area. They stopped on their journey in Thief River Falls because they were hungry. Because it appeared that everything was closed, they asked a police officer where they could get a good meal. The officer directed the family to the Evergreen Eating Emporium. It was the perfect gift, as the man's wife had asked him only for a night not to cook, and the children had a good time. The organizer said the family was very happy and the husband left a sizeable donation when they left.

The event was a success also because of the contributions of many local businesses, including the following which donated food and other items for the dinner: Hartz Foods, Northern Pride, Barron Specialties, SuperValu, Metz Bakery, Amundgaards Sausage, Joppru's, Hugo's, Erl's, Bridgeman's, Midway Co., Falls Liquor, St. Hilaire Liquor, Pennington Main and Square, Gary's Rainbow Bakery, Home Sweet Home, Kmart, Pizza Hut, Lori's Hallmark, TR Jobbing, North Border Wholesale, Pamida and Northwest Grain.

Organizers estimated that they served 180 pounds of turkey, peeled 200 pounds of potatoes, and used 30 loaves of bread and 25 pounds of pork sausage for stuffing.

An organizer said one of the volunteers had been very reluctant in the beginning, but at the end of the evening was excited about the pruspect of helping again next year — and so are the organizers of the event.

Cities in area share return of workers comp premiums

Fewer employment-related insurance claims and continued sound investments allowed the League of Minnesota Cities Insurance Trust (LMCIT) to return $12 million in dividends to its property/casualty program members again this year. Cities enrolled in the workers' compensation program also will receive dividends totaling $4 million.

The LMCIT is a self-insurance pool formed in 1980 to meet the unique risk management needs of cities. More than 750 cities throughout Minnesota purchase their liability, property and workers' compensation coverage from this insurance trust. And unlike private insurance companies, any extra funds go back to member cities each year. For 11 consecutive years, the trust has returned funds to member cities, bringing the total dividend return for property/casualty to nearly $91 million, or 31 percent of the premiums paid since 1987. Participants in the workers' comp program received $5.4 million in dividends in 1993, and $8.5 million in 1998.

Many area cities benefited from the return of dividends: Argyle received $9,218, Bagley received $18,257; Bemidji $88,475; Brooks $550, Crookston $65,987; East Grand Forks, $53,034; Fertile $8,393, Goodridge $3,036, Goodridge Area Fire department $1,546, Greenbush $7,384; Grygla, $2,698; Gully $49; Hallock $12,206; Karlstad $5,458; Mahnomen $7,178; Middle River, $1,896; Newfolden $4,230, Oklee, $5,195, Plummer, $4,404; Red Lake Falls, $13,195; Roseau $34,514; St. Hilaire, $3,446; Stephen $11,701; Strandquist $549; Thief River Falls $90,441; Trail $489; Viking, $965, Warren $19,255; Warroad $18,479.

"This return shows, once again, that Minnesota cities are always working toward good management of their taxpayers' dollars," said LMCIT Board Chairman and Moorhead City Manager Jim Antonen. "With the successful efforts by cities to control their risks and losses, the trust has been able to expand its coverage and save cities money."

The amount of money individual cities receive is determined by the total amount of premiums paid into the trust and the losses claimed for all of the years a city has participat-

Get bigger or get out is future of dairying

(This is the fifth in a series of Northern Watch stories on the loss of dairy farmers and the dairy situation in northwest Minnesota.)

by Marvin Lundin
Northern Watch Editor

"I guess we're just too stubborn to quit."

Roger Walter of Walter Bros. farm at Plummer was talking about their decision to add more cows to their existing herd in an effort to continue a viable dairy operation. In the face of milk prices that don't seem likely to increase, adding herd numbers is one of the few alternatives available to today's dairymen.

Roger, his brother Ray and their families are carrying on the dairy operation started by their father, Herb Walter, 50 years ago. Now 80 years young and living in Plummer, Herb still participates in the farming operation by driving tractor when needed.

Also active in the dairy are Albert Fisher and Glenn Buckta, along with Roger's sons and a couple of other part-time workers.

"You might say there are five families trying to make a living from this operation," Roger said. "One of the reasons we decided to expand was that Albert and Glenn wanted to get in a few more hours and they have been excellent workers with us."

Walter Bros. of Plummer are among area dairymen who have decided to expand their herds to gain the economy of scale necessary in today's dairy industry. They built this 82x144 curtain barn last fall to accommodate the addition of another 100 cows to their existing 160-cow herd. The silos at right in the photo are now of little use in the Walter Bros. operation with corn silage and green chopped hay stored in bunkers where it can be accessed with a tractor and loader.

The decision to expand may have been somewhat easier for the Walter Brothers than for a number of other dairymen for several reasons. They already had built their herd to 160 cows, which is well above the current state average. They had good and willing workers available to help share the load. And they had made a number of adjustments in the way they handle feed and other phases of the dairy that would readily apply to a larger herd.

Curtain Barn Built

Just completed this fall was an 82x144 curtain barn with capacity for 160 cows. The plan was to add 100 cows for a total of 260. Some of these came from area dairymen who had decided to sell their herds, including about 25 lactating cows and the same number of springing heifers from Lyle Swanson of St. Hilaire and 30 cows from Dennis Klopp of Karlstad. The Walters' own herd will also provide some of the increased number.

The new barn and additional cattle also necessitated the building of a lagoon for manure handling and a planned expansion of the milking parlor from a double six to a double eight, permitting the milking of 16 cows at a time.

Roger said that the permitting process for the manure handling required a good deal of paperwork and a lot of worry as weather was turning cold in the late fall. By good fortune, however, the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency granted the permit soon enough to get the system operating before freeze-up.

10-Year Plan May Be Long

"At the time we decided to go ahead with the expansion, we figured it would be good for about 10 years," Roger said. "But things are changing so fast in the industry now that we may be faced with a similar expansion decision in half that time."

Roger and Ray seem determined to do their best to keep dairy ownership in the hands of the farmers, but acknowledge that it may be a difficult task.

"I'm afraid that dairying is likely to go the way of hog production, where the ownership will be in the hands of the feed companies and other corporations and farmers will just be hired to run the farms," Roger said.

Walter said he had visited dairy operations in New York state which is considered to be 10 years ahead of Minnesota in its approach to dairying. He said the chance to talk to dairymen there provided several new ideas to be applied in their herd and some which he hopes will catch on in the area.

Young Dairyman Program

One is a young dairyman program where young people interested in dairying come to work on a dairy farm and are encouraged to buy their own cows as part of the herd. The dairy owner leases the cows and when the younger person has accumulated a sufficient number for a herd of his or her own, the dairyman helps by investing in the new herd. Without a program of this type, it is virtually impossible today for young people to get a start in the business.

The arrangement has several positive aspects. First, the young person gets a chance to learn while earning an income and building equity. Second, the dairy owner has an employee (or employees) with an incentive to excel because of a personal interest in the herd. Third, such vested employees spread the management load by helping to supervise other workers.

Roger said that another change has been in spreading the work load by "farming out" phases of the operation. For instance, the Walters no

Healthier lifestyles seminar Jan. 9

At the beginning of the year, many people make a renewed commitment to be healthier — but often those resolutions are difficult to maintain. If you are looking at realistic ways to make healthier food and physical activity choices, consider attending this session. Mary Jenkins, extension educator from Kittson county, will present the topic, "It's All About You" on Friday, January 9, at 1:30 p.m. in the courthouse meeting room in Thief River Falls.

Jenkins will focus on putting dietary guidelines and food guide pyramid into a personal, workable plan that fits with one's lifestyle. Making healthy choices are important, but they must fit each person's individual needs, schedule, and interests to be most effective. The way to accomplish this is to be realistic, adventurous, flexible, sensible, and active in what we eat and what we do. The presentation will include many down-to-earth tips and suggestions to individualize your health habits. Special attention will be given to calcium requirements and methods to assure adequate intake for various ages.

This session is open to the general public. For more information call the Pennington County Extension Office at 683-7030.

MN DNR sweeps Lake of the Woods

Baudette - Minnesota Department of Natural Resources conservation officers conducted a saturation work detail on Lake of the Woods over the weekend of December 20-21, contacting more than 1,500 anglers.

Approximately 40 citations were issued for violations ranging from driving under the influence (ATV's) and possession of marijuana, to fishing without a license or registration or bagging too many fish. Also, near 80 warnings were issued that weekend, mostly for fish house violations or for not having a fishing license in possession.

Homeowners cut costs, save hundreds each month.

While the national deficit may be at a 25 year low, homeowners are still piling up debt. National consumer debt is expected to reach 600 billion by the year 2000 almost double what it was in 1994. Whether it's a question of inflation or simply living beyond their means, there's one thing that most homeowners have in common. They want to pay down their debt, save more money and get ahead financially. But when debt runs into the tens of thousands saving money comes in second to the priority of simply getting the monthly bills paid.

But in spite of these ever increasing expenses some homeowners are actually finding ways to save money every month, and lots of it. In most cases, they're saving up to 50 percent and more on their monthly payments. This translates into hundreds of dollars in savings every month. The question is, how do they do it?

The answer is CAPITOL BROKERS.

CAPITOL BROKERS is a specialized home mortgage finance company that enables homeowners to borrow more money than the amount of equity they have in their homes. This is what sets them apart from most other finance companies.

CAPITOL BROKERS offers loans up to 125 percent of the value of the home, meaning that even new homeowners can qualify for a loan. While other finance companies might look at the equity when determining a loan, CAPITOL BROKERS is more interested in the borrower's credit history and ability to repay the loan.

To homeowners, this is great news for several reasons. The first is bill consolidation. With a CAPITOL BROKERS loan homeowners can consolidate their high interest and high monthly payment bills into one lower monthly payment amount. For many, the savings are in the hundreds every single month, sometimes as much as $500 or more. And, most homeowners find that it's much easier to pay one bill with one due date than it is to juggle several bills with several different due dates.

Another advantage to consolidating bills is taxes. Many borrowers, upon consultation with their financial advisors, find that the interest on a CAPITOL BROKERS loan could be deductible. Credit cards and other loans could charge up to 21 percent interest that isn't tax deductible, giving homeowners even more ways to save money with CAPITOL BROKERS.

The third reason is home improvement. Many homeowners use CAPITOL BROKERS loans to customize or renovate their homes. And even though new buyers may have no equity built up, they can still qualify with CAPITOL BROKERS.

The most typical home improvement projects are major repairs, kitchen and bath renovations, room additions and luxury items like swimming pools. In fact, in a fluctuating real estate market many consumers are staying in their homes longer. Rather than attempting to purchase new homes, they choose to renovate their existing homes at a much lower cost. Borrowers can even combine home improvement and debt consolidation into one money saving loan. It's CAPITOL BROKERS that makes it happen.

So what are these homeowners doing with all the money they're saving? Some are using the money for college tuition. Others are buying cars, taking vacations, enjoying the finer things in life. Still others are investing their money, buying savings bonds, mutual funds and stocks. And others are simply enjoying the peace of mind that comes with knowing they'll be able to make ends meet and maybe even get ahead.

Homeowners who find all this confusing are not alone. CAPITOL BROKERS is the first to admit that applying for a home equity loan can raise a lot of questions. With all the different specifications, many consumers can feel overwhelmed. But with CAPITOL BROKERS each borrower has their own personal loan officer who has the responsibility of making sure the customer understands every aspect of the loan. It's this kind of attention to customer service that has made CAPITOL BROKERS a leader in the consumer finance industry.

SOUPÇON
Sherry LaCoursiere

Today we'll have recipes for some lighter dishes rather than those rich holiday foods – it's time to get back to normal eating after all the treats.

This is a simple dish that everyone will love – serve with a salad to make a meal:

BARBECUE MUFFINS
1 (10 ounce) tube refrigerated buttermilk biscuits
1 pound ground beef
1/2 cup ketchup
3 tablespoons brown sugar
1 tablespoon vinegar
1/2 teaspoon chili powder
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded cheddar cheese

Separate biscuits. Flatten into 5-inch circles and press each into bottom and up sides of greased muffin cup. Set aside.

Brown beef and drain.

In bowl, mix ketchup, brown sugar, vinegar and chili powder, stirring until smooth. Add to meat and mix well.

Place the meat mixture into the prepared cups, about 1/4 cup for each. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake at 375° for 18-20 minutes, until golden. Cool for 5 minutes before removing from muffin tins.

Here's a really quick and easy way to fix these favorites:

PIZZA BURGERS
1 pound lean ground beef
1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 tablespoon tomato paste
1 teaspoon dried oregano
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
4 English muffins, split
8 tomato slices
8 mozzarella cheese slices

Mix beef, Parmesan, onion, tomato paste, oregano, salt and pepper until just combined.

Toast muffins in broiler until lightly browned.

Divide meat mixture on muffins and broil 4 inches from heat for 8-10 minutes, until meat is thoroughly cooked. Top with tomato and cheese slices and return to broiler until cheese is melted. Sprinkle with oregano if desired.

Here's another tasty sandwich that makes a meal in itself:

BEEF STROGANOFF SANDWICH
2 pounds ground beef
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 loaf French bread
Butter or margarine, softened
2 cups (16 ounces) sour cream
2 tomatoes, seeded and diced
1 large green pepper, diced
3 cups (12 ounces) shredded cheddar cheese

Brown beef and onion. Drain. Add salt, garlic powder and pepper and simmer.

Cut bread in half lengthwise and butter both halves. Place on baking sheets.

Remove meat mixture from heat and stir in sour cream. Spoon onto bread and sprinkle with tomatoes, green pepper and cheese.

Bake at 350° for 20 minutes or until cheese is melted (can bake longer for more crispy bread.)

These muffins would be delicious for breakfast (maybe with cream cheese?) or served with a good soup:

HAM AND CHEESE MUFFINS
2 cups self-rising flour*
1/2 teaspoon soda
1 cup milk
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup finely chopped cooked ham
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese

In large bowl, combine flour and soda. Combine remaining ingredients and stir into dry ingredients just until moistened.

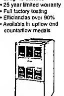
Fill greased or muffin paper-lined cups two-thirds full.

Bake at 425° for 16-18 minutes or until muffins test done.

*To substitute for cups of self-rising flour, place 1 1/2 teaspoons of baking powder and 1/2 teaspoon salt in each measuring cup and then fill with flour (remember, this recipe would take two cups done in that manner.)

Serve those biscuits with this really easy soup that has been cooking in the crockpot all day:

FORGOTTEN MINESTRONE
1 pound lean beef stew meat
6 cups water
1 (28 ounce) can tomatoes with liquid, cut up
1 beef bouillon cube
1 medium onion, chopped
2 tablespoons minced dried parsley
2 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 teaspoons ground thyme
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 medium zucchini, thinly sliced
2 cups finely chopped cabbage
1 (16 ounce) can garbanzo beans, drained
1 cup uncooked small elbow or shell macaroni
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese, if desired



In slow cooker, combine beef, water, tomatoes, bouillon, onion, parsley, salt, thyme and pepper. Cover and cook on low for 7-9 hours or until meat is tender.

Add zucchini, cabbage, beans and macaroni and cook on high, covered, for 30-45 minutes, until vegetables are tender. Sprinkle individual servings with Parmesan.

Hartz bridge opens for snowmobile use

Recent snowfall has made it possible for officials to approve use of the new Hartz Park bridge by snowmobilers. Although the SnoDrifters snowmobile club had met all stipulations required before it could be open, the bridge couldn't be open to snowmobile traffic because of a lack of snow.

Tom Wang of the SnoDrifters snowmobile club in Thief River Falls said as of January 1 snowmobilers can now use the Hartz Park bridge to cross the Red Lake river in Thief River Falls. Snowmobilers are asked to use caution when approaching the bridge and observe the 15 mile per hour speed limit. Wang said the speed limit on the bridge will be strictly enforced. He also said that snowmobilers must stop for pedestrians using the bridge.

Use of the bridge became an issue earlier this fall when the designated river crossing was deemed unsafe because of thin ice. The designated route which crossed the river between First Street bridge and the reservoir dam in Thief River Falls remains closed to snowmobile traffic because of concerns about thin ice. The only option open to snowmobilers was a route at the north edge of Thief River Falls or across the new bridge. The new bridge was never intended for motorized traffic. After considerable discussion with numerous interest groups, the city council approved use of the bridge by snowmobilers as a temporary solution to the problem and only if they met a number of stipulations. Those stipulations included a cover on the bridge surface and sides, fencing and signage. All of the stipulations had to be met prior to use.

Snowmobile ride for MS delayed to January 17

Originally scheduled for today (Saturday, January 3), the Trailblazer Frostbite 250 snowmobile ride to raise funds for the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Minnesota has been postponed to Saturday, January 17.

The riders will leave from the Cenex convenience store in Roseau or the Fourtown store at Fourtown and ride to Roseau, Fourtown, Waskish, Baudette and Warroad.

Final permit on Clearwater bank project issued

St. Paul District of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has issued its final general permit on the bank stabilization project on the Clearwater river in Red Lake county.

Red Lake Watershed District made the permit application. Work to be done includes a combination of techniques including rip-rap placement and live growth planting to stabilize banks which have been eroding in several locations.

The work is part of a continuing study on water quality in the Clearwater river. Some work on the project, such as the hauling of rip-rap materials, is being conducted this winter.

LETTERS

To The Editor:

My [illegible] old brother called me immediately upon hearing that Quentin Jones had died. I mention my brothers age because perhaps one has to go back that far to remember Quentin Jones at the height of his powers. For my own clarity of mind I sat down to write a few things about Quentin that made him so special to so many of us.

I sent those thoughts to the Thief River Falls Education Foundation thinking that their periodic mailings to Lincoln alumni might be the appropriate space to share them. Then I thought of The Times, the Huck Olson part of The Times. He was important to us young athletes, too—and has been appropriately remembered in the arena named for him. Quentin Jones deserves at least a letter to the editor.

Quentin Jones was a consummate citizen, a civic and civil man. Most obviously in his career he cared about children, about students. I emphasize the term student because his caring was made visible in his teaching.

(I can't imagine him ever saying, "I care about you," rather he would observe and analyze your strengths and weaknesses. I remember him telling me I had a fast start but wasn't fast enough over a hundred yards to be competitive. I may have had sufficient speed and strength to be a half-miler, but I had no desire to run that far. So Quentin Jones made a pole vaulter out of me. In that event my short distance speed, relatively good coordination and strength could be used to full advantage. As a teacher, that was his objective: to maximize the strengths of his students.)

From kindergarten through graduation from Lincoln high school, I had no teacher who cared more for his students than did Quentin Jones.

For those who depended on bus transportation to get to and from school, Quentin Jones made it possible for them to participate in a varsity sport by scheduling some of his driver training classes to coincide with the end of practice sessions, thereby allowing one student to practice his driving while giving a football player, for instance, a ride to his home west of St. Hilaire or south toward the airport, Plummer or wherever.

Again, as a caring teacher, he wanted to maximize the options, the opportunities for students so that they might fully participate in all that Lincoln high school had to offer.

Once when my mother was hospitalized, the Jones family invited my father and me to their home for dinner, knowing, no doubt, that neither my father nor I knew the first thing about cooking. They were a caring couple, never inflicting themselves on anyone but always open to be of help. They cared about people, about the community and about the environment.

Tindolph Park (is that what it is still called?) will always be for me Jones Park. Quentin Jones taught me and hundreds of others how to swim there. He also firmly told many a parent how not to teach their *child to swim. He cared for our safe*ty and our enjoyment and he cared for the grounds, teaching us not to litter nor in any other way to diminish what we had in that park. Humble as it was, it was the only place most of us had to swim in safety, to play sand volleyball or table tennis, to spend our summer days of youth with one another.

Consummate, I think, means "to bring to completion." Quentin Jones' life has now been brought to completion, and a complete life it was. My only regret is that I don't remember ever telling him how much he meant to me in my youth—what a superb teacher and exemplar he was. However, I'm equally certain that he didn't live for our thanks. His unassuming joy was in the doing of the life he lived. He ran a great, long race and now, I trust, the laurel is his.

Sincerely,
Lyle R. Gittu

Important information from U S WEST®

U S WEST Communications has petitioned the Minnesota Public Utilities Commission for approval of a new method for raising and lowering the prices of its services. Under this new method, authorized by the Minnesota Legislature, prices and rates would no longer require approval by the Minnesota Public Utilities Commission in all cases. Instead, U S WEST would have the ability to raise and lower prices with less Commission oversight.

For a period of three years, or until the year 2001, U S WEST would not be allowed to raise the price of local telephone service and other price regulated services, such as 9-1-1 emergency services. U S WEST would, however, be allowed to raise or lower the price of optional local services, such as caller identification (Caller ID), Call Waiting and Call Forwarding, consistent with the plan.

The Minnesota Public Utilities Commission would continue to have the authority to monitor service quality issues and investigate service complaints from consumers.

The Public Utilities Commission will hold a series of public hearings to provide more details of the plan and to seek your input regarding this new pricing method.

Engineer's Perspective On Santa Claus

Shortly before Christmas someone deposited on our desk an essay on Santa Claus from an engineer's perspective. We haven't checked the calculations to determine their correctness, but the hypothesis is interesting. We offer it here for adult post-Christmas reflection with the suggestion that it may not be appropriate reading or listening for young believers.

I. There are approximately two billion children (persons under 18) in the world. However, since Santa does not visit children of Muslim, Hindu, Jewish or Buddhist religions, this reduces the workload for Christmas night to 15% of the total, or 378 million (according to the Population Reference Bureau).

At an average (census) rate of 3.5 children per household, that comes to 108 million homes, presuming that there is at least one good child in each.

II. Santa has about 31 hours of Christmas to work with, thanks to the different time zones and the rotation of the earth, assuming he travels east to west (which seems logical). This works out to 967.7 visits per second.

This is to say that for each Christian household with a good child, Santa has around 1/1000th of a second to park the sleigh, hop out, jump down the chimney, fill the stockings, distribute the remaining presents under the tree, eat whatever snacks have been left for him, get back up the chimney, jump into the sleigh and get on to the next house.

Assuming that each of these 108 million stops is evenly distributed around the earth (which, of course, we know to be false, but will accept for the purposes of our calculations), we are now talking about 0.78 miles per household; a total trip of 75.5 million miles, not counting bathroom stops or breaks.

This means Santa's sleigh is moving at 650 miles per second—3,000 times the speed of sound. For purposes of comparison, the fastest man-made vehicle, the Ulysses space probe, moves at a pokey 27.4 miles per second, and a conventional reindeer can run (at best) 15 miles per hour.

III. The payload of the sleigh adds another interesting element. Assuming that each child gets nothing more than a medium sized Lego set (two pounds), the sleigh is carrying over 500,000 tons, not counting Santa himself.

On land, a conventional reindeer can pull no more than 300 pounds. Even granting that the "flying" reindeer could pull 10 times the normal amount, the job can't be done with eight or even nine reindeer—Santa would need 360,000 of them.

This increases the payload, not counting the weight of the sleigh, another 54,000 tons, or roughly seven times the weight of the Queen Elizabeth (the ship....not the monarch).

IV. 600,000 tons traveling at 650 miles per second creates enormous air resistance. This would heat up the reindeer in the same fashion as spacecraft re-entering the earth's atmosphere. The lead pair of reindeer would absorb 14.3 quintillion joules of energy per second each. In short, they would burst into flames almost instantaneously, exposing the reindeer behind them and creating deafening sonic booms in their wake. The entire reindeer team would be vaporized within 4.26 thousandths of a second, or right about the time Santa reached the fifth house on his trip.

Not that it matters, however, since Santa, as a result of accelerating from a dead stop to 650 miles per second in .001 second, would be subjected to centrifugal forces of 17,500 g's. A 250-pound Santa (which seems ludicrously slim) would be pinned to the back of the sleigh by 4,315,015 pounds of force, instantly reducing him to a smear of goo.

V. Therefore, if Santa did exist, he doesn't now!

Yesterday—Computer Style

Useful and amazing as computers are, they can also be frustrating and embarrassing, especially to those of us in the older generation who must adjust our thinking to use even a tiny part of the existing technology. For youngsters, however, computers are as common playthings as sleds and wagons were in our day.

During the holidays we were showing some family members around the newspaper shop, including the process by which we now make our photos for newspaper printing. We scan the 35mm negatives into the computer, adjust the levels of light and dark contrast, determine image size and photo cropping, add a border and print a screened picture on normal computer paper.

In the demonstration we were having a little problem adjusting contrast. Kara, a few days short of her eighth birthday, volunteered: "Did you click on the O.K.?" Well, we hadn't done so, and that was the problem. How did she know, in a program she had never seen? You tell me, but she didn't guess, she knew!

All of which leads us to this little computer lament from the Minnesota Newspaper Association Bulletin, sung to the tune of the song entitled "Yesterday."

Yesterday,
All those backups seemed a waste of pay.
Now my database has gone away.
Oh I believe in yesterday.

Suddenly,
There's not half the files there used to be,
And there's a millstone hanging over me.
The system crashed so suddenly.

I pushed something wrong;
What it was I could not say.
Now all my data's gone
And I long for yesterday-ay-ay-ay.

Yesterday,
The need for backups seemed so far away.
When my data was all here to stay.
Now I believe in yesterday.

Happy New Year, all of you in computer land and in the real world.

To The Editor:

The stated goal of the editorial page in the Watch is "to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers." Let me say that your editorial Electric Suppliers Say Deregulation Is Coming succeeded in living up to that goal.

You begin the editorial by saying the public needs to know more about deregulation. I agree. You end the comment piece by saying, "Consumers should be involved in being sure their interests are protected in any deregulation effort." Again, no argument here. I even believe it wise to benefit from the eight to 10 states that already have deregulated their electric utilities. However, the "go slow" approach is often a code word for "let's see how long we can stall this thing."

The industry executives at the meeting referred to coming changes as reregulation. Simply stated that means the WIRE part of the business will remain with the incumbent utility. The deregulation or "choice" will come in whom you buy the electron from.

You refer to nine (9) issues that must be addressed before deregulation is considered. I wonder if the states where deregulation is the law have considered such things as reliability, universal access and safety, not to mention the other straw men listed.

I'm only a bit past the mid point of life experience, but I'm hard pressed to recall an instance when consumers have been harmed when they have had a choice. On the issue of stranded cost (wherever that notion came from), how does the Times or any other business that has to compete in a market handle that one?

I hope your editorial inspired more thinking and discussion.

Sincerely,
Chuck Riesen

TRF is 4-1 winner over Mesabi East

■ McDonald's Classic hockey victory

Junior forwards Wade Chodo and Jarod Reierson scored two goals each Tuesday as Thief River Falls beat Mesabi East 4-1 in Day 2 of the 1997 McDonald's Classic high school hockey series.

It was the second straight win for the Prowlers, who struggled at time, but edged Red Lake Falls 4-3 in overtime Monday to snap a season-opening eight-game losing streak.

"We played better," reported Thief River Falls coach Scott Bergland. "I would like to think we're making progress."

Chodo scored the game's first two goals, providing the Prowlers with a 1-0 edge late in the first period and a 2-0 advantage midway through the second period.

Mesabi East, a combination of Aurora-Hoyt Lakes and Babbitt-Embarrass, chopped the difference to 2-1 on a goal by Adam Lacari at 12:33 of the second period, but the Prowlers regained their two-goal advantage a quick nine seconds later on Reierson's first goal of the night.

Reierson scored again 3:38 into the third period.

"I thought everyone played a pretty respectable game," offered Bergland. "Nobody played poorly, and nobody played spectacular."

In the other Tuesday match-ups at Crookston, East Grand Forks beat Grafton 4-2 and Red Lake Falls edged Crookston 4-3 in overtime.

Monday games, which also included a 3-2 Grafton overtime decision against Crookston and a 4-3 East Grand Forks victory over Mesabi East, were played at East Grand Forks.

Wednesday's final set of games, scheduled for the Thief River Falls Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center, will be reported in the Jan. 7 Times.

Nordics, Wolfpack reach title contest

Marshall County Central held off Tri-County 42-38 and Kittson Central pulled away from Thief River Falls 65-52 Tuesday in the semifinals of the 15th annual Thief River Falls Russ Smith Northwest Holiday Classic boys high school basketball tournament.

Both games were rematches from recent regular season encounters, with the Nordics reversing a 51-46 loss to the Wildcats, while the Wolfpack beat the Prowlers a second time, although not as convincing as a 73-47 first-time blow-out.

The Nordics' score was identical to their Monday quarterfinal win over Fertile-Beltrami.

Wednesday's finals (which will be reported in the Jan. 7 Times), put the Nordics in the championship game for the first time since 1990 and had the Wolfpack playing for their first title, although Kennedy won it in 1984 and was runner-up in 1986 and 1987 before joining forces with Hallock to form the Kittson Central cooperative.

Tri-County..........................38

A game-long Marshall County Central lead disappeared midway through the fourth quarter, but the Nordics answered the challenge down the stretch and surprised most observers by beating Tri-County 42-38.

The Nordics, who were shut out in the first quarter the day before by Fertile-Beltrami, jumped out to a 5-0 opening minute lead against Tri-County when Matt Nelson hit a 3-point basket and Jon Donarski finished off a fast break.

Marshall County Central carried the lead through the quarter stops, 16-10, 23-19 and 33-26.

But a 12-2 fourth quarter Tri-County run overtook the Nordics, with Phil Kazmierczak banking in a shot from the side to put the Wildcats on top for the first time, 36-35, with 4:05 to play.

A drive by Tryg Spilde made it 38-35 with 3:49 remaining.

However, that was the last points of the night given up by the Nordics. A single free throw by David Wilcox made it 38-36, then back-to-back Tri-County turnovers led to a pair of game-tying free throws by Caleb Holthusen and a go-ahead basket by Wilcox, who banked in a short jumper as he was being knocked to the floor with 46 seconds on the clock.

Wilcox missed the free throw that could have completed a three-point play, and Tri-County controlled the rebound. The Wildcats ran the clock down before Spilde headed down the lane on a spinning drive with 3.5 seconds remaining. His shot caromed off the rim, and Nelson was fouled on the rebound. His two free throws with 1.9 seconds showing finished off a game-clinching 7-0 Marshall County Central run.

Nelson finished with 18 points to lead all scorers. Spilde had 12 points and Joel Hellerud 10 for the Wildcats.

In a rough-and-tumble game featuring aggressive defense on both sides, shooting figures took a hit. The Nordics shot 30 percent from the field (13/44) and the Wildcats 29 percent (15/51). Marshall County Central won with a 14-for-20 night at the free throw line, where Tri-County was a less frequent 5-for-8 visitor. The Wildcats finished with a 31-25 rebound edge, but also had more turnovers, 11-8.

Kittson Central....................65
Thief River Falls..................52

Kittson Central turned a two-point edge into a 10-point gap during a two-minute fourth quarter run that carried the Wolfpack past host Thief River Falls 65-52.

The Prowlers played well at the start. A game-opening lay-up by Matt Myers and a three-point play by Jeremy Swanson produced a 5-0 first-minute lead, and a fast break lay-up by Mike Johnson beat the buzzer for a 17-10 spread at the close of the first quarter.

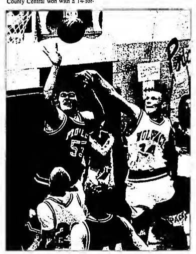
But a 7-0 Kittson Central surge in the middle of the second quarter wiped out that Thief River Falls advantage. Two free throws by Josh Deere with 1:05 remaining in the half gave the Wolfpack their first lead of the night, 26-25. The Prowlers' Kyle Waterworth then banked in a short jumper off a drive, but Deere turned a long offensive rebound into a short jumper with 1.5 seconds showing to send Kittson Central into intermission with a 28-27 edge.

A drive by Aaron Austin put the Wolfpack ahead 33-31 with 4:39 left in the third quarter, and they never trailed again. It was 41-37 heading into the final period, and a still-close 43-41 game when Swanson put in a rebound with 6:49 on the clock.

But that's when the Wolfpack took off as Austin scored on a drive, Deere sank two free throws, Austin added a 15-foot jumper, and Nathan Bowman connected from the side to make it 51-41 with 4:17 to go.

The Prowlers never recovered, getting no closer than nine points down the stretch.

Austin, a 6-1 sophomore, turned in an impressive 26-point game. Jason Urbaniak added 11 points to the Wildcats' offense. Only double figure scorer for the Prowlers was Swanson, who had 10 points.



Kittson Central burned Thief River Falls on the inside throughout the game en route to a 56 percent 24-for-53 shooting performance. The Wolfpack added a 17-for-27 free throw performance. The Prowlers shot 44 percent from the floor (22/50) and went 6-for-10 at the line. Thief River Falls out-rebounded Kittson Central 29-19, but also had more turnovers, 16-9.

Kittson Central defender Aaron Austin reached out and swatted away this shot from the side of the basket by Matt Myers of Thief River Falls during Tuesday's semifinal match-up in the Thief River Falls Russ Smith Northwest Holiday Classic boys high school basketball tournament. Austin scored a game-high 26 points as the Wolfpack beat the defending champion Prowlers 65-52.

Bears, Gators post consolation round semifinal victories

Clearbrook-Gonvick and Badger/Greenbush-Middle River picked up wins Tuesday in the consolation semifinals of the 1997 Thief River Falls Russ Smith Northwest Holiday Classic boys high school basketball tournament.

The Bears out-scored Stephen-Argyle 87-66 and the Gators beat Fertile-Beltrami 63-52 to create a Wednesday consolation final match-up.

Stephen-Argyle and Fertile-Beltrami were ticketed for a seventh place match-up in the final round of the three-day, eight-team tournament. Those results will be posted in the Jan. 7 Times.

Three Clearbrook-Gonvick scorers hit double figures and four others were just a basket away from joining them as the Bears' offense rolled past Stephen-Argyle 87-66.

Paul Gustafson scored 21 points, Seth Dorman 15 and Kevin Pletschett 11 for the winners, who led at the quarter stops 19-13, 41-26 and 57-37. The two teams closed it out by combining for 59 fourth quarter points.

Mike Wagner and Steve Crummy paced the Storm with 20 and 17 points, respectively.

There were 48 free throws shot in the game, with Clearbrook-Gonvick going 13-for-22 at the line and Stephen-Argyle finishing 14-for-26.

The Gators, whose offense was shut down by Tri-County in a 44-34 quarterfinal loss the day before, nearly surpassed that point total in the first half against the Falcons with a 30-18 lead. They were up 43-29 through three quarters.

Jeremy Vacura led the Gators with 16 points, while Daryl Wockenfuss netted 12, Bret Bentow 11 and Andy Schenkey 10. The Falcons got a 14-point game from Jason Franklin and 10 from Mike Klabo.

Insurance pool returns $12 million to cities

ed. The longer a city has participated and the more successful it has been at avoiding losses, the greater the city's dividend.

According to Antonen, the dividends are a result of several factors, the most significant being cities' efforts to control and reduce losses. Rates are set at a level so that premiums, plus investment income, will cover losses and expenses even if losses are more than projected. If losses are equal to or less than projected, that safety margin can be returned to members. Cities' success in reducing the number of employment-related liability claims is a big factor in making greater dividends possible. As insurance trust members, cities participate in loss control seminars, receive loss control information monthly, and are visited by loss control representatives to help them minimize risks and avoid problems that lead to claims.

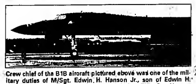
The LMCIT board this month also approved a 15 percent reduction in workers' comp premium rates, and broadened the coverage under the property insurance program. Cities can take advantage of a new liquor liability option and additional coverage for flood and other water damage.

Antonen said cities can generally expect future dividends based on initial predictions, but cautioned members against relying on returns when planning for budget. While the trust will always work to keep losses and expenses down, he said, there are too many factors that potentially can cause increases in future losses. But because of the LMCIT, Minnesota cities know they will have coverage available at a stable, predictable cost.

The LMCIT was one of the first self-insurance pools for cities in the country. Cities have unique coverage needs that the private insurance industry doesn't address well. LMCIT's coverage is specifically designed for cities, and as new needs or problems develop, LMCIT modifies coverage or develops new coverage to meet those needs.

The LMCIT is a service of the League of Minnesota Cities, an organization of 815 cities across the state.

National Guard Top Gun event is January 12



Thief River Falls unit of the National Guard is sponsoring its third annual Top Gun competition for high school juniors and seniors on Monday, January 12, beginning at 6 p.m. in the armory in Thief River Falls.

There is no charge to participate in the event and a number of prizes and trophies will be awarded. Grand prize is a .22 caliber rifle.

Competitors will use air rifles and air pistols that the Army National Guard uses in preparation for its own marksmanship events. Local guardsmen will conduct the competition and be on hand to discuss the various equipment and training devices to be on display, including the Bradley Fighting Vehicle and the HUMMV.

Students under the age of 18 must present a signed parental consent form prior to participation. The forms are available at the armory or can be received by mail if requested by calling 218-681-0924.

Door prizes donated by various Thief River Falls business places will be presented during the evening and a pop and pizza party for all participants will follow the competition. Students are asked to register ahead of time to ensure enough pop and pizza will be available.

Crew chief of the B1B aircraft pictured above was one of the military duties of M/Sgt. Edwin H. Hanson Jr., son of Edwin H. Hanson Sr. and Mariana Hanson of Thief River Falls. Sgt. Hanson retired from the U.S. Air Force Jan. 1, 1998, after 22 years and 181 days of service.

Curtain barn completed last fall at the Walter Bros. dairy farm near Plummer provides housing, feed and water for about 160 dairy cows. Sunflower hulls are used for bedding and a total mixed ration is fed two or three times a day in the central feed bunk pictured above. A lagoon manure system was also installed. Ray and Roger Walter are increasing their dairy herd by 100 cows to a total of about 260 and plan to expand their milking parlor to 16 units.

At three weeks of age, heifer calves on the Walter farm are sent to the farm of former dairyman Jim Hagge at Brooks. He raises them to about 10 months of age, when they are transferred to the Don Konickson farm, just down the road from the Walters' place.

Konicksons Raise Heifers

The Konicksons sold their 80 cows and all young stock at an auction on Halloween in 1996. Two days later they started taking all of the tie stall equipment out of the barn and putting in pens. Today Don is raising about 160 heifers for half a dozen area dairymen and expects the number to reach 200 in a few weeks.

He takes in calves at about two months of age from Warren Malwitz of Red Lake Falls and Bob Schindler of Thief River Falls. Older calves come from Leonard Geske of Thief River Falls, Gary Bakken of Angus (formerly of Warroad), Tom Willett and Walter Bros. of Plummer. When Greg Zak of Angus runs out of room at his farm, his heifers also come to the Konickson farm.

"I take care of them just like they were my own," Konickson said. He raises hay on his farm and for the first time in many years also raises grain as a cash crop. He handles the breeding for the heifers in his care with the owners doing the sire selection. The owners will generally return the heifers to their herds about a month before calving to acclimate them prior to going into production.

All of the dairymen who have heifers at the Konickson farm use the same veterinary service, which adds to the uniformity of vaccinations and other herd health work.

"We're fortunate," Roger Walter said, "to have experienced dairy people in the area who can provide this type of service to us. I expect we will see more of this kind of sharing the load in the future."

Dahlen Herd Sold

Another dairy farmer who decided having more cows on the farm wasn't the direction he wanted to go is Kelly Dahlen of Goodridge. Last May the Dahlens leased their 30-cow herd to a Fosston producer on a lease-purchase arrangement. They later leased out 15 heifers to the same farmer and still have some young stock on the farm.

Kelly said that after 20 years during which dairy provided the main family income, he was finding expenses continuing to climb while income wasn't keeping pace. He said it took some time to make the decision to give up the cattle, but he hasn't missed them as much as he had thought he might.

Dahlen owns and operates a dozer and said it hasn't been difficult to get work off the farm. So far he has found it to be as profitable as his dairying was, and it gives him time to be involved in the school activities of his four children. His wife has also been working off the farm for the past year.

Hay Sales Profitable

Not having cattle frees more land for cash grain crops, Dahlen said, and at $90 a ton for alfalfa hay, he has found it just as profitable to send it down the road as run it through his cattle.

"I've always believed in the small family farm and the small towns," he said. "I don't think the trend for everything to get bigger is good for the country. It's my opinion that the federal government will regret squeezing out the small producers."

Questions The Market

While joining the trend to get bigger for survival, Roger Walter also has questions about the market, how it is controlled and how farmers can take a greater role in determining their own destiny.

"I've been to a number of meetings where the talk is about how important dairy farming is," he said. "And I can't help but wonder, if we're so valuable, why are they working so hard to get rid of us?"

Next: Some views of dairying from the processing end of the business.

The city of Red Lake Falls operates on a January 1 to January 1 budget. According to City Administrator Dan Johanneck the budget took a beating last January, February and March, but because of the mild weather in November and December, the city ended 1997 in fine shape.

The city of Red Lake Falls has a truck and payloader for plowing and removing snow and a tractor with blower that is used for blowing snow from the sidewalks. The Gazette

Pennington County Commissioners recently approved reorganization of the board. Serving as chairman this year will be Oliver "Skip" Swenson. Serving as vice-chairman will be Bob Carlson. The board met last Tuesday when this picture was taken: (from left, front row) Ken Olson, county auditor, Skip Swanson, Bob Carlson; (back row) Don Jenson, commissioner, Bud Comstock, commissioner Charles Naplin, commissioner, and Dave Olin, county attorney.

Welfare employees agree to contract

One day before a strike deadline, agreement was reached between Pennington County and Social Service employee members of the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, Minnesota Council 65, Local 3452.

Valane Heffner, union president, said a majority of union members voted to accept a three-year proposal ending 1999 from the county on January 7. It was a compromise on both ends, Heffner said.

The county board met on Tuesday and probably won't consider the recommendation to approve the agreement until its next meeting on Tuesday, January 20.

The intent to strike vote was taken by the local and strike authorization was granted December 9. Following a 10-day cooling off period the 25 union members were granted the right to strike. Their window of opportunity to strike would end January 8, one day after an agreement was reached.

The county social service employees were working under the 1996 contract. They had been negotiating with the county board since last January. Twenty-five employees are included in the union.

The main issue was salary. Heffner said employee union members agreed to a 2.7 percent increase in pay for the first year and more for the last two years.

Grandfather of snowmobiling is author of Breaking Trail

Affectionately known in the industry as the "grandfather of snowmobiling," Edgar Hetteen has written an autobiography which is scheduled for official release Wednesday, January 14, and is expected to be in book stores in about two weeks. Hetteen, who now lives in Grand Rapids, is acknowledged as the founder of Polaris Industries in Roseau and Arctic Cat, Inc. in Thief River Falls.

Jay Lemke of Mahtomedi, who did the "ghostwriting" for the 296-page book, has provided the following resume of its contents.

It's been 53 years since Edgar Hetteen wiped his hands on a greasy overcoat and set up a one-man fix-it shop in the dark corners of a car garage in Roseau, Minnesota—the only place he could afford. It's been 42 years since his tiny, struggling business, Polaris Industries, built a "motor toboggan" and 36 years since Hetteen said good-bye, only to begin another snowmobile company, Arctic Enterprises.

The rest is history. Polaris and Arctic have gone on to earn billions, and winter has taken on a whole new meaning for the world. All thanks to Hetteen and his snowmobile.

In his autobiography, Breaking Trail, Hetteen details how it all happened. He writes of his childhood, growing up in a farm family speaking Swedish, and then learning English in a one-room schoolhouse four miles from home. He tells of the hard, early days at Polaris, when money was as elusive as a rainbow.

"Times were tough," Hetteen writes. "When the end of the week rolled around, too often there wasn't enough money. I'd stare at what we had and sigh heavily, knowing what was to come. We would gather around the till, a little box. The money would be taken out and placed on a table. I'd scoop it up and pass it around, dividing it evenly among the employees. Sometimes it hardly fed the family."

And he writes of the day in 1955 when his partner and brother-in-law, David Johnson, built a snow machine while Edgar was away.

19-year-old buys Rex Cafe in Middle River

Nineteen-year-old BaLinda Burrell is the new owner of the Rex Cafe in Middle River as of January 1, 1998. She and friends spent the New Year holiday cleaning and painting the cafe. The daughter of Randy and Susan Burrell and a 1997 graduate of Marshall County Central, BaLinda already has five years of restaurant experience.

by Kathi Carlson
Northern Watch Reporter

While most 19-year-old girls were deciding what color to wear on New Year's eve, BaLinda Burrell was deciding what color she would paint the rest rooms of her newly acquired business.

As of January 1, BaLinda is the new proprietress of the Rex Cafe in Middle River.

A 1997 graduate of Marshall County Central, she is the daughter of Randy and Susan Burrell of Middle River and has an older sister, Beth, married to Scott Mooney and living in Hatton, ND.

For one so young, BaLinda has a considerable amount of experience in the restaurant business. She's worked at the Rex Cafe for five years.

It was about a year ago when the cafe's former owner, Gloria Barber, mentioned that she might be interested in selling the business, and it was around that time that BaLinda was participating in a classroom exercise that required the students to plan the next several years of their lives.

BaLinda had always planned to go to college to become a lawyer, but when she started figuring out what the education would cost and how long it would take, college and law became less appealing. Because she enjoyed the restaurant business, her mom encouraged her to study hotel and restaurant management.

BaLinda said that her decision to buy the cafe was "on the spur of the moment," and her choice was met with mixed responses from others.

"My dad didn't like it," she said. "He really wanted me to go to school." The previous owner's husband laughed when he heard of her plans, not taking her seriously because of her age. Even BaLinda wasn't completely sure at first. "I kept changing my mind, but I always went back to it."

Since she made the commitment, however, BaLinda said that her parents have been "very supportive." She's fairly certain that her dad will help her with repairs and that mom will help out, too, when business is really busy—like Goose Festival.

During her high school career, BaLinda participated in a variety of sports and activities until her senior year when she worked at the cafe in Newfolden after school four evenings a week and at the Rex in Middle River on the weekends. Tuesday was her only night off.

Living with her cat in the upstairs apartment in the building that houses her cafe, BaLinda will never be far from her business. She moved into the apartment in June and after that time performed many of the managerial duties — ordering, scheduling, etc.— that prepared her to take over the business.

She will employ about eight part-time employees. BaLinda plans to work from 6:30 a.m. to around 4 p.m. on weekdays and more on the weekends when it's more difficult to find help. She said she "will work as much as I need to — to make it go."

The cafe hours will be from 6:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 6:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Fridays, 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturdays and from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Sundays. When activities in town warrant it, closing time will be flexible and hours will be extended.

The establishment has been known as the Rex Cafe since 1927, and the name will remain the same. BaLinda says, "It would be a shame to change it after such a long time."

The menu includes the regular short order items and a daily special — a meat and potatoes meal or hotdish. On Fridays the cafe will offer a Mexican entree. While prices will remain the same, BaLinda plans to offer a "bigger burger" and possibly make some other menu changes as time goes by.

BaLinda bakes fresh buns every morning except Saturday and rolls "for the ladies at the bank" on Fridays. She and another employee share the other baking responsibilities which include pies, cookies and bars. The baked items are very popular, and BaLinda comments that it's difficult to keep up and that she would like to set up a regular schedule to assure that baked goods are always available. She recognizes, however, that it "will take time to iron some of these things out."

As with all small town cafes, "regulars" are the mainstay of the business and their patronage is much appreciated, especially during the slower winter months. During hunting season, business is brisk, and, of course, Goose Festival are very busy days. With trails nearby, snowmobilers fre-

Milk Processors seek to add value to product

Price volatility is a sign that the law of supply and demand is working

(This is the sixth in a series of Northern Watch stories on the loss of dairy farmers and a view toward the future of the dairy industry in northwest Minnesota.)

by Marvin Lundin
Northern Watch Editor

Processors who purchase milk from dairy producers face many of the same types of challenges as the producers themselves, according to several employees of Land O'Lakes, Inc., owner of the Bridgeman's fluid milk processing plant in Thief River Falls and a leading processor of many dairy products in numerous other locations.

And while processors in reality don't have a lot of discretion over what they pay for milk, they work hard to add value to the product before it reaches the retailers and consumers in order to maximize their investment in that purchase.

In earlier articles in this series a number of dairymen who have opted to sell their herds have complained that the price they received for milk did not keep pace with the prices they had to pay for costs of equipment, facilities and daily living. In several cases processors have been portrayed as working against the dairymen and intentionally keeping prices low. After all, why shouldn't a product as nutritional and necessary as milk be accorded a higher value?

Supply And Demand

According to processor representatives, market forces nationally and internationally as well as locally control price through demand for product, availability of supply and even political circumstances. This area, for example, could benefit from the proximity of the Winnipeg metropolitan area if protective Canadian tariffs were removed and a free market flow permitted.

In attempting to remain profitable in the dairy industry, processors along with producers must find ways to improve efficiency. In both areas this often involves achieving economies of "critical mass"—the volume of milk run through a parlor or a plant to spread the cost of expensive equipment over more units or hours—or updating with equipment which will do the job faster and/or with less human attention or physical labor.

Can't Control Price

Terry Nagle of the corporate communications department of Land O'Lakes in Minneapolis says that while the processor may have some flexibility in purchasing, it can't control price. If there is a price variation from the "going rate," it will usually be only pennies per hundredweight on either side. The reason is the intense competition

Insurance pool returns $12 million to cities

ed. The longer a city has participated and the more successful it has been at avoiding losses, the greater the city's dividend.

According to Antonen, the dividends are a result of several factors, the most significant being cities' efforts to control and reduce losses. Rates are set at a level so that premiums, plus investment income, will cover losses and expenses even if losses are more than projected. If losses are equal to or less than projected, that safety margin can be returned to members. Cities' success in reducing the number of employment-related liability claims is a big factor in making greater dividends possible. As insurance trust members, cities participate in loss control seminars, receive loss control information monthly, and are visited by loss control representatives to help them minimize risks and avoid problems that lead to claims.

The LMCIT board this month also approved a 15 percent reduction in workers' comp premium rates, and broadened the coverage under the property insurance program. Cities can take advantage of a new liquor liability option and additional coverage for flood and other water damage.

Antonen said cities can generally expect future dividends based on initial predictions, but cautioned members against relying on returns when planning for budget. While the trust will always work to keep losses and expenses down, he said, there are too many factors that potentially can cause increases in future losses. But because of the LMCIT, Minnesota cities know they will have coverage available at a stable, predictable cost.

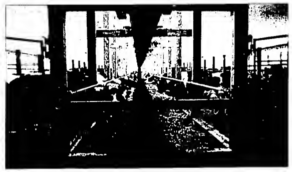
The LMCIT was one of the first self-insurance pools for cities in the country. Cities have unique coverage needs that the private insurance industry doesn't address well. LMCIT's coverage is specifically designed for cities, and as new needs or problems develop, LMCIT modifies coverage or develops new coverage to meet those needs.

The LMCIT is a service of the League of Minnesota Cities, an organization of 815 cities across the state.

National Guard Top Gun event is January 12

Thief River Falls unit of the National Guard is sponsoring its third annual Top Gun competition for high school juniors and seniors on Monday, January 12, beginning at 6 p.m. in the armory in Thief River Falls.

There is no charge to participate in the event and a number of prizes and trophies will be awarded. Grand prize is a .22 caliber rifle.



Competitors will use air rifles and air pistols that the Army National Guard uses in preparation for its own marksmanship events. Local guardsmen will conduct the competition and be on hand to discuss the various equipment and training devices to be on display, including the Bradley Fighting Vehicle and the HUMMV.

Students under the age of 18 must present a signed parental consent form prior to participation. The forms are available at the armory or can be received by mail if requested by calling 218-681-0924.

Door prizes donated by various Thief River Falls business places will be presented during the evening and a pop and pizza party for all participants will follow the competition. Students are asked to register ahead of time to ensure enough pop and pizza will be available.

Crew chief of the B1B aircraft pictured above was one of the military duties of M/Sgt. Edwin H. Henson Jr., son of Edwin H. Henson Sr. and Marlena Hanson of Thief River Falls. Sgt. Henson retired from the U.S. Air Force Jan. 1, 1998, after 22 years and 181 days of service.

Curtain barn completed last fall at the Walter Bros. dairy farm near Plummer provides housing, feed and water for about 160 dairy cows. Sunflower hulls are used for bedding and a total mixed ration is fed two or three times a day in the central feed bunk pictured above. A lagoon manure system was also installed. Ray and Roger Walter are increasing their dairy herd by 100 cows to a total of about 260 and plan to expand their milking parlor to 16 units.

At three weeks of age, heifer calves on the Walter farm are sent to the farm of former dairyman Jim Hagge at Brooks. He raises them to about 10 months of age, when they are transferred to the Don Kornecksor farm, just down the road from the Walters' place.

Kornecksons Raise Heifers

The Kornecksons sold their 80 cows and all young stock at an auction on Halloween in 1996. Two days later they started taking all of the tie stall equipment out of the barn and putting in pens. Today Don is raising about 160 heifers for half a dozen area dairymen and expects the number to reach 200 in a few weeks.

He takes in calves at about two months of age from Warren Malwitz of Red Lake Falls and Bob Schindler of Thief River Falls. Older calves come from Leonard Gecke of Thief River Falls, Gary Bakken of Angus (formerly of Warroad), Tom Willett and Walter Bros. of Plummer. When Greg Zak of Angus runs out of room at his farm, his heifers also come to the Kornecksor farm.

"I take care of them just like they were my own," Korneckson said. He raises hay on his farm and for the first time in many years also raises grain as a cash crop. He handles the breeding for the heifers in his care with the owners doing the sire selection. The owners will generally return the heifers to their herds about a month before calving to acclimate them prior to going into production.

All of the dairymen who have heifers at the Korneckson farm use the same veterinary service, which adds to the uniformity of vaccinations and other herd health work.

"We're fortunate," Roger Walter said, "to have experienced dairy people in the area who can provide this type of service to us. I expect we will see more of this kind of sharing the load in the future."

Dahlen Herd Sold

Another dairy farmer who decided having more cows on the farm wasn't the direction he wanted to go is Kelly Dahlen of Goodridge. Last May the Dahlens leased their 30-cow herd to a Fosston producer on a lease-purchase arrangement. They later leased out 15 heifers to the same farmer and still have some young stock on the farm.

Kelly said that after 20 years during which dairy provided the main family income, he was finding expenses continuing to climb while income wasn't keeping pace. He said it took some time to make the decision to give up the cattle, but he hasn't missed them as much as he had thought he might.

Dahlen owns and operates a dozer and said it hasn't been difficult to get work off the farm. So far he has found it to be as profitable as his dairying was, and it gives him time to be involved in the school activities of his four children. His wife has also been working off the farm for the past year.

Hay Sales Profitable

Not having cattle frees more land for cash grain crops, Dahlen said, and at $90 a ton for alfalfa hay, he has found it just as profitable to send it down the road as run it through his cattle.

"I've always believed in the small family farm and the small towns," he said. "I don't think the trend for everything to get bigger is good for the country. It's my opinion that the federal government will regret squeezing out the small producers."

Questions The Market

While joining the trend to get bigger for survival, Roger Walter also has questions about the market, how it is controlled and how farmers can take a greater role in determining their own destiny.

"I've been to a number of meetings where the talk is about how important dairy farming is," he said. "And I can't help but wonder, if we're so valuable, why are they working so hard to get rid of us?"

Next: Some views of dairying from the processing end of the business.

Welfare employees agree to contract

One day before a strike deadline, agreement was reached between Pennington County and Social Service employee members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, Minnesota Council 65, Local 3452.

Valarie Hellner, union president, said a majority of union members voted to accept a three-year proposal ending 1999 from the county on January 7. It was a compromise on both ends, Hellner said.

The county board met on Tuesday and probably won't consider the recommendation to approve the agreement until its next meeting on Tuesday, January 20.

The intent to strike vote was taken by the local and strike authorization was granted December 9. Following a 10 day cooling off period the 25 union members were granted the right to strike. Their window of opportunity to strike would end January 8, one day after an agreement was reached.

The county social service employees were working under the 1996 contract. They had been negotiating with the county board since last January. Twenty-five employees are included in the union.

The main issue was salary. Hellner said employee union members agreed to a 2.7 percent increase in pay for the first year and more for the last two years.

Grandfather of snowmobiling is author of Breaking Trail

Affectionately known in the industry as the "grandfather of snowmobiling," Edgar Hetteen has written an autobiography which is scheduled for official release Wednesday, January 14, and is expected to be in book stores in about two weeks. Hetteen, who now lives in Grand Rapids, is acknowledged as the founder of Polaris Industries in Roseau and Arctic Cat, Inc. in Thief River Falls.

Jay Lemke of Mahtomedi, who did the "ghostwriting" for the 296-page book, has provided the following resume of its contents:

It's been 53 years since Edgar Hetteen wiped his hands on a greasy overcoat and set up a one-man fix-it shop in the dark corners of a car garage in Roseau, Minnesota—the only place he could afford. It's been 42 years since his tiny, struggling business, Polaris Industries, built a "motor toboggan" and 36 years since Hetteen said good-bye, only to begin another snowmobile company, Arctic Enterprises.

The rest is history. Polaris and Arctic have gone on to earn billions and winter has taken on a whole new meaning for the world. All thanks to Hetteen and his snowmobile.

In his autobiography, Breaking Trail, Hetteen details how it all happened. He writes of his childhood, growing up in a farm family speaking Swedish, and then learning English in a one-room schoolhouse four miles from home. He tells of the hard, early days at Polaris, when money was as elusive as a rainbow.

"Times were tough," Hetteen writes. "When the end of the week rolled around, too often there wasn't enough money. I'd stare at what we had and sigh heavily, knowing what was to come. We would gather around the till, a little box. The money would be taken out and placed on a table. I'd count it up and pass it around, dividing it evenly among the employees. Sometimes it hardly fed the family."

And he writes of the day in 1955 when his partner and brother-in-law, David Johnson, built a snow machine while Edgar was away.

"Rudimentary snow machines had been around since the turn of the century, but you didn't give them

19-year-old buys Rex Cafe in Middle River

Nineteen-year-old BaLinda Burrell is the new owner of the Rex Cafe in Middle River as of January 1, 1998. She and friends spent the New Year holiday cleaning and painting the cafe. The daughter of Randy and Susan Burrell and a 1997 graduate of Marshall County Central, BaLinda already has five years of restaurant experience.

by Kathi Carlson
Northern Watch Reporter

While most 19-year-old girls were deciding what color to wear on New Year's eve, BaLinda Burrell was deciding what color she would paint the rest rooms of her newly acquired business.

As of January 1, BaLinda is the new proprietress of the Rex Cafe in Middle River.

A 1997 graduate of Marshall County Central, she is the daughter of Randy and Susan Burrell of Middle River and has an older sister, Beth, married to Scott Mooney and living in Hatton, ND.

For one so young, BaLinda has a considerable amount of experience in the restaurant business. She's worked at the Rex Cafe for five years.

It was about a year ago when the cafe's former owner, Gloria Barber, mentioned that she might be interested in selling the business, and it was around that time that BaLinda was participating in a classroom exercise that required the students to plan the next several years of their lives.

BaLinda had always planned to go to college to become a lawyer, but when she started figuring out what the education would cost and how long it would take, college and law became less appealing. Because she enjoyed the restaurant business, her mom encouraged her to study hotel and restaurant management.

BaLinda said that her decision to buy the cafe was "on the spur of the moment," and her choice was met with mixed responses from others.

"My dad didn't like it," she said. "He really wanted me to go to school." The previous owner's husband laughed when he heard of her plans, not taking her seriously because of her age. Even BaLinda wasn't completely sure at first. "I kept changing my mind, but I always went back to it."

Since she made the commitment, however, BaLinda said that her parents have been "very supportive." She's fairly certain that her dad will help her with repairs and that mom will help out, too, when business is really busy—like Goose Festival.

During her high school career, BaLinda participated in a variety of sports and activities until her senior year when she worked at the cafe in Newfolden after school four evenings a week and at the Rex in Middle River on the weekends. Tuesday was her only night off.

Living with her cat in the upstairs apartment in the building that houses her cafe, BaLinda will never be far from her business. She moved into the apartment in June and after that time performed many of the managerial duties — ordering, scheduling, etc. — that prepared her to take over the business.

She will employ about eight part-time employees. BaLinda plans to work from 6:30 a.m. to around 4 p.m. on weekdays and more on the weekends when it's more difficult to find help. She said she "will work as much as I need to — to make it go."

The cafe hours will be from 6:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 6:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Fridays, 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturdays and from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Sundays. When activities in town warrant it, closing time will be flexible and hours will be extended.

The establishment has been known as the Rex Cafe since 1927, and the name will remain the same. BaLinda says, "It would be a shame to change it after such a long time."

The menu includes the regular short order items and a daily special — a meat and potatoes meal or hotdish. On Fridays the cafe will offer a Mexican entree. While prices will remain the same, BaLinda plans to offer a "bigger burger" and possibly make some other menu changes as time goes by.

BaLinda bakes fresh buns every morning except Saturday and rolls "for the ladies at the bank" on Fridays. She and another employee share the other baking responsibilities which include pies, cookies and bars. The baked items are very popular and BaLinda comments that it's difficult to keep up and that she would like to set up a regular schedule to assure that baked goods are always available. She recognizes, however, that it "will take time to iron some of these things out."

As with all small town cafes, "regulars" are the mainstay of the business and their patronage is much appreciated especially during the slower winter months. During hunting season, business is brisk, and, of course, Goose Festival are a very busy days. With trails nearby, snowmobilers fre-

Milk Processors seek to add value to product

Price volatility is a sign that the law of supply and demand is working

(This is the sixth in a series of Northern Watch stories on the loss of dairy farmers and a view toward the future of the dairy industry in northwest Minnesota.)

by Marvin Lundin
Northern Watch Editor

Processors who purchase milk from dairy producers face many of the same types of challenges as the producers themselves, according to several employees of Land O'Lakes Inc., owner of the Bridgeman's fluid milk processing plant in Thief River Falls and a leading processor of many dairy products in numerous other locations.

And while processors in reality don't have a lot of discretion over what they pay for milk, they work hard to add value to the product before it reaches the retailers and consumers in order to maximize their investment in that purchase.

In earlier articles in this series a number of dairymen who have opted to sell their herds have complained that the price they received for milk did not keep pace with the prices they had to pay for costs of equipment, facilities and daily living. In several cases processors have been portrayed as working against the dairymen and intentionally keeping prices low. After all, why shouldn't a product as nutritional and necessary as milk be accorded a higher value?

Supply And Demand

According to processor representatives, market forces nationally and internationally as well as locally control price through demand for product, availability of supply and even political circumstances. This area, for example, could benefit from the proximity of the Winnipeg metropolitan area if protective Canadian tariffs were removed and a free market flow permitted.

In attempting to remain profitable in the dairy industry, processors along with producers must find ways to improve efficiency. In both areas this often involves achieving economies of "critical mass"—the volume of milk run through a parlor or a plant—to spread the cost of expensive equipment over more units or hours—or updating with equipment which will do the job faster and/or with less human attention or physical labor.

Can't Control Price

Terry Nagle of the corporate communications department of Land O'Lakes in Minneapolis says that while the processor may have some flexibility in purchasing, it can't control price. If there is a price variation from the going rate, it will usually be only pennies per hundredweight on either side. The reason is the intense competition

The Blenders return for concert at Lincoln H.S.

Under sponsorship of Lincoln high school choirs, The Blenders quartet will be making a return engagement at the Lincoln auditorium Saturday, January 17, at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets at $10 each are available in advance at Kezar Music and from Lincoln choir members. Admission at the door will be $12. The concert is a fund-raiser for the concert choir trip to New York City this spring.

Last year the group presented a re-scheduled concert here after the originally-scheduled concert was canceled due to the ice storm and power outage which struck the area.

"We feel the community and area are now more aware of who these guys are and how well they perform," noted Darcy Reese, vocal music instructor at Lincoln. "We hope more people will turn out for a really unique musical experience."

"Singing human voices are the most powerful and passionate instruments anywhere," states a background information sheet on the group. "These four funky young guys from Fargo, ND, prove again how potent and sophisticated that human instrument really is. With a vocal virtuosity that spans many music traditions, The Blenders create a genuine sound of their own."

Darren Rust, who sings bass in the group, explained its philosophy this way: "We've been influenced by just about every musical style around, from jazz and classical music to pop, rock, doo wop, hip hop and, of course, a cappella. music. As long as it packs an effect, we'll sing it and blend it to make music everyone can relate to. That's what The Blenders are all about."

Since they were in high school, Darren and Allan Rust, Ryan Lance and Tim Kasper have been using their voices to blend these varying musical influences into a style that has become uniquely their own.

Extensive touring has helped forge The Blenders musical style and has included guest appearances with Jay Leno, Howie Mandel and others. The group was consecutive winners in 1994 and 1995 of the Contemporary Artist of the Year award from the National Association of Campus Activities.

SOUPÇON
Sherry LaCoursiere

It certainly is one-dish meal weather. Here are a bunch of different casseroles and soups for you to try - start one this weekend. Next week I'll try to remember to give you some really good bread recipes to go with these dishes:

Here's a simple soup that is definitely a meal in itself:

POOR MAN'S SOUP
1 pound dried Great Northern beans
3 carrots, sliced
3 celery ribs, sliced
2 medium onions, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 bay leaves
1 (14 1/2 ounce) can tomatoes with liquid, cut up
1 teaspoon dried basil
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons olive oil

Place beans in Dutch oven and cover with water. Bring to a boil and cook for 2 minutes. Remove from heat, cover and let stand for 1 hour.

Drain and rinse beans and return to Dutch oven. Add 6 cups water, carrots, celery, onions, garlic, bay leaves, tomatoes, basil and pepper. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, and simmer, covered, for 1 1/2 hours or until beans are tender.

Discard bay leaves, add oil and heat through.

Here's a great casserole - and you use raw rice in it too, so it's easy:

WILD RICE CASSEROLE
4-5 cups diced cooked chicken
1 cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons butter
2 cans (10 3/4 ounces each) cream of mushroom soup
2 cups chicken broth
1 (4 1/2 ounce) jar sliced mushrooms, drained
1 small onion, chopped
1 cup uncooked wild rice, rinsed and drained
1/4 teaspoon poultry seasoning
3/4 cup chopped or pieces cashews
Fresh parsley

In skillet, brown chicken and celery in butter.

In large bowl, combine soup and broth until smooth. Add mushrooms, onion, rice, poultry seasoning and chicken mixture.

Pour into greased 9x13 inch baking dish, cover and bake 1 hour at 350 degrees. Uncover and bake 30 minutes more. Stir.

Sprinkle with cashews and return to oven for 15 minutes or until rice is tender. Garnish with parsley.

Use those tasty, crunchy canned onions that the family loves in this quick dish:

MONTEREY SPAGHETTI
4 ounces spaghetti, broken into 2 inch pieces
1 egg
1 (8 ounce) cup sour cream
1/4 cup grated parmesan
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
2 cups (8 ounces) shredded Monterey Jack cheese
1 (10 ounce) package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and drained
1 (2.8 ounce) can French-fried onions, divided

Cook spaghetti according to package.

Meantime, in medium bowl, beat egg. Add sour cream, parmesan and garlic powder. Drain spaghetti and add to egg mixture, along with Monterey Jack cheese, spinach and half of the onions.

Place in greased 2 quart baking dish, cover and bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees, until heated through.

Top with remaining onions and return to oven for 5 minutes or until onions are golden.

Here's one that will give you all your minerals and vitamins and taste good too - a good way to get the kids to eat their veggies:

VEGETABLE CASSEROLE
1 cup sliced turnips
1 cups sliced carrots
1 cup diced potatoes
1 cup frozen peas
1 cup diced parsnips
1 cup shredded cabbage
Salt and pepper to taste
1 (8 ounce) can cut green beans
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 (12 ounce) package fresh pork sausage links
1 (10 3/4 ounces) can cream of mushroom soup

In greased 9x13 inch glass baking dish, layer turnips, carrots, potatoes, peas, parsnips and cabbage, seasoning layers with salt and pepper.

Drain beans, reserving liquid. Place beans over cabbage and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Top with onion.

Brown sausage and drain. Place over onion.

Combine soup and bean liquid and pour over sausage. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Turn sausage over and bake, uncovered, 30 minutes more or until vegetables are tender.

What a wonderful dish to come home to after a hard day at work:

SLOW COOKER VEGETABLE SOUP
1 pound boneless round steak, cut into 1/2 inch cubes
1 (14 1/2 ounce) can diced tomatoes, undrained
3 cups water
2 medium potatoes, peeled and cubed
2 medium onions, diced
3 celery ribs, sliced
2 carrots, sliced
3 beef bouillon cubes
1/2 teaspoon basil
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 1/2 cups frozen mixed vegetables

Combine first 12 ingredients in slow cooker. Cover and cook on high for 6 hours.

Add vegetables, cover and cook on high 2 hours longer or until meat and vegetables are tender.

Yum - doesn't this sound like just the thing for that next cold day:

QUICK CORN CHOWDER
1 bacon strip, diced
1 medium onion, diced
1 (14 1/2 ounces) can chicken broth
2 cups water
2 large potatoes, peeled and diced
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 (15 ounce) can whole kernel corn, drained
1 cup milk (divided)
1/4 cup flour

In large saucepan, cook bacon until crisp. Drain on paper towels.

Saute onion in bacon drippings until tender. Add broth, water and potatoes and bring to a boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer for 15 minutes or until potatoes are tender.

Add salt and pepper, mixing well. Add corn and 3/4 cup of the milk.

Combine flour and remaining milk until smooth. Add to soup. Bring to a boil, cook and stir for 2 minutes. Garnish with bacon and parsley, if desired.

Racers compete in snowmobile races in region

Local and well-known snowmobile racers competed in a number of races last weekend.

In Walker at the Heartland Racing Association race, Chad Dyrdahl of Bagley finished first in the Pro 440 division, Jeremy Fyle of Nisswa second, and Lynn Kadlec of Cedar, third. All three were riding Arctic Cat 440 ZRs.

At the Can-Am Racing Circuit Portage La Prairie Ice Breaker, Bill Slominski of Valley City, ND, placed first in the Pro 440 division. David Stenlund of Red Rock, Ontario, who won the ISOC 500 last year placed second. Slominski also won the Pro Open. Jesse Strege of Lancaster, finished second in that division.

At the MRP Ice race in Sauk Center, there were a number of area racers competing. In the Pro Stock 440 division, the following results were recorded: 1) Greg Rugland, Menmonie, WI, Polaris, 2) Todd Wolff, Annandale, Ski-Doo; 3) Daniel Skallet, Eagen, Arctic; 4) Dale Lindbeck, White Bear Lake, Arctic; 5) Corey Davidson, Holt, Polaris.

About 200 people attended a wolf informational meeting at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls Monday. It was one of 12 meetings being held throughout the state to discuss what to do about the wolf population in anticipation of it being removed from the endangered species list in 1999. Many were in favor of reducing the numbers of wolves.

LETTERS

To The Editor:
Keep your dogs at home or Wolf 51 where are you?

There are two things that are required to make good neighbors. One is to have a good fence between the properties and the second is to keep your dog at home.

At a wolf meeting last Monday in Thief River Falls, story after story of hardships and close encounters with wolves was told to Minnesota DNR and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service personnel. The DNR wants to have the U.S.F.W.S. hand over jurisdiction for wolf management from federal to state.

One hardship loss was from a livestock breeder who recently lost a pregnant cow to wolves and was sent a check for $400 from the state as just compensation. The owner had insured the cow for $1,500 if it died from any means except for a wolf kill. The owner was required by the insurance company to collect from the state or federal agencies involved with protecting the wolf. If a neighbor's dog came on your property and killed 50 chickens, would you be satisfied with payment for only 10 chickens?

Recently a wolf that was fitted with a radio collar and which was known as "Number 51" was shot and killed by someone and a $25,000 reward is being offered. That dollar amount was set by the same people who set the value for a registered pregnant cow ($25,000 vs $400).

The experts at this wolf meeting (the DNR) gave a slide show presentation stating that there are over 2,000 wolves in Minnesota and that Alaska (five times bigger than Minnesota) has about 7,000 wolves.

In Montana last winter, hundreds of buffalo left Yellowstone National Park in search of food because the park was becoming overpopulated. The governor of Montana ordered the state DNR and ranchers to shoot any and all buffalo outside of the park .. and they did .. hundreds. Wolves were also introduced to Yellowstone and a district court federal judge has ruled that these wolves may also be removed when outside the park boundaries.

The DNR acknowledged the deer population is down significantly and these wolves must seek food elsewhere, i.e. livestock, poultry and pets. They also agreed that the wolf can adapt quickly to human environment such as towns (and garbage cans).

There is 14 million acres of public land in Minnesota. This is an adequate amount of acreage for wolves to live. There is no reason to accept wolves on private property. If wolves want to over-populate, then they must be brought back to managed levels by hunting and trapping. If these wolves are to be protected, then there also should be adequate compensation for the damages the wolves cause.

I guess if I would have to put it in a nutshell, these state and federal agencies which want to protect the wolves can keep their damn dogs in their yard or put up a fence to keep them in. Anything outside the boundary lines could end up like "Number 51."

Sincerely,
Dave Zavoral

Thanks to Stan Sjoberg we now have a new Channel 41 on our cable system. This is a God-send to those of us who are tired of the same biased liberal agenda.

I would extend an invitation to any and all who are interested in an unfiltered news program to tune in to Channel 41.

Tony Snow's Sunday Fox news is excellent also.

Timber Wolf Issue Begs For Compromises

Among many wildlife issues which polarize the public in either side of a question, the timber wolf (Eastern Gray Wolf) issue is one in which people are adamant about their stands on the far ends of the spectrum. For the most part, the viewpoint differs in proportion to the person's proximity to the animals.

The preservationist sees the timber wolf as a remaining proud symbol of wild freedom, an elusive, reclusive and magnificent animal with piercing and intelligent eyes, posing majestically against snow-covered evergreens, loping effortlessly across a frozen lake or piercing the night with howls that instinctively raise the hair on the back of the listener's neck.

The annihilator sees the same species as a skulking, cruel, opportunistic coward that preys on the defenseless, feeds before its prey is dead, wantonly kills more than it eats, poses a threat to domestic livestock, pets and even humans, and is most accurately pictured defiantly snarling through a gory muzzle while standing over a writhing fawn, sheep or calf.

To some extent at least, both views are accurate and the difficulty lies in convincing one group to recognize that the other's view is valid. It would be interesting to hear the comments from the metro area and southern Minnesota in comparison to the views expressed Monday at the meeting held at Northland Community and Technical College on a state wolf management plan. We suspect they would be substantially different. Those who talk the talk have a different viewpoint than those who walk the walk.

Until the gray wolf is delisted (isn't that an interesting corruption of the language?) from the Federal Endangered Species List, the controversy is purely academic. The federal government is officially in control of the wolf's fate and the private citizen—excepting those willing to risk the potential severe penalties under the law—has no influence in wolf management.

In this issue, at least so far, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources remains blameless. It has no control over the gray wolf situation in Minnesota—a situation which has seen the wolf population grow from an estimated 350 to 700 in the late 1960s to an estimated 2,000 to 2,200 now. The wolf's range has continued to expand west and south and now includes some 35,000 square miles. A breeding population presently exists within 60 miles of the Twin Cities metropolitan area, according to information presented at Monday's meeting.

In its formation of a roundtable to gather opinion and perhaps reach some acceptable consensus among widely divergent opinions, the DNR is on the right track. What it must now do is balance the membership of that group among interest areas so that compromise and planning can be realistic and acceptable. What it must avoid is the recent wetland study scenario where "agriculture" was one interest area and each environmental group had status as a separate entity rather than also a combined interest area. This arrangement stacked the deck and precluded any realistic opportunity for compromise.

Wolf management may in itself be a misnomer, for wolves are independent enough to manage themselves. Wolf control may be a better term, for it can apply to allowable population numbers statewide and location of that population within the state.

It is generally conceded that most support for a large wolf population will come from the metropolitan area where there are none. That could be rectified. Live-trapped wolves could be released in such original wolf range as Edina or Minnetonka or Wayzata or Shoreview. There is a good whitetail deer population in the metro area and an over-population of Canada geese that could use a little natural predation. Metro sports fans deprived of an outdoor baseball stadium and starved for entertainment may be satiated by the spectacle of a pack of wolves hamstringing a struggling pregnant doe in the median of I-94 or 35W and ripping out and devouring its unborn fawn.

Such possibilities, however, are impractical and merely wishful thinking. Any similar ideas would be immediately dismissed as foolish, as indeed they are. Therefore metro attitudes will not have a chance to be changed by such graphic reality up close and personal, and it will require persuasive testimony from those who experience the presence of wolves on a first hand basis to sway that opinion.

Few would argue with any sincerity that there is no place for wolves on the planet or even in parts of Minnesota. Many would argue that the place is not among domestic livestock or poultry. And more than a few—law or no law—will not tolerate such incursions on their property and will take whatever effective measures are necessary to assure that they do not recur.

We think that state department of natural resources personnel believe there are too many wolves in the state and we also think the department likely has a mercenary interest in them. Deer hunters in Minnesota pay hefty license fees to take one deer each and harvest 60,000 to 80,000 deer annually in a couple of weeks within the wolf range. Wolves provide no income to the department at all and—at an average of 15 to 18 deer each annually—deplete the saleable resource by 30,000 to 40,000 deer per year. Proposal of a wolf season with a substantial license fee and a lottery for selection of licensees is predictable.

Our view is that selective control of wolf populations in problem areas can most effectively be accomplished by trapping rather than hunting. Removing wolf populations entirely from agricultural areas of the state is not at all improper in our view, and should be a goal of any management plan.

Lacking such removal, the process for determination and payment of adequate claims for depredation losses must be vastly improved. In the total scheme of things, the dollar amount of such claims to the state is ridiculously small, but the potential for goodwill and fair play among victimized farmers is tremendously large. For that matter, such improvement should take place as soon as legislatively possible and not wait for delisting of the wolf from the Endangered Species List.

Compromise will be the key to formulating an acceptable wolf management plan for Minnesota. Much remains to be said on the question and we look forward to interesting times in the next couple of years as the details are assembled.

LETTERS

To The Editor:
Milk's the one for me!

This letter is in regard to the small dairy operations that are going out of business. I realize that times are tough for dairy farmers and every Monday there are more and more cattle being sold in Winger, Bagley and Long Prairie.

But as a dairy farmer's wife, I think that we all have to remember why we milk. We know we don't do it because of the hours—it's not 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., it's more like 5 a.m. to 9 p.m. The pay isn't every Friday at 11 a.m., it's when the cows "come in." And we're not out snowcatting on a warm winter day, we're letting the cows out so we can clean the barn.

The reasons that we are dairy farmers are that our parents were and their parents were, and we thought it was an O.K. way to be brought up and make a little honest hard-earned money.

I have noticed similarities in the small dairy farmers going out of business to the small grain farmers that were forced out of business 15 years ago. The difference is FHA or Land O Lakes. Do you want to run your farm or have someone tell you how?

It's hard to start an operation on your own, but you can. My husband was fortunate to be able to start his own 20-cow dairy at the age of 22 with no middleman. We have three children and both have full-time jobs out of the home.

What I want to say to the area dairy farmers is that big is not always better and if big is what you want, what do you think you start out with?

I guess the "view" now is for everyone to see a huge dairy operation, a thing of the present... the future. Well, if anyone wants to view a small dairy operation past, present and future ours has been in effect for four years and will still be in effect for the next 40 years to come. No increase! No decrease!

Sincerely,
Shelly Carlson

Singers donate funds to Greenhouse project

Money donated to the Sunrise Singers, Eighth Grade Girls Ensemble and Eighth Grade Boys Ensemble, following a Christmas Party performance for Norwest Bank, will be added to funds being collected to help keep a dream alive — Al Krause's Greenhouse.

The choir groups were invited to provide entertainment for Norwest Bank during its Christmas Part at the Elks this holiday season. Ms. Marcia Knuttila, director, explained that before they could respond, because they do want to perform when invited, she needed to check the students' busy schedules. After discussion, the students agreed they could perform during the party. The logistics of getting the sound system from Franklin to the Elk's, however, also posed another problem. That problem was solved when two parents volunteered to help. Donna Bosh with her "shaggin' wagon", mother of Tyler Bosh, a member of Sunrise Singers and Eighth Grade Boys Ensemble, and Officer James Fulton, father of Brent Fulton, another member of Sunrise Singers and the Eighth Grade Boys Ensemble, came to the rescue. The choirs gratefully accepted the offer of Officer Fulton, and politely thanked "Mother Bosh" and explained that they did not wish to abuse her "mobile wagon master" with so much equipment.

"I thought the best part of this experience was two-fold. First, I recognized the community's involvement to education. Second, the students, along with their very dedicated parents, were willing and committed to honor this very special invitation to perform," said Ms. Knuttila.

Next, a most wonderful surprise enhanced this positive experience. On Thursday, December 18, during Eighth Grade Chorus, Ms. Knuttila, known to her students as Ms. K, opened an envelope sent from Norwest Bank addressed to Ms. Knuttila and Sunrise Singers. Inside was a check in the amount of $150. "After we recovered from this exciting news," said Ms. Knuttila, "we called Norwest Bank immediately to thank them for their thoughtful generosity. I then learned that Carol Johnson, consumer banking manager, was responsible for this generous financial gesture."

"The best part of this performance experience," said Ms. Knuttila, "was that the students wanted to share this financial gift. They agreed that this generous donation should be given in memory of Mr. Alan Krause to help fund his greenhouse at Franklin Middle School."

"Yes, there is an old African proverb which states: 'It takes an entire village to educate a child.' But I think the reward and return on this community involvement and investment in the education process of your youth is so apparent in our Thief River Falls parents and their children. Our youth know the true value and understand the concept of sharing, caring and giving because they have learned it first hand from their supportive, dedicated, nurturing, loving parents," said Ms. Knuttila.

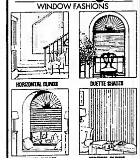
Advisory group proposes changes to planning law

Minnesota Planning and the Advisory Council on Community-Based Planning has released a draft of the council's 31 recommendations to the Minnesota Legislature.

Community-based planning is the new local planning framework set up by a 1997 state law. It brings together citizens and officials to plan for future challenges such as land use and population change. Some statewide goals for local planning address the long-term well-being of the state as a whole.

"Community-based planning is a big opportunity for Minnesotans to make good things happen for their communities," said Senator Steve Morse, co-chair of the advisory council. "The modest changes we are proposing reflect the comments we heard from more than 1,000 people at our public meetings across the state."

The 1997 law provided state money and technical help for creating local plans. Minnesota Planning will coordinate this assistance and will provide state review of local plans, through a project called Common Ground.



The law also created an 18-member advisory council to study possible improvements in the new framework. The council held 24 public meetings in 12 communities around the state in fall 1997 to gather comments and ideas.

In "Public Review Draft: Community Based Planning Recommendations," the council proposes:

• continuing its own role and adding members to represent local government and northern Minnesota;
• revising or clarifying some of the statewide goals for key areas such as conservation, economic development, transportation and housing;
• adding a new goal to address property rights;
• expanding the pilot projects to better test and refine the planning process and the state review of local plans;
• creating a resource center on local planning — coordinating training, materials and expertise from various sources.

"We want to ensure that community-based planning works well for all communities throughout the state," said Marcia Farinacci, deputy director of Minnesota Planning and advisory council member.

To read the report or learn more about community-based planning, view the Minnesota Planning web site at www.mnplan.state.mn.us, or call the Common Ground staff at 612-296-6550.

quent the cafe as do test drivers from Arctic Cat and Polaris.

While the cafe was closed on New Year's day, there was plenty of activity going on. BaLinda was busy preparing a can of paint for the men's rest room. Long-time friend, Kristie Larson, was painting the frame of a mirror, and another friend and co-worker, Sadie Veselka, was painting the ladies' rest room.

BaLinda laughingly commented that now that she and her friends were old enough to do what they wanted on New Year's Eve, they instead had rung in the New Year with her parents and then worked in the cafe until 4 a.m.

They enjoyed themselves, however. At one point during the evening they drove into Thief River Falls and enjoyed a pizza. Even the work sounded like fun as BaLinda and her cohorts chuckled as they told of how when they removed the ceiling tiles and painted them, they didn't mark or number them. They had quite a time figuring out where the tiles went when it came time to put them back up.

When asked if she had always been so level-headed and sensible, BaLinda's friends quickly nodded in assent. BaLinda simply said she had always had a "work first" attitude—a rare quality for someone her age.

Still, this attractive young woman did not appear to be the "all work and no play" dull type. BaLinda's smile is radiant, her wit quick and her sparkling eyes hold a hint of mischievousness.

Age aside — with her strong work ethic and positive and sensible attitude, she has what it takes to be successful at business. Good luck, BaLinda!

much thought. They were built in garages with parts from a junkyard. Some worked, some didn't, but none had any practical sale value. Why was David wasting his time like this? Our factory built farm equipment..."

Hetteen, who quickly came to love the snowmobile, tells of the struggle with a faction of his board of directors, who thought the machine to be a rope around the company's neck, and who urged Hetteen to stop such foolishness. In the book, he devotes a chapter to his harrowing 21-day adventure on three Sno-Travelers from Bethel, Alaska on the Bering Sea coast to Fairbanks, some 1,200 miles away.

"The idea began to hold a certain fascination for me," Hetteen writes. "The more I thought about it, the more my blood raced. What an adventure—to a place I loved, to try something that might help the sputtering snowmobile industry. If we really could make the trip, it would prove to the world that we were not some rag-tag company building a goofy machine. It could move us ahead by years."

It did, Hetteen estimates by a least five years. But he would not reap the benefits at Polaris. He'd had enough in-fighting, and several months later, after a number of odd jobs in Alaska, Hetteen opened up Arctic Enterprises in Thief River Falls, Minnesota. He did it in an old seed warehouse. Again, there would be struggles before success.

"With no discretionary money, all of it going into the business, my family moved into the seed building... We moved upstairs, where there were two rooms. I put up a divider and made them three, then added a stove in the smallest one. They were cramped quarters, but we lived between those concrete walls for 14 months. I was something we had to do for the business."

At Arctic, Hetteen would build the first U.S. snowmobile with an engine in front. While testing that machine on Ruth Glacier in Alaska, he was marooned for four days, nearly losing his life.

"By Thursday, we'd finished the corned beef hash," he writes. "Hungry and with little sleep, our brains grew punchy and our bodies felt like empty husks. My stomach flipped upside down, empty and tired. Moreover, the bright sun and its reflection off the snow was burning us up. The weather was what pilots call severe clear. Our faces turned red—it hurt miserably—and we knew it'd only get worse."

All in all, the book is about Hetteen's persistence in the face of overwhelming criticism as he built Polaris and Arctic Cat. It's about tinkering, designing and inventing. It's abut him making and losing more than $1 million several times. It's about him starting over at age 60, building a wheelchair company and then co-founding ASV, a firm constructing all-terrain, rubber-tracked work machines and now one of the hottest companies on the stock market.

"Success comes from many different places," Hetteen writes. "It comes from tenacity, it comes from perseverance, and believing in yourself. Those ingredients are shown in every person who has achieved his dreams. Even though I once took an aptitude test that told me I wasn't good at anything, I didn't believe it. I knew I was capable and didn't listen to anyone telling me different."

Mustangs beat East Grand Forks girls 46-39...

RLCC bench comes through

Strong play off the bench helped Red Lake County Central overcome foul trouble Tuesday as the Mustangs beat East Grand Forks 46-39 in a girls high school basketball game at Plummer.

Top Red Lake County Central scorer Angie Chervestad picked up two quick fouls and sat out much of the first half. Fouls also slowed Katie O'Neill. But Tricia Willett, Erika Vettleson and Tracy Rosten all stepped in to fill the void for the Mustangs, who were playing for the first time since Dec. 18 when they wrapped up a title-winning performance at the Northland Community and Technical College Invitational.

"I was really pleased with our bench," said Red Lake County Central coach Rick Korvisto. "We had some kids who stepped in and did a really nice job."

Defense paved the way as Red Lake County Central posted narrow quarter leads of 12-10, 23-20 and 32-26.

"We played really well on defense," noted Korvisto. "Offensively it was typical of being off for two weeks."

Chervestad, despite limited playing time, still managed to score a team-high 12 points. Katie Rasch of the Green Wave led all scorers with 17 points.

Red Lake County Central shot 38 percent from the field (14/37) and went 16 for 29 at the free throw line. East Grand Forks shot only 27 percent from the floor (13/48) and made 11 of 20 free throws. The Green Wave finished with a 29-28 rebound advantage. The Mustangs turned the ball over 21 times.

It was the sixth win in nine starts for the Mustangs.

Gators edge Warroad 51-50

Tiffany Hagen's free throw with three seconds left lifted the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River girls high school basketball past Warroad 51-50 Tuesday.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River trailed 15-13 at the end of the first quarter, went ahead 28-25 at halftime and had a 38-32 third quarter lead.

Down three with two minutes to play, Badger/Greenbush-Middle River battled back, wrestling the lead away from Warroad with a free throw by Hagen and a three-point play by Melissa Smith that made it 50-48. Warroad's Lisa Fry answered with a pair of free throws for a tie, and the Gators held the ball for a final shot.

Hagen took the ball to the basket on a drive and drew a foul with three seconds on the clock. She missed the first free throw throw, but hit the second for the win.

"That was a good win," said Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Tom Neihauer. "They (Warroad) have a good team. They've got a lot of good athletes, and they're big."

Hagen finished with 15 points, Stefanie Sparby had 14 and Smith had 12 for the Gators, who were playing for the first time since Dec. 18. Fry and Jessica Johnson had 16 points apiece for Warroad, while Heather Evans netted 11.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River shot 37 percent from the field (19/52) and 50 percent at the free throw line (11/22). Warroad, 6-for-12 at the free throw line, stayed closed by going 6-for-7 on 3-point attempts.

"Those 3-pointers were killing us," said Neihauer. "We'd take a lead, and they would hit the three. And it was their bigger kids who were hitting them."

Defensive efforts turned in by Hagen, Tina Sikorski and Merri Reese at the guard positions played a key role in the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River win, explained Neihauer. "Our guard play was the difference," he said. "They came up with some big steals that led to baskets."

Hagen and Smith combined for all 13 Badger/Greenbush-Middle River fourth quarter points as the Gators improved to 7-2.

Pioneers start 1-5 in nonconference basketball games

A 3-point shot by Gary Dawson of Minot State University-Bottineau with 30 seconds to go that was followed by a Northland Community and Technical College turnover produced a 68-64 men's basketball victory for the visiting Lumberjacks Tuesday.

It was the final nonconference tune-up for the Pioneers, who were returning from a 2 1/2-week holiday break. Northland took a 1-5 record into the opening weekend of the 1997-98 Minnesota Community College Conference schedule that included Northern Division games at Mesabi Friday night and at Vermilion Saturday afternoon.

"We lost a tough game, and those hurt," said Northland coach Ted Krize after the loss to Bottineau – the Pioneers' first game since Dec. 13. "But I was really happy with the way we played. If we play like that, we'll win some games this year."

Northland trailed 36-33 at halftime. They stayed close, though, and had a 64-63 lead before Dawson hit from long range. A time-out call to set up a final play went awry when the Pioneers lost the in-bounds pass. Two Bottineau free throws then wrapped it up.

"Offensively we were a little rusty," admitted Krize, "but we played a pretty decent defensive game."

Dwight Goodwin scored a game-high 21 points for the Pioneers.

Northland was 24-for-68 from the field (35 percent) and 13-for-20 at the free throw line. Bottineau went 24-for-63 from the floor (38 percent and 14-for-28 at the line. The Lumberjacks, who beat the Pioneers 86-65 at Bottineau Dec. 9, finished with a 49-46 rebound edge and topped the turnover charts 10-4.

Heading into the weekend games, Central Lakes and Mesabi were both 1-0 in the Northern Division, with Vermilion sitting at 1-1, while Hibbing and Rainy River were both 0-1. Fergus Falls and Northland were opening their MCCC schedule by swapping Friday-Saturday dates with the Ironmen and Norsemen. Overall, the start of the week showed Fergus Falls at 6-0, Vermilion 7-2, Central Lakes and Mesabi 6-4, Hibbing 3-5, Rainy River 2-6, and Northland 1-4.

TRF freshman boys split against Central

Nate Sorvig scored 24 points and Ben Myers had 15 as the Thief River Falls boys freshman A high school basketball team improved its record to 5-1 Tuesday with a 53-30 win over Grand Forks Central.

Thief River Falls B team fell to 0-3 with a 44-20 loss. Jay Rislov led the B team in scoring with 7 points.

Balance lifts NCTC by Bottineau 75-53

Balanced scoring was featured as the Northland Community and Technical College women's basketball team resumed play after a holiday break with a 75-53 Tuesday win over Minot State University-Bottineau.

The Pioneers' spread-the-wealth attack included Naomi Wilebski with 15 points, Jenny Johnson 13, Jamekka Lucas and Paula Hovda 12 each, and Darlene Nelson 11.

Up 37-30 at intermission, Northland opened the second half with a 15-2 run as they climbed above .500 for the first time this season at 4-3 heading into their 1997-98 Minnesota Community College Conference Northern Division-opening weekend that included a Friday night game at Mesabi and a Saturday afternoon contest at Vermilion.

"Coming off the long break, we were a little rusty in the first half," acknowledged Northland coach Rick Nikunen. "The second half we settled down and executed well."

Fifteen of the Pioneers' 17 turnovers came in the first half. They were 11-for-17 at the free throw line and finished with a 43-32 rebound edge.

It was the second Northland win in the home-and-home series this season, with the Pioneers winning 64-44 at Bottineau Dec. 9.

The visiting Lumberjacks, who had a quiet 2-for-6 free throw game, were led by Kelly Warren with 12 points.

Coming off the holiday break, Northern Division nonconference records included Fergus Falls at 3-1, Vermilion 4-4, Northland 3-3, Central Lakes and Mesabi 2-5, Itasca 1-4, Hibbing and Rainy River 0-6.

MCC boys post win over Grygla-Gatzke

A 19-point, 12-rebound performance by Jon Donarski sparked Marshall County Central past Grygla-Gatzke 76-60 Tuesday in boys high school basketball at Newfolden.

Donarski had plenty of offensive support from teammates Greg Ueland with 18 points, Caleb Holthusen with 15 and Matt Nelson 13 as the Nordics, coming off a runner-up finish in the Thief River Falls Russ Smith Northwest Holiday Classic, improved to 7-3. And they did it without starting guard Garrett Magner, who missed the game because of illness.

"One of our strengths is that we've got three kids who can play the No. 1 guard," explained Marshall County Central head coach Ron Ueland, "but Garrett is kind of the inspirational leader. We were a little concerned how the others would handle it without him in there."

It took the Nordics a few minutes to adjust as they fell behind 16-14 at the close of the first quarter before going ahead 32-29 at halftime, then opening up a 53-42 third quarter advantage.

"We shot free throws really well for a stretch," noted Ueland. "We just slowly built on the lead."

Alex Anderson scored 18 points, Andrew Sundberg 16 and Philip Brateng 13 for Grygla-Gatzke.

It was the fifth straight setback for the Eagles, who had lost a pair of overtime games, dropped a one-point decision and twice fell by three-point margins.

"We didn't play that bad a ball game," offered Grygla-Gatzke coach Vern Johnson. "They (Nordics) played really well. It seemed like every time we made a run at them, they answered."

Marshall County Central was 26-for-63 from the field (41 percent) and 16-for-23 at the free throw line. Grygla-Gatzke struggled with 21-for-61 shooting from the floor (34 percent) to go along with a 13-for-26 free throw night. The Nordies had a 45-33 rebound advantage to make up for a 14-8 high figure in the turnover department.

Josh Stinson of the Prowlers struggled in an effort to get out from underneath David Kurz of the Falcons during their 152-pound match in Thursday's Thief River Falls vs. Fertile-Beltrami high school wrestling meet. Stinson rallied for a 9-7 overtime win. The Falcons won the match 54-20.

TRF forfeits add up vs. Fertile-Beltrami

■ Falcons win wrestling dual

On the mat, the two teams split. But on the scoreboard, Fertile-Beltrami was an easy 54-20 winner over host Thief River Falls Thursday in a high school wrestling dual that was made lopsided by the shorthanded Prowlers' five open weights.

The Falcons did give six points back on a double-forfeit at 145 pounds, but that still made for a 24-point difference on the score sheet.

Thief River Falls coach John Belyea cringed at the thought of giving away that many points. "We should never have five open weights," he said. "We really have two, but we've got some injuries and illness that took some kids out of the line-up.

In the eight matches that did take place, Thief River Falls won the first four encounters with eighth graders Beau Abrahamson (103) Jon Swanson (135) and Philip Hermanson (140), plus senior Josh Stinson at 152 – to pull within 30-20 on the scoreboard.

But Fertile-Beltrami won the last four – all by pins – to pull away.

"First half of the match was going pretty well," acknowledged Belyea. "My younger kids are improving. But Fertile is tough in the upper weights. I was hoping to do a little better than we did, but I knew they would be tough."

Stinson's 9-7 overtime decision over David Kurz was the most entertaining match of the night. Stinson was ahead 6-5 after two periods, but needed to break away for an escape with 13 seconds left in regulation time to gain a 7-7 tie. Fifty seconds into overtime he ended the match with a takedown.

"That was a crowd-pleaser," noted Belyea. "If I could, I'd have one of those every night. Those are the kind of matches that bring the people back."

The loss dropped the Prowlers' record to 0-5.

Gators handle Nordics

Tiffany Hagen scored 16 points, while Missy Smith came up with a 14-point, 11-rebound performance to lead Badger/Greenbush-Middle River to a 57-29 Thursday night girls high school basketball win over Marshall County Central.

The Gators jumped out to a 14-4 first quarter lead and had a 33-10 halftime cushion. It was 43-21 through three quarters.

"We played a good first half," reported Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Tom Neibauer. "Defensively we shut them down, and we played a good floor game (3 first half turnovers). We took the press off and went to a zone in the second half."

The result put the Gators at 8-2 for the year and dropped the visiting Nordies to 1-8.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River was a busy 25-for-67 from the field (37 percent) and 7-for-12 at the free throw line, where Marshall County Central went 4-for-12. The Nordics were just 11-for-45 from the field (24 percent).

"They put a lot of pressure on us in the first half," noted Marshall County Central coach Alice Dahl, whose team has struggled with turnover problems much of the year.

The Nordics did not have a double figure scorer. Nine rebounds by Mandi Blawat was one of the top Marshall County Central efforts of the night.

RLCC rally falls short in loss to Mahnomen

Red Lake County Central chopped a 22-point third quarter deficit to an eight-point spread in the fourth quarter, but the Mustangs couldn't complete the comeback, losing a 61-48 boys high school basketball match-up at Oklee.

Mahnomen shot 61 percent from the field en route to a 34-18 halftime advantage and carried a 42-31 lead into the final quarter. The winners wound up with a 50 percent 21-for-42 shooting night from the field for the night.

"Mahnomen played really well," said Red Lake County Central coach Chris McLean. "They came out and shot the ball really well in the first half. I wasn't displeased with our defense; they were just hitting their shots. We got a lot of good shots, too, but the ball just wouldn't go in for us."

The Mustangs shot only 35 percent from the floor and had a quiet 2-for-4 night at the free throw line, where Mahnomen was 12-for-16.

Dan Pierce of Mahnomen and Mark Lorenson of Red Lake County Central shared game-high scoring honors with 19 points each.

It was the first outing since Dec. 19 for the Mustangs, who fell to 3-6.

Goodridge drops 56-54 decision to Kittson Co. North

Goodridge boys kicked off the 1998 portion of their 1997-98 high school basketball season the same way they played most of the early-season games – with a down-to-the-wire finish. This time the Huskies came out on the short end of a 56-54 Monday contest against Kittson County North.

Goodridge started strong, leading by as many as 14 points early. The Huskies were up 33-27 at halftime, but fell behind 41-39 in the third quarter. It stayed close down the stretch, with the Cougars' Jeremy Hostrup hitting a 14-footer with nine seconds left to put his team ahead 55-54.

The Huskies turned it over on the ensuing possession, and a Kittson County North free throw finished the scoring.

"We fell apart defensively in the second half," explained Goodridge coach Eric Mickelson. "And we turned the ball over too many times."

Effectively working the ball inside, Goodridge shot a head-turning 71 percent from the field to go along with 10-for-15 free throw shooting and a 25-17 rebound advantage. But 18 turnovers limited the Huskies to just 31 shots (they made 22).

Kittson County North percentages were much lower, but the Cougars had more attempts – 21-for-50 from the floor (42 percent) and 12-for-21 at the line. They turned it over 13 times.

Hostrup and Kris Hokanson scored 18 points each for the Cougars. The Huskies' Jim Scheef led all scorers with 22 points, while Ben Hanson had 19.

Scoring

From the Family of Betty Fitzgerald-Torfin

We would like to thank everyone for the many acts of kindness we received during this trying time. Perhaps you stopped by to visit, telephoned or sent a letter to Betty during her illness. Perhaps you brought over food, sent a lovely card, or sat quietly in a chair. Perhaps you sent flowers or a funeral spray. If so we saw it there. Perhaps you spoke the kindest words. As any friend could say. Perhaps you were not there at all, just thought of us that day. Whatever you did to comfort Betty or console our hearts, We thank you so much whatever the part.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO LES'S SANITATION CUSTOMERS

In 1997, the Minnesota Legislature eliminated the SCORE tax (6.5% tax on Municipal Solid Waste Service) and the solid waste generator assessment ($2.00 per household, 60 cents per cubic yard of capacity) and combined them into one solid waste management tax that begins January 1, 1998. This substitute tax pays for programs currently funded by the two different state fees. Both Senator LeRoy Stumpf and Representative Mike Finseth voted yes on this tax.

Under the new system: • Residential waste generators pay a 9.75% tax on the sales price for mixed municipal solid waste management services. • Commercial waste generators pay a 17% tax on the sales price for waste management services.

For questions related to programs funded by the new Minnesota solid waste management tax, call the Minnesota Office of Environmental Assistance (OEA) at 612-215-0206 or 800-657-3843.

Second period goals carry Pirates by TRF

Three second period goals earned Crookston past visiting Thief River Falls 4-2 Thursday in high school hockey.

An Eric Rouland goal with just 16 seconds left in the first period pulled Thief River Falls into a 1-1 tie after Crookston's Andy Fee had opened the scoring, but the Pirates scored in the first and final minute of the second period to take charge of the scoreboard.

Ryan Kleven scored just 45 seconds into the second period, Chris Myrold found the net at 5:14 and Joe Corbin made it a three-goal margin at 14:29.

The Prowlers' Treavor Peterson scored the only goal of the third period.

"We played well in the first and third periods, but we didn't show up for the second period," said Thief River Falls coach Scott Bergland. "We didn't do the things we needed to do to win the hockey game."

Thief River Falls goalie Mike Dowers stopped 22 shots, with half of those saves coming in the second period. Although Crookston netminder Joe Reese had a 33-save night, the Prowlers still had trouble putting their shots on net, pointed out Bergland.

The loss dropped the Prowlers to 2-10. They will host Warroad Tuesday.

Scoring

O'Neill leads RLCC to win over Eagles

Katie O'Neill scored 23 points and had 8 steals Thursday to lead Red Lake County Central to a 62-42 girls high school basketball win over East Grand Forks Sacred Heart.

Jenni Morinville scored all 14 of her points in the first half in helping put the visiting Mustangs up 34-21 at intermission.

The two teams played to a 14-14 first quarter tie, but a 10-0 Red Lake County Central run midway through the second quarter broke it open. The Mustangs led 47-29 at the end of the third quarter.

Red Lake County Central center Angie Chervestad, a 6-0 senior, had a single-digit scoring game for the first time since her sophomore season, but she complemented her 9 points with 10 rebounds as the Mustangs beat the Eagles on the boards 33-18.

The winners were 27-for-65 from the field (42 percent) and 7-for-12 at the free throw line. Sacred Heart struggled with 14-for-47 shooting from the field (30 percent), but did have a perfect 10-for-10 game at the line. They also had more turnovers, 27-21.

Red Lake County Central is 7-3.

Alternative crop workshops set in area towns

To provide guidelines for some of the alternative crops being considered for 1998 production, a series of workshops has been scheduled throughout the six-county area of the Northern Lites Extension Cluster.

Discussed at the workshops will be canola, field peas, hulless oats, buckwheat and sunflowers with a review of soybeans also planned. Crop contracts will also be discussed.

Workshop schedule is as follows:

Tuesday, January 13, 9:30 a.m., Goodridge Senior Citizen's Center and 1:30 p.m., Plummer Senior Citizens Center.

Wednesday, January 14, 9:30 a.m., Kittson county courthouse in Hallock and 1:30 p.m., Newfolden Community Center.

Thursday, January 15, 9:30 a.m., Badger Community Center and 1:30 p.m., Williams Senior Citizen's Center.

Area crop producers are seeking economic answers to declining small grain yields and prices by turning to alternative crops. The workshops are being presented by extension educators Hans Kandel of Red Lake county, Curtis Nyegaard of Kittson county and Ray Thompson of Marshall county.

All programs are open to the public and free of charge. Producers are encouraged to attend the workshop session most convenient for them.

Used Cars for as Low as $5!

TWO DAYS ONLY!!

Friday-Saturday, January 16-17, 1998

Hallock, MN - C & M Ford Sales on Highway 75 North is at it again! They will attempt to reduce their used car inventory by 50% in two days.

This ultimate used vehicle event will take place Friday and Saturday, Jan. 16-17, 10:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

Owner Paul Blomquist explained that since it's been six months since the last sale, C & M Ford's used vehicle inventory has increased to levels beyond their capacity. "It's time to bring back our ultimate used vehicle event and reduce our supply of used cars so that we can continue to bring in fresh trades," explained Mr. Blomquist.

For two days, Friday and Saturday, C & M Ford will offer their entire inventory of used vehicles at substantial price reductions. "I have been told to reduce a vehicle to $15, $10, even $5! We have many quality cars and trucks in the $3,000 to $12,000 range too. We will be reducing those vehicles dramatically," explained Brad Hemmes, used car manager.

"This innovative approach to liquidating used vehicles should make it easy and quick for anybody to get a great car at a low price without any hassle," Brad Hemmes pointed out.

"We have three different banks and lending companies available just for this event, all with commitments for some exceptional interest rates. We can also be very flexible on terms and approvals."

C & M Ford will display half the vehicles beginning at 10:00 a.m. Friday, Jan. 16, to give people the chance to look them over. At 11:00 a.m., the marked down sale price will be placed on the window of each vehicle. Whoever is sitting in the vehicle at 11:00 a.m. will have the first chance to buy the car at the price posted. If they do not wish to buy the vehicle at that price, they can simply walk away and the car is available to the public at that price.

We will repeat this on Saturday, Jan. 17th, starting at 10:00 a.m.

TWO DAYS ONLY
It will be held at C & M FORD
Highway 75 North, Hallock, Minnesota

Milk processors seek to add value to product

Price volatility is a sign that the law of supply and demand is working

among processors for a share of the market.

"If you pay a substantial premium you won't be in business very long," he said. "Your customers will soon find a cheaper source of supply and your ability to sell your products will be gone. And if you can't sell, you can't buy."

Nagle said that there definitely is an acceleration in the trend toward growth in herd size. He said this is partially the result of phasing out of dairy price supports which the federal government paid to dairy producers from the 1930s into the 1980s. Without the artificial supports, the market is very heavily controlled by supply and demand.

Little Fluid Milk Used

In the Midwestern states, only about 15 percent of the milk produced goes into fluid milk which is available in its various forms in the stores. The remaining 85 percent is used for production of cheese, butter, yogurt, ice cream and a myriad of other products. On the East and West Coasts, however, up to 60 percent of the farmers' production is used as fluid milk.

Dennis Tollefson, a sales leader for the Northwest Region of Land O'Lakes in Grand Forks, ND, said this area is fortunate to have the Bridgeman's fluid milk processing plant and the Land O Lakes regional distribution center located here. The plant provides a nearby market for dairymen and employment for people in the community.

Poised For Growth

The plant is strategically poised for growth, Tollefson said, in the event that trade laws change and the Canadian market becomes available. He added that the plant has an adequate supply of milk to meet its processing needs, but is not at operating capacity—with "capacity" defined as operating continuously 24 hours a day, seven days a seek.

Land O Lakes has invested heavily in the local plant in recent years to enlarge its capacity and increase its efficiency.

The distribution center on Highway 32 south is only a few years old and handles shipment of Land O'Lakes products by semi-trailer load throughout northern Minnesota, eastern North Dakota and part of northeastern South Dakota. It is a modern, up-to-date facility which is a community asset.

Milk Leaves Midwest

John Loken, manager of dairy planning for Land O'Lakes in Minneapolis, points out that not only is just a small percentage of milk produced in Minnesota processed for fluid milk, only 15 per cent of the total dairy products processed here are consumed here. The remainder must find a market outside the state.

Loken, who has spent a career learning what he tried to summarize for this article in a few minutes, said that the 1990's have shown a substantial reduction in margin between what the cooperative pays for raw milk and what it is able to sell in processed products. He said prices the cooperative pays are tied very closely to the established commodities market, and the fact that there is volatility in price is a good indicator that the market responds to supply and demand factors.

Price Reflects Value

Price paid by Land O'Lakes to its member producers reflects the current value and the need to remain competitive, Loken said. In this area, price paid for milk that comes to Thief River Falls for fluid packaging or goes to Perham for processing into cheese is about the same.

Milk going to Perham for cheese production carries more value on butterfat and protein, which are the building blocks of cheese. Milk coming to Thief River Falls for fluid use carries most of its value simply on a liquid hundredweight basis. The intent, Loken said, is to send an appropriate economic signal to producers so they can maximize the production of their farm in the marketplace.

Loken and several others interviewed over the past several weeks pointed out that prices paid to dairy farmers in the Midwest for their milk are significantly higher than paid to dairymen in the West—including California, Idaho, New Mexico, Arizona and part of Texas—often by a dollar or more a hundredweight. At least partially for that reason, dairy products from the west are priced lower and making their way into Midwest markets. The thought of Wisconsin importing cheese from California seems ridiculous on the surface, but it is more than thought—it is fact.

Hauling Subsidized Here

Midwest dairymen also have traditionally received a milk hauling subsidy from the processor—a condition which does not exist on either coast. Subsidized hauling was initiated in the 1960s as a perk from processors to attract producers as suppliers, Loken said, and has hung around as an expected practice. The processor pays for the hauling and makes a charge to the producer for a portion of the cost.

The basic formula price (BFP) for milk is established monthly, Loken said. The BFP for milk in December of 1997, for instance, was announced January 5, 1998. It was established by taking the actual price that milk buyers paid for Grade B milk in November, adjusted by the change in milk powder, butter and cheese prices that occurred in December. This formula yielded the representative value of milk made into processed products. To that price was added a differential of $1.20 per hundredweight paid by the bottler for Class I (Grade A) fluid milk.

Milk Payment

Milk in the Upper Midwest is purchased on the basis of its components. In this system, four values are recognized. The first three are milk components—butterfat, protein and other solids. The fourth value is Producer Price Differential, which represents every producer's share of differential paid by bottlers for milk going to fluid consumption.

Each month, milk buyers set a price for each pound of each component and a hundredweight value of the Producer Price Differential. As an incentive to produce quality milk, many buyers offer premiums for milk of low bacteria and somatic cell count and make a deduction for very high counts.

"We don't have a lot of discretion over what we can pay for milk," Loken said. "We have a fairly limited ability to enhance revenue, although we do attempt to use our attention to and reputation for quality and consumer confidence in our brand name as a price lever."

Loken said that the fluid milk market, and to some extent the cheese market, are fairly inelastic in that the demand remains reasonably constant. People don't drink more or less milk or use more or less cheese because of modest price fluctuations. A one percent change in supply or demand will usually trigger a four to five percent change in price, he added.

Two Issues Drive Change

Two issues are driving change in the dairy industry today, Loken believes. One is economic and the other is lifestyle.

In the economic area, the western states are increasingly setting the cheese market because they have been able to produce it at a lower cost than the Midwest. Although Midwest dairymen have the highest fixed costs in the nation because of the colder climate, they have the opportunity to become the lowest overall cost production area in the nation because of lower land costs and the lowest feed costs. Increasing herd size is one means of reducing unit cost and effecting time and labor economies.

Lifestyle Issue

Regarding the lifestyle issue, fewer people—and especially the younger generation—are willing to make the time commitment to a single family dairy operation which requires constant attention every day of the year. Producers in their mid-50's are wearing out physically as well as psychologically and choosing to get out of the business if they can't find a means to reduce the physical demands.

The means usually considered is a larger herd to support investment in labor-saving facilities and equipment and provide enough income for two or more families so they can alternate time off. If there is no younger person interested in continuing to the dairy—either a family member or other young partner—or there is no interest in expansion of cow numbers or "investing human capital," viable options are few.

Loken said Minnesota is at the crossroads and in danger of losing its dairy infrastructure including processing plants, veterinarians, equipment dealers who provide service, feed and nutrition suppliers and others. With the loss of this infrastructure would go the economic activity that it produces and the loss would be felt in communities throughout the state.

As the number of dairy farms in Minnesota has declined over the years, a part of this infrastructure has already been lost. There is opportunity to revive and revitalize it, however, and recovery may indeed come. The next two articles will emphasize optimism for growth.

The curtain barn at Amundson's Excel Dairy will house 1,100 head of cattle to be milked three times a day

Amundson's Excel Dairy is still a family farm

1,100 cow operation north of Thief River Falls will hold an open house in June

(This is the seventh in a series of Northern Watch stories on the loss of dairy farmers and a view toward the future of the dairy industry in northwest Minnesota.)

by Marvin Lundin
Northern Watch Editor

"We're still a family dairy farm," Larry and Rhonda Amundson say about their new and expanded 1,100 cow Excel Dairy several miles north of Thief River Falls in Excel township of Marshall county. "The only difference is that we help support 16 families instead of one."

The Amundsons are among dairy families who have opted for expansion to gain efficiencies of scale and remain in a business they enjoy. With milk prices not expected to increase materially in the forseeable future, growth in herd numbers and reduction of costs per cow are seen as one way to remain profitable.

New And Expanded

Excel Dairy is both new and expanded since Larry and Rhonda have been dairying for several years but the present facilities were newly constructed a short distance from their former operation. The families supported by the dairy include their own and those of their employees.

For the Amundsons, the decision to make one huge step instead of a couple of large but smaller ones keyed on the confidence in their own experience and abilities, discussions with a number of consultants, the belief that they are at a point in life (read that young enough) when they can take the risk, and an optimism that there will always be a need for milk and someone to supply it.

"It's scary," Rhonda admits, referring to the magnitude of debt incurred to finance the expansion. They worked out personal financing through Farm Credit Association and the Small Business Administration with a comparatively small amount of short-term gap financing through Land O Lakes Inc. Cost of building such new dairying facilities currently is about $3,300 per cow.

Expansion Was Planned

Expansion had been in the Amundsons' minds for some time. They recognized their approximately 175 to 200-cow herd was an "in between" size—too large for them to handle without hiring help but too small to support the variety of help that would be needed. The initial plan was to double the herd to about 350 at the existing facility, then in five years to double again to a 700-cow herd.

In discussing and analyzing their own operation and facilities versus one designed and built for large cattle numbers, they found costs of additions and conversions were not practical. Their feed handling situation wasn't what it needed to be, involving four facilities and too much time. The milking equipment would have to be expanded and upgraded at substantial cost.

In the final analysis, when it was determined that financing could be arranged for an all new operation, the best option appeared to be taking the big step at one time to the 1,100-cow dairy.

874 Cows Being Milked

First cows went into the new barn August 12, 1997 and the herd has rapidly expanded. As this article is being written there are 874 cows being milked with another 150 springing heifers or dry cows at the dairy or at the home farm. The herd consists of approximately 70 percent first-calf heifers and 30 percent mature cows with many of the latter coming from the Amundsons' prior herd.

Larry and Rhonda purchased 250 springing heifers each from two producers of large numbers of heifers. "I looked over about 500 at each place to pick out 250," Larry said. At its normal capacity, the herd will have about 950 cows milking.

Culling has been heavy with the expectation that 30 to 35 percent of the herd will be culled in the first year. Production of the milking herd is up to an average of 67.5 pounds per day with a 70-pound average anticipated in the near future.

Efficiencies Experienced

Some of the efficiencies of a larger herd and facilities designed for large cow numbers have been experienced early on and work is

Jim Rystad's blood donations total five gallons

Red Lake Falls - Jim Rystad, an investigator at the Red Lake County Sheriff's Department, was presented with a five gallon bucket and certificate recently by United Blood Services.

While Rystad figures he has donated about seven and one-half gallons since he started donating in 1966 when he was in the Navy, United Blood Services records show that he donated his 41st pint last week.

He started donating blood to United Blood Services in 1977 when he moved to Red Lake Falls and said he has gone to every blood drive "with maybe a few exceptions when I had a cold." The Gazette

East Grand Forks gets over $900,000

East Grand Forks - State Representative Tim Finseth and State Senator LeRoy Stumpf presented Mayor Lynn Stauss with a check for over $900,000 recently.

The money came from the Border City Legislation which helps communities on the state borders. East Grand Forks received more than $900,000 of the $1.2 million that was available.

Most of the money will be going into tax credits to help East Grand Forks businesses compete with Grand Forks businesses. The Exponent

Buffalo roam near Winger

Winger - Verdell and Faye Olson, owners of Sandhill River Bison Ranch west of Winger, were looking for "something that the weather and the government weren't involved with" when they decided to raise bison.

Bison fare well in any type of weather, and the government doesn't control the price of the meat which is high in protein and low in fat.

Clearbrook - While reassembling an old rug loom, the family of Andrew and Annie Anderson reminisced. The homemade loom was built over 65 years ago by the late Annie Anderson and Mary Rhen, both residents of the Leonard community. Children and grandchildren helped with tearing and sewing the rags used to make the special rugs, and the loom has been used to make hundreds of rugs.

The family enjoyed a pleasant afternoon recently when they donated the reassembled loom to the Clearwater Senior Citizen's Center. The Leader-Record

175 register for Governor's Ride

Registrations for the Governor's Snowmobile Ride in Thief River Falls are still being accepted. To date about 175 people have registered for the event. Between now and February 13, registration costs $15.

The annual event recognizes the economic impact snowmobiles hasve on the economy of Minnesota communities. It also gives individuals an opportunity to meet with the Governor or staff traveling with the Governor.

Three to four different rides are being planned. Each guided ride varies in distance, but each will travel at relatively slow speeds to accommodate all levels and ages of riders participating in the event. There will be people following snowmobilers to make sure no one becomes lost or if and when they have engine problems, the problems can be fixed or addressed.

The event utilizes the talent and dedication of many volunteers, including several area snowmobile clubs, such as the SnoDrifters, Goodridge Trailblazers, Fourtown Sportsman Club and local officials from Pennington and Marshall counties, Thief River Falls Police department, and Minnesota Department of Natural Resources. In all, there will be about 40 guides.

The Governor's ride begins Friday morning and starts from the Best Western. Participants will leave in flights of 20 to 25 each with a guide. A bonfire will be held in the Elm Lake area to allow riders to warm up. After leaving the bon fire they will travel to Grygla where the Grygla Fourtown Sportsman Club will sponsor a lunch. After leaving Grygla, the Goodridge Trailblazers snowmobile club will host a coffee stop in Goodridge.

Julie Olson, Thief River Falls Convention and Visitor's Bureau representative, said organizers are really looking forward to the event. Thief River Falls was selected to host the event based on their bid for the event. She said the bidding process is becoming increasingly competitive because communities are recognizing the economic impact of this event. Because of snowmobiling's importance to the economy of Thief River Falls, Thief River Falls had bid on the event twice in the last two years.

Olson said last year's event in International Falls had 400 registered riders. At this point nearly all of the motels in Thief River Falls are booked full. She expects that all area motels will be booked full. It's amazing, she said, how much snowmobilers contribute to an economy when they visit a community. With 400 in attendance, the economic impact this has to a host community is well over $100,000.

The 1996 Minnesota Snowmobiling Safety Task Force reported that snowmobiling generates one

Task force to develop recovery plan for Red Lake walleye fishery

Recognizing that effective management requires a coordinated effort, preliminary talks between the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources and the tribal council of the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians have resulted in the forming of an interagency task force to develop a long term Red Lake walleye population recovery plan.

A joint statement on the task force formation was issued this week by Bob Strand with the DNR division of fisheries in Bemidji and Dave Conner of the Red Lake Band's department of natural resources.

Status of the Red Lake walleye population resulted in the Red Lake Fisheries Association closing reservation waters to commercial fishing for the 1997 season.

Because the reservation boundary line bisects Upper Red Lake, resource management authority is divided between the two jurisdictions, which are both aware that actions taken on either side of the boundary will likely affect the entire Red Lake fish population.

Initial task force meeting was held November 18 and included representatives from the Minnesota DNR, Red Lake DNR, Red Lake Fisheries Association, U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the University of Minnesota. Discussion involved the historical and current status of fish stocks, sharing of data, coordination of monitoring efforts, potential future harvest restrictions, potential enhancement efforts and alternative gear that would allow for harvest of other species while protecting walleye.

While the 1997 commercial fishing closure is considered an important first step toward walleye stock recovery, it is understood that there are no short-term solutions. There is

This team from Marshall County Central High School in Newfolden placed first in Minnesota's Cyber Knowledge competition recently. The event, provided by Minnesota Service Cooperatives, has been held for three years. This is the second year that a team from MCC participated and the second year Marshall County Central won the competition. Team members were (front, left) Eric Moose, Adam Lokstad and Andy Filer and (back, left) Troy Elseth, Ben Rokke and Chad Donarski.

MCC team wins second state Cyber Knowledge competition

by Kathi Carlson
Northern Watch Reporter

Strategy, teamwork and the application of the appropriate technology tools were the elements implemented by successful teams in the recent state-wide Cyber Knowledge competition.

Six young men from Marshall County Central in Newfolden not only participated in the high-tech contest, but won it. And, it wasn't the first time. MCC won the competition last year also.

Team members included Eric Moose, son of David and Marlys Moose; David Lokstad, son of David and Judy Lokstad; Andy Filer, son of Dennis and Deb Filer; Troy Elseth, son of Deland and Joy Elseth; Ben Rokke, son of Phil and Marlene Rokke, and Chad Donarski, son of Gary and Dawn Donarski.

Eric, Adam, Troy and Ben are seniors. Andy is a junior, and Chad is a sophomore. Eric, Andy, Troy and Ben were also members of last year's winning team.

The all-male team was advised by Mark Jorgenson, math teacher and computer coordinator at Marshall County Central.

According to Jorgenson the Cyber Knowledge competition is provided by Lakes Country Service Cooperative in Fergus Falls, one of six cooperatives in the state that provide various services to schools, cities, counties and other governmental agencies.

About 30 schools — large and small — in Minnesota participated this year. "Because there is a fee involved, not as many schools participated as they would have liked," Jorgenson commented.

The purpose of the program is to teach students the skills they need to communicate, search for, and transfer information on the internet. It can be used to promote teamwork and lifelong learning and provide the tools that workers will need in the 21st century.

The Cyber Knowledge competition was based on Knowledge Bowl format, and while the procedure was simple, the questions and tasks varied in difficulty.

The competition began at noon on Monday, December 8 and ended at noon on Friday, December 12. Questions or tasks — one at a time — appeared at the Cyber Knowledge web site. Team members searched the internet for the answers. When the first part of the question was answered, the second part or following question or task appeared.

A sample question — "At a school near a town called Gowrie in a state that grows lots of corn there is a student there whose last name means ruler. What is her first name?"

The team's first step would be to find a state in the cornbelt that includes a town called Gowrie. Next, they would have to locate the school near Gowrie and determine from its roster the first name of the female whose last name means ruler. Is that ruler as in "a person who rules or governs" or "instrument used to draw a straight line or measure?" — the team would have

Kiwanis to honor police officers for life-saving efforts

To recognize three Thief River Falls police officers for their heroic efforts in preventing loss of life in a fire, the morning Kiwanis club will sponsor an honors buffet Tuesday, February 3, at 6:30 p.m. at the Best Western Inn.

Officers Teresa Mattison, Tim Miller and Brent Monroe will be guests of honor at the buffet and presented with recognition plaques from the host club. They risked their own lives to awaken and evacuate residents of 12 apartments on the second floor when fire destroyed the Dobner-Meehan building in downtown Thief River Falls September 21, 1997.

Public attendance is invited. Cost of the roast beef and chicken buffet will be $10 per person and may be paid at the Best Western February 3.

New Karlstad Healthcare Center administrator

Karlstad - Originally from Thief River Falls, Arden Solheim will return to the area as the new administrator of the Karlstad Healthcare Center.

Solheim brings with her about 15 years of experience, having worked in both small and large nursing centers.

Arden and husband Vernon lived in Plymouth for a while but spent too much time traveling to their cabin on Lake of the Woods. "We're happy to be home again," she said. North Star News

Oklee boy has proof to go with big fish story

Oklee - The big one didn't get away! Scott Hilgeman, nine year old son of Greg and Gayle Hilgeman, caught a 27-inch, 9 lb. 5 oz. Walleye at Zippel Bay on Lake of the Woods while ice fishing recently.

The fish was so big that it could not be brought out of the hole by the pole. A gaff hook was used.

It was also big enough to be mounted — a good thing since Scott is allergic to fresh water fish and wouldn't have been able to eat the Walleye even if he had wanted to. The Oklee Herald

TRF students honored for MN D-Day letters

Ayla Donlin received a second place award and Karen Christensen an honorable mention award in the statewide Minnesota D-Day letter writing contest. Both are ninth grade students at Lincoln high school.

Minnesota D-Day is a day set aside to encourage smokers to try to quit and urge young people never to start smoking. As part of this prevention effort, the American Lung Association of Minnesota, state division of the American Cancer Society and the Attorney General's Partnership for a Drug Free Minnesota joined forces to sponsor the sixth annual "Good Things About Being Tobacco-Free Contest."

Hundreds of entries were submitted by K-12 students across the state. Activity in the high school category was to write a letter to a decision maker to encourage him or her to make tobacco-free decisions. The entries were judged on adherence to the topic, creativity, originality and neatness.

Ayla, the daughter of Deejay and Cay Donlin, wrote her letter to Steven Spielberg. "I am beginning to see, more and more, that the statistics about tobacco use among teens are true," she wrote. "I believe that the people acting in your movies have a big influence on teenagers and children, and when there is a scene with an actor smoking, it is a bad influence on them. That is why I am suggesting that you don't show people smoking in your movies."

After citing statistics regarding the harmful affects of tobacco use, Ayla wrote: "Have you ever considered how many of the 3,000 adolescents who start smoking every day were influenced by one of your productions? I would like to propose that not only you eliminate the use of tobacco from your productions, but that you also encourage other producers to do the same. Perhaps one day we'll have a 'smoke-free' cinema on both sides of the screen."

Karen, the daughter of Curtis and Lin Christensen, addressed her letter to the Thief River Falls city council.

"The purpose of this letter is to ask you to take a tougher stand on youth tobacco issues," she wrote. "I am appalled at the number of my classmates who smoke regularly or try a cigarette 'just to see what it feels like.'

"Every day more than 3,000 of my peers smoke their first cigarette and another 3,000 become regular smokers. Their odds of becoming addicted are between one in three and one in two. Adolescents are encouraged to start smoking by successful tobacco advertising, promotion, and the easy task of obtaining tobacco products, such as cigarettes.

"My solution to this is: find the source where the youth procure the tobacco and stop it there. Increase the frequency of checks on businesses who sell tobacco products to make sure they are not selling to minors. Also, create 'zero tolerance' discipline policy, such as tobacco license revocation for a prolonged period of time.

"I also suggest that tobacco vending machines be monitored at all times to prevent, and hopefully insure, kids from buying them at that location. I also think that minors caught using tobacco should be subject to harsher punishments, as well as a straight forward informative course on what tobacco does to your system..."

Training about scaffold safety given by OSHA

Scaffold "competent person" training will be offered Friday, January 23, from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn in Grand Forks, ND, to cover requirements of the new scaffold standard of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA).

OSHA requires that every employee involved in erecting, disassembling, moving, operating, repairing, inspecting or maintaining a scaffold receive this type of training. Covered are risks such as falls, falling objects, electrical hazards and access to and from the scaffold as well as proper scaffold use, material handling, maximum loads and other OSHA requirements.

Cost is $200 per person or $175 per person for companies sending two or more representatives. The workshop is sponsored by the custom training and continuing education department of Northland Community and Technical College.

Preregistration is required by calling 1-800-959-6282 or 218-681-0868.

SOUPÇON
Sherry LaCoursiere

Here are the bread recipes I promised - to go with the soup recipes from last week. The first recipes are for those of you who make your bread the regular way. The last ones are for bread machines - just use your machine's mixing and starting directions.

These tasty treats would be ideal with a hot bowl of soup:

HERB POPOVERS

2 eggs
1 cup flour
1 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground sage
1/4 teaspoon pepper

Heat oven to 450 degrees. Generously grease six 6 ounce custard cups.

Beat eggs slightly. Beat in remaining ingredients with hand beater just until smooth (do not overbeat). Fill cups about 1/2 full.

Bake 15 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees. Bake 25 minutes longer or until golden brown. Immediately remove from cups.

You can make this delicious bread even if you don't have herbs growing in your kitchen window - yum:

HERB BATTER BREAD

3 cups flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 package active dry yeast
1 1/4 cups very warm water (120 to 130 degrees)
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
2 tablespoons shortening
1 1/2 teaspoons chopped fresh or 1/2 teaspoon dried rosemary leaves
1/2 teaspoon chopped fresh or 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme leaves

Mix 2 cups of the flour, sugar, salt and yeast in large bowl. Add water, parsley, shortening, rosemary and thyme. Beat on low speed of mixer for 1 minute, scraping bowl frequently.

Beat on medium speed for 1 minute, scraping frequently. Stir in remaining flour. Scrape batter from side of bowl. Cover and let rise in warm place 35-40 minutes, until double.

Grease loaf pan. Stir down batter by beating 25 strokes. Smooth and pat batter in loaf pan with floured hands. Cover and let rise about 30 minutes, until double.

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Bake 40-45 minutes or until loaf sounds hollow when tapped. Brush top with margarine if desired.

Use those leftover mashed potatoes to make this delicious bread:

POTATO BREAD

6 to 6 1/2 cups flour
1/2 cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 packages active dry yeast
2 cups very warm water (120-130 degrees)
1 cup lukewarm mashed cooked potatoes
1/4 cup oil
2 eggs
Margarine or butter, softened

Mix 3 cups of the flour, sugar, salt and yeast in large bowl. Add water, potatoes, oil and eggs. Beat on low speed of mixer for 1 minute, scraping frequently. Beat on medium speed 1 minute, scraping frequently. Stir in enough remaining flour, 1 cup at a time, to make dough easy to handle.

Turn dough onto lightly floured surface and knead 8-10 minutes or until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl, turn greased side up. Cover and let rise in warm place about 1 hour or until double. (Dough is ready when indentation remains on top.)

Grease 2 loaf pans. Punch down dough, divide in half. Flatten each half into 18x9 inch rectangle. Roll up tightly, folding ends under loaf. Place seam side down in pan and brush with oil. Let rise about 1 hour or until double.

Bake at 375 degrees for 30-35 minutes or until loaves are deep golden brown and sound hollow when tapped.

See how quickly you can make fresh rolls - mix these quickies as for bread dough above:

2-HOUR ROLLS

1 package yeast
1 cup warm water
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup warm milk
3 tablespoons oil
3 tablespoons sugar
4 cups flour

Let rise once, make into rolls, then let rise again and bake at 350 degrees for about 20 minutes.

The following recipes are for bread machines:

Just think of a crusty loaf to use to sop up the soup leftovers:

FRENCH BREAD

2 1/2 teaspoons dry yeast
3 cups bread flour
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 teaspoons sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons shortening
1 1/2 cups plus 2 tablespoons lukewarm water

I'm going to try this recipe this weekend - I always have trouble with wheat bread and maybe this one will work for me:

BUTTERMILK WHEAT BREAD

1 1/2 cups buttermilk
1 1/2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups bread flour
1/3 cup whole wheat flour
1 package active dry yeast (1/4 ounce, 2 1/4 teaspoons)

Use white bread setting on machine.

Crunchy and healthy, this bread will be a great hit - and you can add whatever crunchy seeds your family likes:

100% CRUNCH LOAF

1 1/4 cup plus 1 tablespoon water
3 cups wheat bread flour
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons molasses
1 tablespoon gluten
2 tablespoons olive oil
2/3 cup seeds (pumpkin, flax, sunflower or any other you want)
2 teaspoons fast rise yeast or 3 teaspoons active dry

This traditional Jewish bread can be braided or make into other interesting shapes, or baked as a regular loaf - eggs make it light and tasty:

CHALLAH

3/4 cup water
3 cups white bread flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 cup butter
2 eggs
1 egg yolk
3/4 teaspoon poppy seeds (for top)
1 1/4 teaspoon fast rise yeast or 2 1/4 teaspoons active dry yeast

Amundson's Excel Dairy still a family farm

being done on others.

In the old barn, a milker could milk a maximum of 42 cows per hour and was paid $6.50 to $7 per hour with no benefits. In the new Double 20 milking parlor there are 40 cows in the parlor at a time and a milker averaging 110 to 120 cows per hour receives full benefits of health insurance and vacation in addition to a $7.50 to $8 hourly wage. With the addition of a couple of part-time workers, the parlor utilization is expected to increase to 160 cows per hour.

At the old facility it took four to five hours a day to feed the 150 to 200-cow herd. Now more than five times that number are fed in less than twice the time.

Computerized identification and records provide advanced information on individual cows, identifying problems early and contributing to better herd health and better milk for sale.

Purchases By Semi-Load

All feed purchases are made by the semi-trailer load, making it easier to negotiate favorable contracts for feed. The total mixed ration (TMR) being fed includes corn silage, grain corn, alfalfa haylage, dry hay, cottonseed, soybean meal, dry beet pulp and protein mix. Larry contracted this year for 500 tons of dried beet pulp. He turned down an offer of 70 to 80 tons of carrots, which would have been an acceptable feed component, because the quantity wasn't sufficient to work into the ration.

Cattle are fed only once a day, but it is an eight-hour operation that requires mixing 10 truckloads in the 490-cubic-foot mounted TMR mixer truck. Total feed used last Tuesday alone, for instance, was 109,100 pounds—nearly 55 tons. Feed bunks are cleaned out each morning and the uneaten feed collected is weighed to determine daily usage and is then sold.

While the Amundsons had planned to install a manure liquid and dry matter separation system which had been indicated as the "system of choice" by the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency, the agency decided the system working well in other states had not been sufficiently tested in Minnesota. And since the agency would not participate in the approximately $50,000 additional cost for "testing" by the Amundsons, they opted for a conventional lagoon system.

Manure from the loose housing areas is scraped to a pit and pumped to the lagoon. Bedding of cattle is done with ground wheat and barley straw. Wood shavings from Marvin Windows at Warroad were tried but bits of wood in the shavings floated to the top of the manure pit and lagoon, creating a pumping problem.

Manure Pumped To Fields

The lagoon has a capacity for 310 days of manure storage, but plans are to empty it in the spring and fall. Emptying is accomplished by pumping directly from the lagoon through a six-inch hose to an applicator which incorporates the liquid into the ground behind the teeth of a toolbar cultivator.

With a range of about three miles through the use of a booster pump, the manure application system will fertilize about 600 acres per year. It will be used primarily on ground which will produce corn the following year.

Opportunity For Others

Because the Amundsons will concentrate on producing milk, there is opportunity for other people to specialize in phases of dairying which smaller operations traditionally handled on their own, including growing feed and caring for young-stock.

Local farmers Richard Jorde, Joe Ose and Steve Muzzy raise corn and alfalfa hay and Don Joppru of Thief River Falls and Anderson Brothers of Viking raise corn only under contract with Excel Dairy. The dairy operation requires about 700 acres of corn for silage and 600 acres of alfalfa hay.

In addition, the dairy plans to buy about 100,000 bushels of corn for grain—the equivalent production of 1,000 acres at a usual area yield of 100 bushels per acre.

Heifer calves born at Excel Dairy are sold at a pre-arranged price at about three days of age to Mark Hanson, a former Thief River Falls dairyman who sold his milking herd. Hanson—who buys the ration removed from the feed bunks each day—will raise them to 600 pounds and in turn sell them to Dale Balstad of Winger, who will take care of the breeding and carry them to about six weeks prior to calving.

Excel Dairy has the right of first refusal to purchase the animals as springing heifers. Larry said he has told the growers he expects to buy back 100 percent of the heifers in the near future and perhaps 80 percent later.

Workers Available

While the Amundsons experienced some difficulty in hiring and keeping necessary workers during the fall grain and beet harvest season, there has been no problem since then in finding employees. The top four positions in the dairy operation are salaried with the rest being hourly workers. A staff of 15 employees is projected.

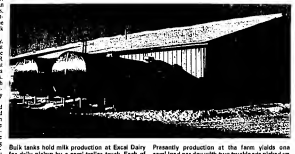
Rhonda said that the dairy buys grain from area elevators, ear tags, non-prescription drugs, calving pens and some other supplies locally; parts and supplies—including the milker inflations changed every 13 days—from the nearest dairy service located in McIntosh, and during construction purchased materials or services from Ram Builders, Thygeson Construction, Davidson Ready-Mix, UBC and local employees of Bergstrom Electric of Grand Forks, among others.

Lifestyle Changes

Already the new operation has provided positive lifestyle changes along with the challenges which turn up each day.

"This was probably the nicest Christmas we have had since we started milking cows," Larry said. "We were in the barn by seven (a.m.) and out by six (p.m.) and had a full evening for family. We had Thanksgiving day off, have every-other weekend and holiday off, and we're even talking about taking a little vacation."

Larry and Rhonda don't feel they are in competition with smaller dairy operations in the area and they want to see dairies of any size thrive. "We want to see as many dairies in the area as possible to help maintain the economic base and preserve the infrastructure, which is built around service," they said.



Positioned For The Future

"Our biggest competition is economics. We still have to live with the same milk prices as everyone else. What we have tried to do is look at the long-term future and to position our farm for long-term operation.

"There will continue to be small dairies that will do fine, and that's great. Our guess is that the successful dairies will be the very small (40 cows or less) or the very large (400 cows and more), but that's only a guess. There are sure to be many exceptions to that."

"Dairying is a good life," Rhonda said. "We are hoping this move will provide us with a positive lifestyle change and still permit us to be involved in a business that we both enjoy."

The Amundsons are planning for an open house at Excel Dairy during June Dairy Month in 1998. At that time the public will be invited to see the facilities and learn more about the operation.

Bulk tanks hold milk production at Excel Dairy for daily pickup by a semi-trailer truck. Each of the stainless steel, insulated tanks holds 6,000 gallons of milk—equivalent to one semi-load. Presently production at the farm yields one semi-load per day with two truckloads picked up every fourth day. A truckload of milk weighs 52,000 pounds.

Double 20 milking parlor at Excel Dairy permits 40 cows to be in the milking facility at one time. While 20 cows are being milked on one side of the parlor, 20 more are being washed and disinfected on the other side. Expectations are that the parlor will permit milking of 160 cows per hour as the average of 950 cows will be milked three times per day.

to figure that out. Once that question was answered, the second part appeared, "Who played the part of Mayor Shinn in The Music Man at this school?" The team would continue to search the school's web site for the answer. The correct answer to this two-part sample question would be worth two points.

Sometimes the teams were instructed to complete a task from which a question was asked. A sample task instructed the team to "receive some e-mail from an elementary school in New Zealand and forward it to rvogt@weecsu.cfa.org." The question — "What does KIA WHAKAPONO, KIA MANAWNUI mean? (You could even start this journey at Hillside Elementary in Minnesota — quack, quack, about 8 12 squared)." This would be worth two points with a bonus point awarded to the first three teams to complete the task and answer the question.

Many of the questions were multiple choice, some with more than one answer, and most with several parts. Some involved events in far away places. Others involved math and problem solving skills.

The layman will have a much easier time understanding the rules for the competition than the questions. The rules were simple.

Each school district could have one or more teams consisting of six students and one team advisor. The advisor could teach and coach, but was not allowed to complete tasks or find information. The advisor's purpose was to create opportunities for the students to plan strategies and solutions.

The competition had to be completed on school property using only the school's internet access. The sites that contained the information were checked for suitability for students although it was noted that the very nature of the World Wide Web does not allow all linked sites to be checked. Each participating district was expected to have an "acceptable use" policy.

In the event of a tie, the earliest correct response won. Not only did Marshall County Central's team members have to do it right, they had to do it fast with advisor Jorgenson stressing that "timing was important."

Every classroom at Marshall County Central has access to the internet, and team members sometimes worked individually although they were strongly encouraged to work together as a team. Jorgenson noted that answers did not have to come from the internet and that a team from another school had instead called a business to obtain the answer to a question that pertained to that company's stock.

The winning team from Marshall County Central scored 29 out of a possible 40 points. A team from Roseau scored 26 to place second followed by a Norman County West team in third place.

The fact that the top three schools were from northwestern Minnesota must say something.

While our location may be considered by some as remote, obviously the commitment to technology in our schools is strong with Marshall County Central leading the pack.

Our congratulations to advisor Mark Jorgenson and team members Eric, Adam, Andy, Troy, Ben and Chad — Minnesota's Cyber Knowledge competition winners. MCC rules!

agreement that restoration will require a long-term commitment from all involved and that a sound recovery plan must include provisions for sustainable use when restoration efforts are successful.

The task force will meet again to develop specific proposals for future harvest restrictions, enhancement efforts, monitoring protocols and long-term recovery goals. The task force members agree that this joint recovery effort represents a major step necessary for successful management of a shared resource.

Red Lake Band members, Minnesota recreational anglers and local economies both on and off the reservation will all benefit greatly if efforts are successful in restoring one of the world's finest natural walleye fisheries.

State Director Of Sierra Club Gives Wolf Views

In last week's issue of the Northern Watch we published an editorial with our views of the Eastern Timber Wolf situation in Minnesota. We have recently received an opinion piece from Ginny Yingling, state director of the Sierra Club (North Star Chapter), which she has asked us to consider publishing.

"I believe this op-ed provides a perspective that has not received wide coverage in the media," Yingling writes. "There has been much reported about wolves attacking livestock, but never any numbers to put those attacks into context over time or with respect to the total number of farms and animals in the state. Also, there have been 'scare' reports about wolves and hunters, and parents fearing for the safety of their children. Again, I believe there is need to put these reports and fears into perspective."

We would expect that the viewpoints expressed by the Sierra Club state director in her letter will be those presented by the club and other similar organizations as the state Department of Natural Resources seeks this year to establish the basics for a future wolf management plan in the state. We believe area residents should be aware of these viewpoints and are publishing Yingling's opinion piece in its entirety.

Because we take issue with a number of items she has expressed, we have written a letter to Ms. Yingling, which we will also publish as our editorial in next week's Northern Watch. Please clip and save the following to use for reference when when reading that response.

FEAR, NOT FACTS, GUIDE WOLF DEBATE
by Ginny Yingling
State Director, North Star Chapter Sierra Club

Fear and loathing, not facts, are guiding the current wolf debate and our "leaders" are doing little about it. Public meetings are being held to seek input regarding wolf management, as the first step toward removing federal protection for the wolf. So far, these meetings have generated more heat than light. Worse, the people tasked with ultimately managing wolves after removal from endangered species protection are doing little to dispel the outright falsehoods stated by citizens and repeated by the media. Some examples:

The Department of Natural Resources (DNR) consistently cites a wolf population "census" indicating 2,300 wolves in Minnesota. This is a far cry from the national census many people are familiar with, which attempts to count all the people in the country. Even the author of the report described his numbers as estimates, based on an opinion survey of wildlife managers, researchers, and hunters about how many wolves they think there are! Radio collars on a few isolated packs provides the balance of this "data."

At the public meetings, angry citizens call for sport hunting and trapping of this "exploding" wolf population for a variety of reasons, but based mainly on fear for humans, livestock and deer. These are fears that should not be dismissed lightly. Nobody wants children or adults, farmers or hunters harmed; but these fears should be examined under the light of fact and reason.

Some say wolves are "no longer afraid" of humans because they aren't hunted. Where is the evidence that wolves were ever afraid of humans or that hunting makes them so. Many reports of wolves approaching humans come from hunters wearing camouflage and deer scent. Dressed this way and standing by a fresh kill, are they surprised a lone wolf might approach them? Perhaps wolves have not become less afraid of humans, but contacts are simply more likely as their numbers grow?

There are many wild animals, such as dolphins and whales, that are unafraid of humans and, unlike wolves, have documented histories of attacking people. Every year, 4.5 million people are bitten by dogs. Nobody calls for sport hunting or trapping them. Hundreds of wolves are already killed every year, often viciously, without generating the fear response hunting advocates claim.

A greater fear for many people is for children. This concern has been raised throughout history. Yet nowhere in North America, in all our history, has there been a single wolf attack on a human. Yes, we should be cautious. Wolves are wild animals. People need to know they can legally kill a wolf if they truly feel threatened, but the mere presence of a wolf is not necessarily a threat.

Nobody should feel unsafe where they live, but dangers must be kept in perspective. People living near wolves need to take precautions to protect their family, just as they would living near a busy street, lake, or neighbor with any large animal; just as when they buckle a child into a carseat.

No child has ever been attacked by a wolf, yet every year thousands of children die in car accidents, drownings and domestic animal attacks. It would be unfair to simply dismiss the fears of parents about wolves, but even more unfair to frighten parents with scare campaigns.

We also cannot dismiss concerns of farmers who lose livestock to wolves. A necessary and humane federal program exists to investigate complaints and, when confirmed, to trap and kill the "guilty" pack. Farmers are compensated for their losses. If the compensation is insufficient, who is to blame—the wolves or the people who underfund this already low-budget program?

Despite hysterical news reports, there is not a wholesale wolf assault on Minnesota farms. According to U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) staff who administer the wolf trapping program, less than two percent of farms within wolf range are attacked. Confirmed complaints increased about 25 percent in 1997, but the number of farm animals did not increase dramatically and some declined significantly. However, wolves killed under the program increased by 40 percent.

For example, in 1996, there were 85 verified complaints of wolf attacks on livestock, with 1,612 turkeys, seven bulls and cows, 67 calves and yearlings, 21 sheep, two geese, one horse and 10 dogs being killed. Preliminary data from 1997, reportedly the "worst year ever," show 109 verified complaints, with 925 turkeys, 15 bulls and cows, 77 calves and yearlings, 32 sheep, no geese or horses and 10 dogs killed. In fact, the number of turkeys killed in 1987 and both turkeys and sheep killed in 1989 were much higher; ten years ago!

Let's put this into perspective. Over 47 million turkeys are raised in the state annually, and wolves kill up to 1,700, less than one out of every 300,000 birds. The federal trapping program kills between 100 and 200 wolves annually; about one out of every 10 to 20 wolves. This does not include the 270 to 400 illegal wolf kills annually. Roughly one out of every four to six wolves is killed in Minnesota every year. How will sport hunting make them fear us more?

Farmers do not even have to protect their animals from attack to receive repeated aid from the federal program. Most practice good husbandry, but some farmers pasture animals in fields surrounded by woods or dump dead animals in open pits, literally drawing wolves to their farms.

Finally, there is the impact of wolves on deer. A review of the 20-some years of wolf protection show deer numbers are far more dependent on winter weather, and little correlated to wolf population numbers. Could our two consecutive extreme winters account for lowered deer populations?

Studies have shown that wolves take mainly old and sick deer. In 1971, the U.S Forest Service conducted a study that found over 70 percent of deer killed by wolves were over five years old and in poor health, while the majority of deer killed by hunters were under two years old and in good health, suggesting wolves actually improve the herd.

None of the emotional rhetoric reported in the media supports a hunting or trapping season. Twenty years ago, we set aside fear and misinformation to protect the wolf. Today, people treasure them even more and millions of dollars flood the state from people hoping to glimpse or hear a wolf in the wild. I hope the DNR will apply science and reason to the development of a wolf management plan. If not, this promises to be another long, unhappy struggle.

175 register for Governor's Ride

billion dollars of financial impact on this state. Currently, Minnesota is home to an estimated 276,000 registered snowmobiles, the largest state snowmobile population in the United States. Minnesota also has over 18,000 miles of maintained snowmobile trails.

Olson said to get a feel of what it would be like to host one of these events she participated in last year's event in International Falls. She said she had a real good time.

The event has been billed as a two to three day event, but the Governor's ride is really held on Friday. Olson explained that the other event planned during the weekend is the annual meeting of Minnesota United Snowmobile Association (MnUSA), a snowmobile lobbying organization, which has 22,000 member families.

Registration forms are available at the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce on Highway 59 South in Thief River Falls, (218) 681-3720. The registration fee includes an invitation to the Governor's Reception Thursday, February 12, breakfast prior to the trail ride on Friday morning, February 13; lunch along the trail, and refreshment stops along the trail.

Biggest outdoors bonding package being proposed

Governor Arne Carlson has proposed a $201 million bonding initiative to improve state parks and trails, expand habitat for fish and wildlife and simplify the recreational license system.

"Our great outdoors not only make Minnesota unique, they are part of our identity as a state, and must not be taken for granted," Governor Carlson said. "It is vitally important that we preserve our natural resources for future generations. This is an investment in our future."

In his announcement, the Governor cited the tremendous economic impact Minnesota's natural resources have on the state economy. Fishing alone brings in nearly $1 billion for the state's economy and by the year 2000, outdoor recreation will generate more than $2 billion for the state.

The "Access to the Outdoors" package was developed in conjunction with more than a dozen outdoors and environmental groups, and is composed of three new initiatives:

Parks and Trails — $63 million. With the proposed investment, every state park in Minnesota will be improved. Many park buildings, roads and utility systems were constructed in the 1930's and in need of serious repair and rehabilitation. The proposal will restore Minnesota's flagship state park, Itasca, to peak condition with over $6 million. New visitor centers will be constructed at Itasca, Forestville, and Mille Lacs Kathio and hundreds of campsites across the state will be restored. More than $9 million will be allocated for the improvement and restoration of metro area parks. A total of 104 new miles of trails will be added around the state for biking, in-line skating, hiking, skiing and snowmobiling. Funding is also included for the creation of a new state park in Duluth to honor World War II veterans that will utilize the retired Navy ship, the U.S.S. Des Moines.

Habitat — $50 million. Funding will be used to protect Minnesota's wildlife habitat by regenerating 10,000 acres of forest, establishing vegetation on 8,000 acres, and restoring 500 acres of wetlands. This initiative will put another 24,000 acres into wildlife habitat by paying landowners for "permanent conservation easements." Funding also would be used to acquire 17,500 acres for designation as "wildlife management areas, or WMA. The habitat initiative will develop winter cover and food for pheasant and other grassland wildlife, create a system to better monitor wildlife populations, and restore forest and brushland habitat for grouse and 100 other types of birds. The proposal will protect and restore Minnesota's streams for healthier river systems and better angling opportunities. Money is slated for improved firearms safety training at shooting ranges across the state.

Electronic Licensing — $1.2 million. This "Outdoors Online" initiative will create a one-stop shopping system for recreational licenses. By next summer, hunters and anglers can purchase their licenses just by dialing a toll free telephone number. An ID number will be issued over the phone that allows them to begin hunting or fishing immediately. By 1999, licenses can be obtained over the phone or through terminals at licensing locations. The terminal system will use information on Minnesota driver's licenses to enter a DNR database and issue hunting and/or fishing licenses on the spot, printing all recreational licenses on one license. Eventually, this system will be available on-line and expanded to include all recreational vehicle registrations and multi-year hunting and fishing licenses. The "Outdoors Online" initiative will also establish an Electronic Library for access to extensive data and information about the environment. The system will allow hunter, fishers and hikers to create and customize their own maps.

In addition to the $114 million in new initiatives, the Governor proposed $87 million in base bonding for environmental protection and infrastructure. The additional bonding includes funding for flood hazard mitigation and control, groundwater protection, road improvements at the Minnesota Zoo, improved water access (through boat landing and fishing piers); and DNR office consolidation.

The Governor has urged legislative support for his proposal not only on economic grounds, but because the outdoors are central to our quality of life and are enjoyed with our families. "It is with our family members that we travel to the lakes on the weekend, we visit our state parks throughout the year, we snowmobile, we ski, we hunt, and some of us even try to fish," Governor Carlson said. "Ultimately, part of being a Minnesotan is being outdoors."

Grygla-Gatzke is handed another close loss, 52-50

Lady Luck is not smiling on Grygla-Gatzke this winter. The Eagles, who opened the 1997-98 boys high school basketball season with two wins, have now lost eight straight. Included in the streak are two overtime decisions, a pair of one-point games, a two-point contest, a three-point affair, and two four-point finals.

Latest setback Tuesday might have been the toughest to take as the Eagles saw an 11-point lead with three minutes to play turn into a 52-50 loss at Warroad.

"It's very frustrating," acknowledged Grygla-Gatzke coach Vern Johnson, whose team trailed 8-6 and 21-23 at the first two quarter stops, but went ahead 39-32 at the end of the third quarter and had a 47-36 lead heading down the stretch before Warroad went on a 16-0 game-winning run.

"We stopped doing things," noted Johnson. "We quit attacking. We starting playing very tentative. I'll admit it, we fell apart. We got rattled."

A 3-point basket with two seconds left by Alex Anderson finally stopped the late-game Warroad scoring outburst, but the Eagles couldn't come up with a turnover before the horn sounded.

Mike Peterson of Warroad led all scorers with 19 points. Teammate Jon Doehbler had 14. Philip Brateng scored 16 points and Anderson netted 15 for Grygla-Gatzke.

The Eagles went 8-for-10 at the free throw line, were out-rebounded 29-22 and topped the turnover charts 12-10. Warroad made 5 of 7 free throws.

Craig Lawrence of the Prowlers got his stick up a little high as he battled Tyrone Cole (14) and Lee Mervin (15) for the puck along the boards in Tuesday's Thief River Falls vs. Warroad Section 8A high school hockey game at the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center.

Warroad shuts out TRF, again

Warroad shut out Thief River Falls for the second time this season Tuesday, beating the Prowlers 4-0 in a Section 8A high school hockey match-up at the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center. The first encounter, played at Warroad Dec. 2, wound up 3-0.

But despite the setback that dropped the Prowlers to 2-11, Thief River Falls coach Scott Bergland was selling positive in his post-game comments. "We played well," he said. "We have nothing to hang our heads about. They (Warroad) definitely knew they were in a hockey game. Even though this one was 4-0 and the first one was 3-0, this was a much more competitive game."

The two teams went up and down the ice in an entertaining first period, but goalies Mike Dowers of Thief River Falls (14 saves) and Justin Ferguson of Warroad (11) were up to the challenge.

Dowers was busy again at the start of the second period when Warroad stepped up the attack. But he kept the visitors off the scoreboard until the 7:04 mark when defenseman Greg Collard's long straightaway shot glanced off the sophomore netminder's stick.

The 1-0 margin remained on the scoreboard until the 13:40 mark of the second period when two point-blank rebounds finally resulted in a Chad Hontvet goal.

Dowers' pad save on clean breakaway by Jackson Harren 5:43 into the third period kept the Prowlers in the game, but Warroad eventually picked up the key third goal at 10:22. Dowers thought he had the puck smothered as he sprawled across the goal mouth, but Heppner's shot slipped across the line.

Just 25 seconds later it was 4-0 as Drew Parsley tapped in a rebound.

Dowers finished with 34 stops. Ferguson came up with a 22-save shutout.

"We had a good first period, and we had just as many good chances in the third period," noted Bergland, "but it's the same achilles heel we've had all year – we can't put the puck in the net."

The two rivals, who have had some spirited games in the past, skated through 37 1/2 minutes of penalty-free hockey before Warroad was whistled for a couple of minor infractions late in the third period.

Scoring

First period - none.

Second period - Warroad, Greg Collard (un.), 7:04. Warroad, Chad Hontvet (Joe Ulwelling-Josh Heppner), 13:40.

Third period - Warroad, Heppner (Brian Cole), 10:22. Warroad, Drew Parsley (Donny DeMars-Jackson Harren), 10:47.

Goalie saves - TRF, Mike Dowers 14-13-7-34. Warroad, Justin Ferguson 11-7-4-22.

Moorhead beats TRF boys 86-42...

Fast start leads to one-sided contest

A first quarter Moorhead blitz shot the Spuds past Thief River Falls 86-42 Tuesday in boys high school basketball.

The match-up between the once-beaten Spuds, ranked No. 4 in the Class AAAA state polls, and the Class AAA Prowlers, who came into the game 1-9, was decided in a hurry. Nine Moorhead first quarter field goals, combined with 2-for-14 Thief River Falls opening period shooting, produced a 24-4 scoreboard spread at the eight-minute mark.

Mike Hagen scored 25 points to lead a group of four Moorhead double figure scorers as the Spuds carried a 45-18 lead into halftime and opened up a 73-30 third quarter gap.

Anthony Hendricks scored 17 points to lead the Prowlers, who lost the services of junior forward Kelly Cota to a broken wrist suffered during the game.

Thief River Falls shot just 22 percent from the field in the first half (5/23) and wound up with a 33 percent figure for the night (17/52). The Prowlers were 7-for-11 at the free throw line, where the Spuds were 14-for-17.

Gators pull out overtime win

■ B/G-MR boys rally to beat MCC 56-55

Jeremy Vacura came through in the clutch – twice – as Badger/Greenbush-Middle River pulled off an unlikely come-from-behind 56-55 overtime win Tuesday in a boys high school basketball game against rival Marshall County Central at Newfolden.

It was a game the Nordics could have, and according to Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland, should have won in regulation time.

But the Nordics let it slip away. They missed four straight free throws in the final 10 seconds of regulation time that could have iced it, and then watched Vacura hit two free throws with two seconds remaining to force overtime tied at 44-44.

In overtime, the Nordics' Garrett Magner made one of two free throws with five seconds left to put his team on top 55-53, only to have Vacura, a 5-10 senior, beat the buzzer with a long, off-balance game-winning 3-point shot that he banked off the backboard.

"It was unreal," said Ueland. "It was beyond bizarre. I've coached 800 games and I've never seen anything quite so bad, as far as losing a game like that. We virtually had the game won in regulation time and overtime."

But a combination of the Nordics' mistakes and the Gators' good fortunes turned things around at the end.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Eldon Sparby concurred with Ueland in his post-game assessment of the outcome. "We absolutely didn't deserve to win," he confessed. "We made so many bad choices and gave them every opportunity to win. But everything backfired on them."

It was the second straight wild finish for the Gators, who lost a 73-66 triple overtime game to Tri-County the previous Friday. In that one, Badger/Greenbush-Middle River let a final minute five-point lead slip away with 1-for-6 free throw shooting to close out regulation time.

"This one was kind of a reversal from Friday when had the opportunity to win and let it get away," noted Sparby.

Marshall County Central led 10-6 after one quarter, 23-20 at halftime and 36-32 through three quarters.

The Nordics' David Wilcox led all scorers with 19 points. He was their only double figure point producer, but Jon Donarski and Matt Nelson both chipped in with 9, and Magner had 8 – all coming in overtime.

Vacura had only three points through three quarters, but finished with 18 to lead the Gators. Andy Schenkey contributed 10 points and Daryl Wockenfuss netted 9.

Neither team shot well. The Gators were 22-for-60 from the field (37 percent), while the Nordics were just a slightly-better 18-for-48 (38 percent). Badger/Greenbush-Middle River was 5-for-9 at the free throw line, where Marshall County Central struggled with a 17-for-27 showing. The winners had a 43-31 rebound advantage and topped the turnover charts 16-14.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River is 6-3. Marshall County Central checks in at 8-4.

Poor shooting costs TRF girls

Detroit Lakes shot only 33 percent from the field and just 52 percent at the free throw line, but still beat Thief River Falls 46-39 Tuesday in girls Section 8AAA high school basketball. The Lakers won because the Prowlers shot only 23 percent and were out-rebounded 35-22.

Both shooting and rebounding have been a problem throughout the course of a 4-8 season, acknowledged Thief River Falls coach Jeff Loe. "But it wasn't ever this bad," he said.

Detroit Lakes led at the quarter stops 11-9, 23-15 and 37-29.

"Defensively, I thought we really worked hard," noted Loe. "Becky Mooney and Laura Follett played real well on defense. But offensively, it's been a struggle for us."

Jessica Abrahams scored a game-high 26 points for the Lakers. Nicole Kopari led the Prowlers with 22 points. They were the game's only double figure scorers.

Thief River Falls was 14-for-60 from the field and 10-for-18 at the free throw line. Detroit Lakes went 16-for-49 from the floor and had a 13-for-25 free throw game. The Lakers topped the turnover charts 15-14.

It was the second win over the Prowlers this winter for the Lakers, who claimed a 53-48 victory in a Dec. 12 meeting at Detroit Lakes.

Wolverines knock off Mustangs

Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke broke it open in the second quarter and went on to beat Red Lake County Central 51-42 Tuesday in a girls high school basketball game played at Goodridge.

With Red Lake County Central center Angie Chervestad on the bench after picking up two early fouls, the Wolverines turned a 10-8 first quarter edge into a 28-13 halftime cushion. The Mustangs cut the difference to 38-31 by the end of the third quarter, but couldn't complete the comeback.

The outcome reversed a 67-52 Red Lake County Central victory when the two teams met back on Dec. 4, and snapped a five-game win streak for the Mustangs.

"We played Chervestad tough on the inside," explained Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke coach Mike Gast. "The last time we played them, they hit the outside shots on us. This time they didn't shoot very well from the outside."

Angie Gast had a 17-point, 9-rebound game for the winners, while Dana Wiseth netted 11 points and Amie Kotrba pulled down 18 rebounds.

"We did a real good job hitting the boards," noted Gast, although Red Lake County Central still wound up with a 38-37 rebound edge.

Katie O'Neill scored 13 points and Chervestad had 11 for the Mustangs.

Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke shot 40 percent from the field (22/55), while Red Lake County Central shot only 28 percent (17/60). The Wolverines were 7-for-14 at the free throw line; the Mustangs went 7-for-12.

Sanden draws attention

Back-to-back double-digit scoring efforts by Kyle Sanden have drawn plenty of attention and praise for the University of Minnesota men's basketball freshman redshirt from Thief River Falls.

The Gophers' starting center since early in the season, the 6-11 Sanden had been averaging 3 points per game before coming up with a 16-point performance in a 75-68 loss at Penn State Saturday (Jan. 10). He followed that with a 15-point effort in a 74-60 Wednesday night setback at the hands of Michigan State at Williams Arena.

Sanden played 32 of the 40 minutes against the Nittany Lions and logged 31 minutes against the Spartans.

He became a big part of the Gophers' offense when injuries hit scoring leaders Sam Jacobson and Quincy Lewis.

Minnesota, struggling with an 0-4 start in the Big Ten, will face Iowa at home Sunday afternoon in a nationally-televised game on CBS.

Anderson helps Huskies

St. Cloud State University freshman hockey player Keith Anderson of Thief River Falls had a goal and an assist in the Huskies' 2-1, 6-2 Jan. 9-10 weekend sweep of Nebraska-Omaha.

With four goals and eight assists, Anderson is the top-scoring freshman for the Huskies and is tied for sixth on the team scoring list. He is a plus-5 in the plus-minus chart.

The WCHA-leading Huskies are at the University of Minnesota-Duluth this weekend.

Olson, Wildcats rip Goodridge defense

Seth Olson scored 29 points Tuesday to lead Tri-County past Goodridge 64-48 in a boys high school basketball game played at Karlstad.

The Wildcats led only 9-7 after eight minutes, but opened up a 30-18 halftime spread and stretched it to 49-29 through three quarters.

Olson was 13-for-19 from the field, including a 3-for-4 showing from 3-point range, to spearhead a 51 percent 29-for-57 Tri-County shooting show.

"I was disappointed in our overall team defense," said Goodridge coach Eric Mickelson.

The Wildcats' depth and quickness took their toll on the Huskies, according to Mickelson. "Their press didn't hurt us all that much, but they picked up a lot of steals on their half-court defense because they're so quick," he said. "They just wore us down."

Eleven Wildcats wound up putting their name in the scoring column as they dropped the Huskies to 5-5.

Jared Eidelbes and Jim Scheef scored 14 points each and Ben Hanson had 10 for the Huskies.

Goodridge was 16-for-40 from the field (40 percent) and 16-for-22 at the free throw line. Tri-County had a quiet 3-for-6 free throw night. The Huskies out-rebounded the Wildcats 29-17, but also had more turnovers, 18-10.

Royals complete a sweep of Pioneers

The gap closed, but there was still a 21-point scoreboard spread Wednesday as UND-Lake Region beat Northland Community and Technical College for the second time this winter in men's basketball, 81-80, at Devils Lake.

Northland lost their 1997-98 home and season opener to the Royals by 44 at the beginning of December, 102-58.

Tim Hanson and Kermit Cooper scored 17 points apiece and Scott Hemberger had 12 for the winners, who led 53-30 at halftime.

"We came out with a match-up zone defense and they hit ten 3-point shots in the first half," explained Northland coach Ted Krize. "We gave them open looks."

The Pioneers came back to play a solid second half, chopping the difference to 10 points near the midway mark.

"It's the same story we've had all year," noted Krize. "We dig ourselves a big hole and spend the whole game trying to come back. But I was really, really proud of the way they played in the second half. They came back and did a nice job."

Northland's offense was led by Chaka Ali with 15 points, Dwight Goodwin 14 and Nic Thompson 13.

The loss dropped the Pioneers to 1-8.

Pirates build lead, hold off TRF rally

Crookston took over the game in the third quarter and held off a Thief River Falls comeback down the stretch Thursday as the Pirates stopped the visiting Prowlers 64-57 in Section 8AAA boys high school basketball.

It was the sixth straight loss for the 1-11 Prowlers, who dropped a 45-35 decision to the Pirates in their first meeting back on Dec. 4.

Crookston started with a 19-13 first quarter lead. Thief River Falls went ahead 29-28 at halftime, but the Pirates broke away in the third quarter, 48-36.

The Prowlers chopped the difference to 60-57 in the final minute, but couldn't complete the rally.

Jeremy Voeller of Crookston led all scorers with 21 points. Teammate Jason Kuehn netted 11. A balanced Thief River Falls attack included Kyle Waterworth with 11 points, Jeremy Swanson and Anthony Hendricks with 10 each, Justin Walseth 9, and Matt Myers 8.

Free throws proved to be a major factor, with the Prowlers struggling through a 10-for-22 night at the line, while the Pirates nailed 13 of 17.

Thief River Falls shot 40 percent from the field (22/55). The Prowlers turned it over 16 times, with almost half of those coming in the third quarter.

TRF JV boys split vs. Moorhead, Crookston

A 68-41 Tuesday loss at Moorhead was followed by a 63-59 Thursday win at Crookston for the Thief River Falls junior varsity boys high school basketball team.

Moorhead out-scored Thief River Falls 20-7 in the fourth quarter to break open the Tuesday game. Thursday, Thief River Falls maintained quarter leads of 13-8, 28-23 and 43-39.

Collin Schafer led Thief River Falls with 10 points against Moorhead and 19 against Crookston. Aaron Hendricks and Matt Koehmstedt joined Schafer in double figures Thursday with 14 and 12 points, respectively.

Defense is key to B/G-MR success

Defense once again proved to be the strongest weapon for the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River girls Thursday in a 45-29 high school basketball win over Warren-Alvarado-Oslo.

The visiting Gators gave up just two first quarter points and limited the Ponies to 17 points through three quarters en route to their fifth straight win.

"Our defense just dominated early," pointed out Gators coach Tom Neibauer. "We played a real hard man-to-man and got a lot of steals. We've got to do a few things a little better offensively, but defensively we're playing well."

Tiffany Hagen scored 14 points and Kara Kuznia had 12 for the winners, who had quarter leads of 12-2, 21-9 and 31-17. Erika Swanson collected 11 points for the Ponies, who put only four players in the scoring column.

The 10-2 Gators were 14-for-38 from the field (37 percent) and 19-for-28 at the free throw line. The Ponies made 3 of 5 free throws.

Scoring

Thief River Falls is a 42-30 girls JV winner

Thief River Falls led at each quarter stop Tuesday en route to a 42-30 girls junior varsity high school basketball win over Detroit Lakes.

Erika Hudson scored 13 points to lead the winners, who were ahead at the stops 7-4, 15-12 and 29-23.

MCC girls fall 78-35

Lake of the Woods used its size to set up a fast break offense Thursday as the Bear ran by Marshall County Central 78-35 in girls high school basketball at Baudette.

"They pushed the ball up the court," noted Marshall County Central coach Alice Dahl. "They're big, and they run the floor well."

The Bears had quarter leads of 23-10, 40-19 and 54-27.

Ellie Waibel scored 23 points and Kimi Bragdon had 18, while Cyndi Hull and Heather Hanson both netted 14 for the Bears. Kristi Kilen led the Nordics with 16 points. Mandi Blawat and Miki Waterworth contributed 12 and 11 rebounds, respectively, to the Marshall County Central efforts.

The Nordics were 14-for-58 from the field (24 percent) and 7-for-15 at the free throw line. The Bears went 33-for-80 from the floor (41 percent).

Marshall County Central is 1-10 for the year.

Warroad hockey JV 7-2 winner over TRF

Warroad scored 15 seconds into the game and had three goals by the 3:07 mark en route to a 7-2 Tuesday junior varsity high school hockey win over Thief River Falls.

Jayme Holmes scored both Thief River Falls goals. John Sylvester had 21 saves in the Thief River Falls nets; Warroad wound up with 18 stops.

Wolverines finish off 3-0 week with victory

Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke finished off a 3-0 week with a 63-55 Thursday night girls high school basketball win at Warroad.

Angie Gast scored 17 points and Jenny Nelson had 14, while Lori Hagen and Dana Wiseth both picked up 10 for the Wolverines, who trailed 15-6 at the end of the first quarter, pulled even at 29-29 at halftime, fell behind again 49-44 at the end of the third quarter, but won it with a 19-6 fourth quarter scoring advantage.

"We dug ourselves a hole right away," pointed out Wolverines coach Mike Gast, who said a game-long Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke press finally took its toll on Warroad down the stretch. "Our press was pretty effective in the second and fourth quarters," he noted. "We didn't let up. I think they (Warroad) got tired at the end."

Warroad's offense featured Heather Evans with 20 points, Lisa Fry 19 and Jessica Johnson 13.

Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke was 24-for-60 from the field (40 percent) and a busy 18-for-31 at the free throw line. Warroad went 22-for-49 from the the floor (45 percent) and 10-for-13 at the line. The Wolverines finished with a 33-28 rebound edge.

"It was a big week for us," said Gast, whose team is now 7-5.

The Wolverines lost the services of junior Kathryn Stanley in the first quarter after a hard collision with the wall under the basket.

Winter Community Ed schedule is announced

Winter schedule of classes through the community education department of School District 564 has been announced with a number of programs to be starting soon.

Registration may be accomplished by mail by filling out the information form, enclosing the class fee and mailing both to Community Education, 230 LaBree Avenue South, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Persons may also register in person at the community education office in the school district service center. The office is open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Thursday. A registration desk with forms and envelopes and a drop box are located inside the double door entry which is open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

No phone registrations are accepted. No class confirmations are sent and classes will meet as scheduled unless registrants are notified otherwise. Classes are filled on a first-come, first-served basis with a minimum of six participants.

Refunds will be issued if the class is filled before the registration is received, if the class is canceled for lack of enrollment or if the registrant requests a refund three or more working days prior to starting date of the class. Such refunds must be approved by the board of education at one of its twice-monthly meetings. No refunds are issued after the class begins.

SwisPennCo appears to have met stipulation conditions

SwisPenn Co. appears to have met conditions of a stipulation agreement with the state and on its way to license renewal.

"Things are running really well right now, in fact better than ever," said SwisPenn Co. manager Rick Nordhagen.

Howard Person, Pennington County Solid Waste officer, explained that SwisPenn Co., the county's solid waste handler, had met conditions of a stipulation agreement it was forced into with the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) last summer.

Following reports of problems, such as uncovered piles of trash being blown into yards and fields of nearby neighbors, improper handling of compost, and improper storage of solid waste (burned pellets), the MPCA demanded that the site be cleaned up and piles of solid waste, compost and burned pellets be disposed of and handled properly by the end of December 1997. In addition, it fined SwisPenn Co. $2,500 for not having its compost process on line by a deadline in June, and $1,460 in costs for testing not completed when required.

It was a tough year for SwisPenn Co. It suffered a number of setbacks — some of which were caused by two major fires at the facility, and others by annoying minor equipment problems that kept recurring. These setbacks led to some big problems.

Pennington County Commissioners remained optimistic about SwisPenn Co's future. According to county officials, the county had learned its lesson in handling solid waste when it had lost thousands of dollars operating the facility, and commissioners had no desire to take over the facility again. In order to encourage SwisPenn Co. to meet stipulations in the agreement with MPCA it promised roughly $150,000 in aid. Of the $150,000, $50,000 was given to SwisPenn Co. immediately, $35,000 on October 1, $35,000 on November 1, and another $30,000 upon completing certain goals set forth in the stipulation agreement.

Meeting the stipulation agreement meant hauling a significant pile of solid waste (fluff pile), to landfills, obtaining or renting new equipment to dry wet fraction used in making pellets, and filtering compost. Most of the aid to SwisPenn Co. was aimed at solving those problems.

Person said two minor things remain to be completed — soil samples need to be taken from where the pile of burned pellets were stored, and the cover crop planted over spread pellets needs to be plowed over. At the earliest, those items can be completed in the spring. Person said another $50,000 from SCORE funds will be given to SwisPenn Co., but it's being withheld because, as Person said, "neatness counts" and the site isn't clean enough for the county.

Person said SwisPenn Co. has made a great deal of progress. Now they have to work on the permit application process with MPCA. This process requires that they submit information to MPCA to become re-permitted to operate within the state, and negotiate the permit with MPCA. One of the conditions in this process will be to demonstrate that they have a market for the pellets they are producing. Person said he has seen new contracts with new customers and is encouraged by that. SwisPenn Co. also has to identify landfills it plans to use. Right now, the MPCA isn't too happy that garbage is being sent to the landfill near Grand Forks, ND, he said, but that's a minor point of contention.

Nordhagen confirmed the fact that they have new customers for their pellet. He said he is very optimistic about the future of SwisPenn Co. The composting has improved, production has increased, and the product (pellet) is better.

Man jailed in Polk County for refusing to enter a plea

Crookston - In a bizarre scene, a 23-year-old Fosston man stood with his father at his side and refused to acknowledge anything Judge Russell Anderson had to say.

Joseph Fredrich Rosnow was supposed to enter a plea on a single charge of fleeing a police officer after a prior motion he had filed in December to "dismiss" the charge was denied.

Instead of entering a plea Rosnow said that he was appearing under the jurisdiction of the "American flag of peace of the United States of America," and he answered everything Judge Anderson or Polk County Attorney Mark Swanson said by saying, "I refuse that statement for fraud." Documents in Rosnow's file indicate that he does not believe in this country's system of laws or the legal system.

Judge Anderson had him taken into custody and jailed for five days on a contempt of court charge for refusing to acknowledge the court. Crookston Daily Times

Fully loaded it weighs 32,900 pounds. It is 10-feet, six-inches to the top of its lights. The fire truck, which is owned by the townships of North, Norden, Rocksbury, Smiley, Silverton and Excel, cost $159,000. It replaces a 1976 model fire truck, which they plan to sell. Fire eating part of Johnny Green's act

by Kathi Carlson
Northern Watch Reporter

Things got a little hot at the offices of The Times and Northern Watch on Thursday morning when a smiley stranger waltzed through the door, behind the counter and began eating fire. Female staff members gasped and giggled. Customers stared in open-mouthed disbelief. The stranger ate it up — the fire and the attention of his audience.

Johnny Green is his name. Entertainment's his game, and he and his band, the Greenmen, are performing this week in the lounge of the Best Western Inn in Thief River Falls.

Fire-eating is part of the show that includes a little comedy and a wide variety of music.

Green's dossier landed on my desk several days ago and proved to be amazing, almost unbelievable reading — enough to turn one "green" with envy.

Speaking of green, that was the color of Johnny Green's hair for 27 years. He believes that every performer needs a gimmick. Yes, green hair and fire-eating do tend to draw attention.

A Green Bay, WI native, Johnny Green has been entertaining around the world for nearly 40 years. He's performed in 102 countries and his audiences have included kings and queens. According to a press release, a one-night gig for the Shah of Iran turned into an eight month job with Green finding the Shah "a hard man to say 'no' to." Back in the states, four presidents — Nixon, Carter, Reagan and Bush — have witnessed his colorful act.

It would be easier to name the famous people Johnny Green hasn't met than it would be to list all the entertainment giants he has hobnobbed with. Green and his band

Future dairy success depends on making changes

Minnesota's delay in making dairy adjustments means catching up is necessary to be competitive

(This is the eighth in a series of Northern Watch stories on the loss of dairy farmers and a view toward the future of the dairy industry in northwest Minnesota.)

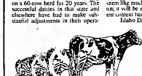
by Marvin Lundin
Northern Watch Editor

"I think there is a real future for dairying in Minnesota but we will have to make some changes. Our dairy industry won't be the way it was."

So says Harold Stanislawski, dairy development specialist with the Minnesota Department of Agriculture in Fergus Falls. A native of the Greenbush area and a former University of Minnesota extension educator in Roseau county, Stanislawski has been assigned the task of helping Minnesota recover its sagging dairy market share.

"Minnesota dairymen have been living in an isolated situation and their past is finally catching up to them," Stanislawski said. "This is not meant to slight the farmers who have been extremely hard workers and place a high value on their independence and their dairy tradition. The surprising thing is not that they find themselves in trouble, but that they have been able to hold out as long as they have."

Stanislawski says that dairy farmers in California, for instance, have not been able to make a living on a 60-cow herd for 20 years. The successful dairies in that state and elsewhere have had to make substantial adjustments in their operations to be profitable, and those adjustments for the most part have included herd expansion.



Less Work, More Profit

"Increasing herd size by five or 10 times or more doesn't equate to taking on that much more work," the dairy specialist says. "Dairying has always been more than a full-time job. There should be less work, but it does mean stepping back and taking a new look at the situation, forming alliances, setting goals, negotiating and perhaps trading a little independence for more personal time and more profit."

Despite complaints among dairymen in Minnesota that low prices have forced them out of business, Stanislawski says that milk prices in Minnesota have been consistently higher than in other states and that the net income per cow here is $333, compared with $202 in Idaho and $129 in California. That net is helped by such things as premiums and subsidized hauling that are not available in other areas.

And because other states can produce milk at lower prices, this state finds itself at an economic disadvantage in national and even international marketing. Regardless of its dairy tradition, Minnesota has seen its market share fall from about seven percent nationally in 1980 to 5.84 percent today. If that doesn't seem like much of a difference, read on, it will be mentioned in a different context later.

Idaho Dairies Booming

Idaho is not generally thought of as a dairy stronghold, but things are changing. That state and its residents have put out a welcome mat for dairy with the result that in the past four years Idaho has jumped from 10th to sixth place in the U.S. California dairymen are relocating to Idaho because its climate is similar to California, many are of Dutch descent and have ethnic ties to areas of Idaho; and the state sees dairying as an opportunity to add value to crops and provide employment.

Two years ago LeSueur Cheese Company formed the Jerome Cheese Company and built a 3.5 million pounds per day cheese plant in Jerome, Idaho, to utilize the growing production. The last cheese plant to be built from the ground up in Minnesota was the Kraft plant in Melrose... in 1968.

While it may be difficult to view the national situation from a seat on a milk stool, changing conditions nationally have a direct impact on the individual dairyman. And since there is very little that the individual can do to control the circumstances, the best he can do is learn to take advantage of opportunities under them.

"A Mini Dairy Mecca"

"Northwestern Minnesota has the potential to be a mini dairy mecca," Stanislawski said. "It has good people, reasonable and productive land resources, processing facilities and a good transportation system. The winter climate may be harsh, but dairy cattle do fine in the newly-developed curtain barns.

"What is needed is a positive attitude, acceptance of technology, adoption of additional cow units, a recognition that it is counter productive to try to do all phases of dairying yourself and a willingness to work with others for mutual benefit."

Stanislawski said that an alliance of dairy with grain farmers, for instance, could be beneficial with an alfalfa hay crop rotation helping to break up the scab cycle in wheat and barley. Partnerships can be formed to spread the work load and permit some time away from the dairy. Or, if farmers don't trust another farmer as a partner, at least arrange to have the youngstock raising or feed production done by someone else.

According to economic models, one job is created for every 70 cows in the state. A 1,000-cow dairy will put $1.5 million into the area economy in wages, health services, feed and other needs and services. The state's dairy herds have dwindled in number to 9,800 now and the number is expected to fall to 6,000 by the year 2001—only three years away.

Growth From Non-Dairymen

It is Stanislawski's expectation that a good deal of dairy development in Minnesota will come from people who have been farmers but have not been dairy people. He sees small grain and sugar beet farmers investing in dairy as a way to diversify. Deficiency payments for grain will be phased out in three years and the future of sugar subsidies and protections is uncertain. For the most part, these will be operated by hired professionals and trained, skilled workers.

Enter Dairy Finance Associates, Inc.

One organization that sees an opportunity in dairy and utilization of an already skilled resource is Dairy Finance Associates, Inc., with offices in Minneapolis. The principals involved in this association believe that the Upper Midwest is strong in the major factors needed for low cost milk production and that the Upper Midwest dairy industry can be cost competitive with any other region of the U.S.

Dairy Finance Associates proposes to construct modern dairy handling and milking facilities and lease them to several dairymen, thereby removing the facilities cost of expansion and permitting the dairyman to concentrate on herd

USDA proposes new rule on milk marketing orders

Congressman Collin Peterson has advised the Northern Watch of a new USDA proposed rule for federal milk marketing order reform which was announced Friday morning, January 23.

The proposed rule reportedly contains some 1,100 pages, but the basic changes include:

- The number of federal milk marketing orders would be reduced from 31 to 11;
- The basic formula price would be changed to better reflect the level and manner in which the components of milk are used;
- Minimum fluid milk (Class 1) prices will be more market-oriented;
- Minor revisions will be made to products included in each class of milk; and
- Common provisions, terms and definitions applicable to all marketing orders will be streamlined.

Further information from the summary of proposed changes will be included in an article in the Wednesday, January 28 issue of the Thief River Falls Times.

SwisPennCo appears to have met stipulation conditions

SwisPenn Co appears to have met conditions of a stipulation agreement with the state and on its way to license renewal.

"Things are running really well right now, in fact better than ever," said SwisPenn Co manager Rick Nordhagen.

Howard Person, Pennington County Solid Waste officer, explained that SwisPenn Co, the county's solid waste handler, had met conditions of a stipulation agreement it was forced into with the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) last summer.

Following reports of problems such as unsightly piles of trash being blown into yards and fields of nearby neighbors, improper handling of compost, and improper storage of solid waste (burned pellets), the MPCA demanded that the site be cleaned up and piles of solid waste, compost and burned pellets be disposed of and handled properly by the end of December 1997. In addition, it fined SwisPenn Co $2,500 for not having its compost process on line by a deadline in June, and $1,460 in costs for testing not completed when required.

It was a tough year for SwisPenn Co. It suffered a number of setbacks — some of which were caused by two major fires at the facility, and others by annoying minor equipment problems that kept recurring. These setbacks led to some big problems.

Pennington County Commissioners remained optimistic about SwisPenn Co's future. According to county officials, the county had learned its lesson in handling solid waste when it had lost thousands of dollars operating the facility, and commissioners had no desire to take over the facility again. In order to encourage SwisPenn Co to meet stipulations in the agreement with MPCA it promised roughly $150,000 in aid. Of the $150,000, $50,000 was given to SwisPenn Co immediately, $35,000 on October 1, $35,000 on November 1, and another $30,000 upon completing certain goals set forth in the stipulation agreement.

Meeting the stipulation agreement meant hauling a significant pile of solid waste (fluff pile) to landfills, obtaining or renting new equipment to dry wet fraction used in making pellets, and filtering compost. Most of the aid to SwisPenn Co was aimed at solving those problems.

Person said two minor things remain to be completed — soil samples need to be taken from where the pile of burned pellets were stored, and the cover crop planted over spread pellets needs to be plowed over. At the earliest, those items can be completed in the spring. Person said another $50,000 from SCORE funds will be given to SwisPenn Co, but it's being withheld because, as Person said, "it never counts" and the site isn't clean enough for the county.

Person and SwisPenn Co has made a great deal of progress. Now they have to work on the permit application process with MPCA. This process requires that they submit information to MPCA to become re-permitted to operate within the state, and negotiate the permit with MPCA. One of the conditions in this process will be to demonstrate that they have a market for the pellets they are producing. Person said he has seen new contracts with new customers and is encouraged by that. SwisPenn Co also has to identify landfills it plans to use. Right now, the MPCA isn't too happy that garbage is being sent to the landfill near Grand Forks, ND he said, but that's a minor point of contention.

Nordhagen confirmed the fact that they have new customers for their pellet. He said he is very optimistic about the future of SwisPenn Co. The composting has improved, production has increased, and the product (pellet) is better.

Times employee Sue Phillip looks on as Johnny Green eats fire during a visit to the newspaper office. Fire-eating is part of the nightclub act of Johnny Green and the Greenmen, the band appearing this week in the lounge of the Best Western Inn in Thief River Falls. The entertaining and talented group also plays a wide variety of music from a repertoire of over 500 songs.

Thief River Falls Rural Fire department has a new fire truck. Representatives of the six township members in the rural fire department association visited the Thief River Falls Fire Department Wednesday to see the new truck. The new truck was delivered in November and became operational in early December. It has a 320 horse power engine, two-person cab, five speed, Allison transmission, a pump which can pump 1,250 gallons of water per minutes and a 1,200 gallon tank. Fully loaded it weighs 32,900 pounds. It is 10-feet, six-inches to the top of its lights. The fire truck, which is owned by the townships of North, Norden, Rocksbury, Smiley, Silverton and Excel, cost $159,000. It replaces a 1975 model fire truck, which they plan to sell. Pictured at the far right of the picture is the newly elected volunteer fire chief, Brad Kosel of Thief River Falls.

Fire eating part of Johnny Green's act

by Kathi Carlson
Northern Watch Reporter

Things got a little hot at the offices of The Times and Northern Watch on Thursday morning when a smiley stranger waltzed through the door, behind the counter and began eating fire. Female staff members gasped and giggled. Customers stared in open-mouthed disbelief. The stranger ate it up — the fire and the attention of his audience.

Johnny Green is his name. Entertainment's his game, and he and his band, the Greenmen, are performing this week in the lounge of the Best Western Inn in Thief River Falls.

Fire-eating is part of the show that includes a little comedy and a wide variety of music.

Green's dossier landed on my desk several days ago and proved to be amazing, almost unbelievable reading — enough to turn one "green" with envy.

Speaking of green, that was the color of Johnny Green's hair for 27 years. He believes that every performer needs a gimmick. Yes, green hair and fire-eating do tend to draw attention.

A Green Bay, WI native, Johnny Green has been entertaining around the world for nearly 40 years. He's performed in 102 countries and his audiences have included kings and queens. According to a press release, a one-night gig for the Shah of Iran turned into an eight month job with Green finding the Shah "a hard man to say 'no' to." Back in the states, four presidents — Nixon, Carter, Reagan and Bush — have witnessed his colorful act.

It would be easier to name the famous people Johnny Green hasn't met than it would be to list all the entertainment giants he has hobnobbed with. Green and his band

Future dairy success depends on making changes

Minnesota's delay in making dairy adjustments means catching up is necessary to be competitive

Growth From Non-Dairymen

It is Stanislawski's expectation that a good deal of dairy development in Minnesota will come from people who have been farmers but have not been dairy people. He sees small grain and sugar beet farmers investing in dairy as a way to diversify. Deficiency payments for grain will be phased out in three years and the future of sugar subsidies and protections is uncertain.

USDA proposes new rule on milk marketing orders

Congressman Collin Peterson has advised the Northern Watch of a new USDA proposed rule for federal milk marketing order reform which was announced Friday morning, January 23.

The proposed rule reportedly contains some 1,100 pages, but the basic changes include:

- The number of federal milk marketing orders would be reduced from 31 to 11.
- The basic formula price would be changed to better reflect the level and manner in which the components of milk are used.
- Minimum fluid milk (Class I) prices will be more market-oriented.
- Minor revisions will be made to products included in each class of milk; and
- Common provisions, terms and definitions applicable to all marketing orders will be streamlined.

Further information from the summary of proposed changes will be included in an article in the Wednesday, January 28 issue of the Thief River Falls Times.

BMS notes Martin Luther King Day

Bemidji - Typically a day when black history and the civil rights movement are commemorated, Bemidji High School celebrated the birthday of Martin Luther King a little differently.

Vince Bye, coordinator of BHS Indian Education, helped make the day more about diversity as he put together an American Indian dance and drum presentation for an assembly.

About 14 students, all accomplished dancers adorned in traditional outfits, danced as Eya-Bay, a drum group from the Red Lake Nation, performed. The Pioneer

His Journey's Just Begun

Don't think of him as gone away -
his journey's just begun,
life holds so many facets - this earth is only one...
Just think of him as resting from the sorrow and tears in a place of warmth and comfort where there are no days and years.
Think how he must be wishing that we could know today how nothing but our sadness can really pass away.
And think of him as living in the hearts of those he touched... for nothing loved is ever lost - and he was loved so much.

SOUPÇON

Sherry LaCoursiere

Let's have some recipes for Super Bowl weekend today, although they would be good any time.

I like these different recipes and use whatever cereals or leftover snacks and crackers strike my fancy in them:

ORIGINAL CRISPIX MIX
7 cups Crispix cereal
1 cup mixed nuts
1 cup pretzels
3 tablespoons margarine, melted
1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
1/4 teaspoon onion salt
2 teaspoons lemon juice
4 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce

Combine cereal, nuts and pretzels in large cake pan (9x13). Set aside.

Stir remaining ingredients together and then gently stir into cereal mixture until well-coated.

Bake at 250 degrees about 45 minutes, stirring every 15 minutes. Spread on paper towels to cool. Store in airtight container.

And here's the other original party mix - both of these can be made a day or so ahead, if you can keep the family out of them:

ORIGINAL CHEX PARTY MIX
6 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 1/2 teaspoons seasoned salt
3/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon onion powder
3 cups Corn Chex cereal
3 cups Rice Chex
3 cups Wheat Chex
1 cup mixed nuts
1 cup pretzels
1 cup bagel chips, broken into 1 inch pieces

Heat oven to 250 degrees. Melt butter in large roaster in oven (I use a large metal bowl). Stir in seasonings.

Gradually stir in remaining ingredients until evenly coated. Bake 1 hour, stirring every 15 minutes. Cool on paper towels. Store in airtight container.

Something even better than those old potato chips:

NACHO POTATO SNACKS
1 large potato
Hot taco sauce
1 (4 ounce) can chopped chilies
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Cut about 20 thin slices of washed, unpeeled potato with peeling on them. Place in single layer on greased baking sheet.

Put taco sauce on each slice, then top with chilies and cheese. Bake about 25 minutes, until potato is tender and cheese is melted. Serve warm.

Here's something you can have ready and bake at the last minute:

ITALIAN PARTY BITES
1 Italian bread shell (12 inch)
1 teaspoon minced onion
1 teaspoon Italian seasoning
1/2 cup shredded mozzarella cheese
1/2 teaspoon Thyme leaves
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 cup thinly sliced vegetables (red pepper, zucchini, mushrooms, onion, etc.)
1 (2.2 ounce) can sliced black olives, drained
1/4 cup shredded Parmesan cheese

Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Place bread shell on cookie sheet.

In bowl, toss minced onion, Italian seasoning, mozzarella, thyme, olive oil and sliced vegetables. Spread mixture over bread shell. Top with olives and Parmesan.

Bake 8-10 minutes and then cut into 2 inch squares.

Simply delicious, serve with a variety of dipping sauces:

SAUSAGE SNACKERS
1 can crescent rolls
Fully cooked smoked cocktail hot dogs

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Separate crescent rolls into triangles and then cut each triangle into thirds. Place one hot dog on each triangle and roll up. Place on ungreased cookie sheets and bake 12-15 minutes until golden.

Have this ready to combine at the last minute too:

VEGGIE PIZZA
2 cans crescent rolls
8 ounce package cream cheese, at room temperature
1 teaspoon dill weed
1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
Chopped or sliced fresh vegetables

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Press crescent roll dough onto ungreased 15x10 inch baking pan to form crust. Bake 13-17 minutes, until golden. Cool fully.

Combine cream cheese, dill and garlic powder and spread over cooled crust. Cover and refrigerate one hour. Top with sliced and/or chopped veggies.

Here's one more trick you can do with those handy dandy crescent rolls - yummy:

SAVORY PARMESAN BITES
1 (8 ounce) package cream cheese, at room temperature
1 1/4 cups Parmesan cheese, divided
2 (8 ounces each) can crescent rolls
1 cup chopped red pepper
1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley or pepperoni, mushrooms, black olives, or whatever you like

Mix cream cheese and 1 cup Parmesan with electric mixer until well blended.

Separate crescent rolls into 8 rectangles and seal perforations. Spread cream cheese mixture on each rectangle and top with red pepper and parsley. Fold long end up over filling to center, then fold up again to enclose filling. Cut each into 4 squares.

Place bites, seam side down, on cookie sheet. Sprinkle with remaining parmesan.

Bake at 350 degrees for 13-15 minutes, until golden.

We've had the snacks - now for something more substantial - this should be a hit with your guests - serve with a crusty loaf of bread and enjoy:

BRATS AND KRAUT
1 (2 pound) bag sauerkraut
1/4 cup brown sugar
3/4 tablespoon caraway seed
1 (12 ounce) beer
2 (6 each) bags of bratwurst, quartered
1 small onion, diced

Sauté onion in butter or margarine and add salt and pepper. Add brats and beer and simmer 5-10 minutes.

Mix drained sauerkraut, brown sugar and caraway seed. Add onions, brats and beer and bake at 350 degrees for 1 1/2 hours.

No guessing about whether or not these beans are tender. Set them to cook and forget them and they'll turn out delicious every time - I made them for a bunch of Boy Scouts once and they said they were the most delicious they'd ever eaten (I suppose all the fresh air they got fishing, along with the charred hot dogs they roasted over the fire, helped a little):

SIMPLY DELICIOUS BAKED BEANS
5 slices bacon, fried crisp and crumbled
2 (16 ounces each) cans baked beans, drained
1/2 green pepper, chopped
1/2 medium onion, chopped
1 1/2 teaspoons prepared mustard
1/2 cup ketchup
1/2 cup hickory smoke barbecue sauce
1/2 cup packed brown sugar

Mix all ingredients in crock pot. Cover and cook on low for 8-12 hours, or high for 3-4 hours.

Something sweet is good too - this is packed with energy food to cheer on the favorite team - and it's quickly make ahead of time with a mix:

WALNUT DATE SNACK BARS
1 package yellow cake mix
3/4 cup packed brown sugar
3/4 cup butter, melted
2 eggs
2 cups chopped dates
2 cups walnuts

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease 9x13 pan.

In large bowl, combine cake mix and brown sugar, blending well. Add margarine and eggs and beat 2 minutes.

Combine dates and walnuts and stir into cake mixture (batter will be stiff). Spread evenly in greased pan.

Bake 34-45 minutes, until edges are golden. Cool 10 minutes, then run knife around edges to loosen. Cool 1 hour and cut into bars.

Another cake mix and prepared frosting make these bars simple, but simply super:

GOOEY CHOCOLATE BARS
1 package chocolate cake mix
1/2 cup oats
1/2 cup butter, softened
1 egg
6 ounce package chocolate chips
1 can coconut almond or pecan prepared frosting
3 tablespoons flour

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour 9x13 inch pan.

Combine cake mix, oats, margarine and egg with mixer until crumbly and well blended. Reserve 1 cup of mixture and press remaining mixture in prepared pan.

Bake at 350 degrees for 8-12 minutes, until slightly puffed. Sprinkle with chocolate chips.

Combine frosting and flour. Spread over chocolate chips and sprinkle with reserved topping. Bake an additional 18 minutes (center will not be set). Cool completely before serving.

NORTHERN WATCH

EDITORIAL OPINIONS

NORTHERN WATCH
Thief River Falls, Minnesota

John P. Mattson, Publisher
Marvin Lundin, Editor
David Hill, Associate Editor

Editorial opinion published under this heading is intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. Unless specified otherwise, the editorials are written by Editor Marvin Lundin and do not represent opinion of other staff members. Opinions in items from other publications may not coincide with the editor's own views but are offered for their general interest.

Our Response To Sierra Club Chapter President

As indicated in the January 17 issue of the Northern Watch, in which a guest editorial by Ginny Yingling was published, we have written to Ms. Yingling with our views on her comments and the timber wolf question in northern Minnesota. That letter is published below as our editorial for today's issue.

Dear Ms. Yingling:

We are in receipt of your opinion editorial regarding the wolf debate and the revised copy dated today. The original had been prepared for publication in the January 17 issue of the Northern Watch, our regional publication which goes to about 25,000 homes in our area, but the revision was received in ample time to make the change noted, and we have done so. It is being published in its entirety as a guest editorial in our normal editorial placement.

My purpose in writing to you is not only to inform you of the receipt of your material and its impending publication, but to be honest and up front in giving you my personal viewpoint on comments in your opinion piece and timber wolves in our state. Allow me to first react to some of your statements.

I have attended only one of the public meetings being conducted by the Minnesota DNR—the one in Thief River Falls—and there were about 200 people there. I have no information about any of the other meetings. There was indeed a good deal of animosity toward wolves expressed at this meeting. I believe it may be a little unfair to term testimony by citizens as "outright falsehoods," although I would admit that not all opinion is unbiased nor all research entirely conclusive. I contend that what is often perceived to be true and/or false may indeed be neither or both, depending on the existing circumstances.

I have no reason to doubt that the DNR estimate of 2,000 to 2,200 wolves in Minnesota (the number presented at the meeting in Thief River Falls) is as accurate an accounting as can be made, given the nocturnal nature of wolves and their general preference for seclusion. I note that you do not actually question the number, only the method of taking inventory. A number of people at the Thief River Falls meeting did question the number, believing it to be far too low. One farmer who had 11 wolves legally trapped and removed for sheep depredation within a half mile of his home over a several month span said he had no idea there were that many wolves in his area. Perhaps use of the term "census" is an unfortunate one. For all their purported intelligence, wolves are notoriously inept at filling out forms, as you indicate that people in a formal census are expected to do. An educated guess, based on the best available information, is all that can be reasonably expected. I believe the DNR is honestly doing this.

I have heard the comment that wolves are no longer afraid of humans, but not necessarily because the wolves aren't hunted. The lack of fear rather stems from an increasing familiarity with humans as the wolf's population grows and its range expands into more highly populated areas where contact with human scent, domestic livestock and pets are commonplace—much as you suggest. Whatever the reason, however, this increased contact seems likely to eventually result in a condition which could trigger a wolf attack on a human. Not only would that be a tragedy for the people involved, but the retaliation against wolves could be devastating. It behooves all people with an interest in wolves, either pro or con, to do everything possible to prevent such a situation from ever happening. People in cities do not invite child molesters to set up residency in their neighborhoods. Residents of rural Minnesota have the same type of reservation about wolves.

I don't doubt that dolphins and whales have attacked people, as you say, but they don't normally stray into yards in northern Minnesota and therefore aren't much of a concern here. And, of course, it isn't necessary for the public to hunt or trap dogs which bite people since they are domestic animals and their locations generally are known.

Your reference to statistics regarding livestock and poultry losses and the conclusions drawn from them are interesting. Others could likely make a case for their cause with manipulation or interpretation of the same numbers, although I certainly understand your point regarding the wolf kill impact on total agricultural production numbers. It undoubtedly is very small. If the birds or animals killed happen to be your birds or animals, however, the loss becomes a good deal more personal and the percentages much larger. The claims process is cumbersome and payment often very slow. Is the number of "270 to 400 illegal wolf kills (by humans) annually" substantiated? If a DNR estimate, does it have any more validity than the population estimate? How does one justify discrediting one number and accepting another?

I disagree that farmers should have to protect their livestock from incursions by wolves. They may indeed pasture animals in areas surrounded by woods, because that is the type of land suitable for grazing livestock. Any repeated aid from a federal program that you mention would have to be in the federal trapping program. The federal government pays no depredation claims. The only financial recovery to farmers from losses to wolves comes from the state, and that through the Department of Agriculture. I am happy to hear that you concur this predation account is under-funded.

Since you have the statistical sheets provided by the DNR regarding livestock losses, I'm surprised you don't also have the sheet entitled "Minnesota Wolf Recovery Facts" which was also distributed at the DNR meetings. If so, you would have had the current information which notes that "In Minnesota, each wolf takes the average equivalent of 15 to 18 deer per year, two-thirds of which are fawns." Thus you would not have had to rely on a 26-year-old U.S. Forest Service study—whatever its validity or lack thereof— made three years before the wolf was listed under the Endangered Species Act.

You are correct in stating that the last two severe winters have taken a toll on the state's deer population. Losses were very high. Unfortunately, wolves were not content to feed on carcasses of deer which died from starvation and exposure. Many people expending their own funds to feed deer and reduce losses to cold and deep snow were disheartened and angered to have wolves move into these concentrations of deer and wantonly kill and injure many which would otherwise have survived. Snowmobilers also reported numerous cases of deer being killed by wolves and left uneaten. Certainly wolves will kill old, weak and injured or unhealthy deer, but the reality is that they are opportunists which will take the most vulnerable prey most readily available. Therefore, when deer populations have been reduced by severe winter conditions, the impact of wolf depredation on the remaining herd is magnified.

I have talked to a number of people in our area and none of them have seen any of the "millions of dollars flooding the state from people hoping to glimpse or hear a wolf in the wild." Most think such a claim borders on falsehood, although they put it a little less delicately. Perhaps the claim should be verified by an actual census.

Although you may be surprised to hear it, people in our area of the state also hope the DNR will apply science and reason to the development of a wolf management plan if and when the Gray Wolf is delisted from the Federal Endangered Species Act. You may also be surprised that nearly everyone up here would like to retain a viable population of timber wolves in Minnesota. The disagreement will probably be only on how many are enough, where they should be located, and how that population and location should be attained. In general, residents of our area would like to have wolves contained to wilderness areas or at least public lands. People who spend those millions of dollars to hear a wolf howl in Minnesota would undoubtedly much more deeply appreciate the experience in a wilderness setting than from the parking lot of their motel.

Ginny, I sense that you are a compassionate person concerned with preservation of a species which is a symbol for wilderness and the natural environment. I applaud you for your interest and willingness to be involved. But I ask you and your organization to not be too willing to dismiss the experiences and feelings of others out of hand simply because they may be different from what you have been told and wish to believe. An attitude of compromise could go a long way in effecting a satisfactory resolution to the wolf debate in Minnesota. I think you will find people from wolf country more conciliatory than you may expect, but they resent being called liars for telling what they have experienced. They deserve no less respect than the species you wish to protect.

Sincerely,
Marvin Lundin

Brighter uses for soybeans keep pouring in

Soybeans keep pouring into colorful new uses, like new soy-based crayons. Using natural soybean oil instead of petroleum-based wax, soy crayons are non-toxic and biodegradable. Of course, the benefits don't end with the environment. Thanks to their soybean oil base, these crayons are also brighter, smoother and less likely to flake.

Soybean benefits are also pouring into the printing industry. Soy ink has become the color ink of choice in 90 percent of our nation's daily newspapers, reaching almost 50 million readers every day. Because of its better, brighter colors, soy ink is also becoming a favorite with commercial printers. All of this from soybeans – and American soybean farmers.

Soybeans. Pouring out a better future for all of us.

performed on the same billing as Buddy Holly in Milwaukee. They have played with such greats as the Beatles and the Rolling Stones. They've appeared with Anne Murray, Arlo Guthrie and countless others.

Green's career began with a band in the late 1950's. In the early sixties, Johnny was told that his hand wouldn't make it "even if you dyed your hair green." Instead of taking that as an insult, a light bulb went on in Johnny Green's head. He accepted the challenge, and the entire five-man band dyed their hair green. The green hair brought them the notoriety they sought and a photo in a 1964 issue of Life magazine.

The group hit the big time when they landed roles in the Batman television series in 1966. Sporting kelly green hair, the five young men appeared in 27 episodes as the evil Joker's henchmen. The band also scored a hit record with the Batman theme song which they played with the Billy May Orchestra.

Batman star Adam West and Johnny Green have remained friends and recently did a car show together in Detroit, MI with CNN reporting on the event.

Green continues to earn royalties from his work in the Batman series, and residuals have increased in recent years in the wake of the successful Batman movies and renewed interest in the original television series.

Another highlight in Green's career was touring overseas with Bob Hope during the Viet Nam era. That association led to another long-standing friendship. Though his pal is now 96 years old and blind, he didn't forget Johnny at holiday time, and Green proudly shared the pictoral calendar he and his wife received from the Hopes this year.

Television appearances didn't stop with Batman either. More famous names surface — Glen Campbell, Joey Bishop, Regis Philhan, David Letterman, to name a few.

One can't begin to list the people this man knows or the places he's been, and unless you understand Japanese, German, Arabic and almost every other foreign language, you can't even read everything that's been written about the nomadic entertainer.

In my estimation, however, seeing is believing. I took in his show on Wednesday night, walking in just in time to catch his "hot" fire-eating act — impressive, unusual.

Things heated up even more when the band started its set. The first three songs were Wilson Pickett's "Mustang Sally," Patsy Cline's "I Fall to Pieces," ZZ Top's "The Grange." And if that wasn't enough variety, Johnny Green shed his bass guitar for an accordian, and the band played the "Beer Barrel Polka."

The group is diverse, and I later learned that it has over 500 songs in its repertoire enabling the band to play to and please any type of audience anywhere.

While the 50-something-year-old Johnny Green has led and promoted the group over the years, the other band members have left and been replaced. He continues to be, however, surrounded by talent — gifted musicians who are as much fun to watch as they are to listen to.

Convinced that this group had something special to offer, I introduced myself to Johnny Green and discovered one of the most personable people I've ever met.

The Wednesday through Saturday gig at the Best Western is the band's second appearance in Thief River Falls in the past six months having played at the Rusty Nail in August.

It's fitting that Johnny Green and the Greenmen are performing in Thief River Falls during the Ironman 250 snowmobile races. Green has a promotional photo taken in the 1960's of him and his band members posing on four Arctic Cat snowmobiles — their bright green hair matching the stripes on the side of the sleds.

From here Johnny Green and the Greenmen will continue to entertain in clubs and casinos across the country. Green is also involved in the promotion of a number of outdoor concerts as well as having his fingers in several other business ventures. On top of that, he plans to do more recording.

There are a few foreign countries he hasn't visited yet. Green hasn't been to all of the African countries yet, and he has plans to go to Dubai — a tiny country in the Middle East.

Does he plan to retire? "No, never," he said. Will Johnny Green and the Greenmen return to Thief River Falls? He replied, "I hope so." Anyone who catches this class act at the Best Western this week will probably hope so too.

Crop Insurance topic of meeting

Crop insurance issues will be discussed by Ken Ackerman, administrator of the USDA Risk Management Agency, at a meeting Friday, February 6, from 9:30 to 11 a.m. in Youngquist auditorium at the University of Minnesota in Crookston.

Farmers, ranchers and all other interested parties are welcome to attend the meeting which will offer a good opportunity to hear about the agency's future plans and to discuss participants' concerns regarding crop insurance.

Ackerman is also speaking at a meeting in Valley City, ND at 3 p.m. that same day.

Future dairy success depends on making changes

management.

Information provided by the association describes the proposal as follows.

"The milking facility designed to serve four dairies is to consist of our freestall barns connected by covered alleyways to holding areas adjacent to the milking center, where two milking parlors are located. The floors of the holding areas and milking parlors are to be cleansed with a flush system to remove manure. Manure removed from the barns, holding areas and milking parlors is to be stored in holding facilities designed to accommodate at least one year of manure production. Periodically manure will be removed and applied, as directed by each client dairy, to crop land as fertilizer.

Facilities for the storage of feed commodities and forages will be available for the use of each dairy. Freestalls are to be equipped with mattresses covered with bedding material selected by each dairy. Alleyways in each barn will be used for feeding, and waterers are to be located to maximize usage.

One Unique Difference

"In all general respects, the facility will not be unlike other large state-of-the-art facilities now in use. The unique difference is that all of the livestock will be owned and cared for by multiple independent dairy producers in separate barns. Facilities for each dairy will include a small office, calving barn and special needs barn with treatment pens, warm treatment room, veterinary supplies, storage room and milking facilities for cows which must be isolated from the main herd.

"Cows in the main herd will be milked by center personnel at designated times agreed to by each producer and the center. The automated milking system will include a cow identification system and will provide each producer reports of milk production at every milking for each cow.

More Time To Manage

Freed of the responsibility for designing, financing, staffing, construction and managing a large scale milking operation, each producer will have substantially more time to work with its herd to assure cow comfort and to achieve optimum levels of productivity and milk quality through attention to nutrition, animal health, genetics and general care.

"Each barn is to be designed to accommodate up to approximately 500 lactating cows and to provide for maximum air movement, including a large ridge opening with ends and sidewalls equipped with wind and water resistant curtains which can be adjusted to retain or expel heat, as needed.

"The center's operating staff will include an on site manager responsible for all facilities, milking operations and relationships with client dairies. Facilities are to be designed for round-the-clock operation with approximately 20 hours scheduled for milking and three periods per day allocated for cleaning and repairs. Approximately 16-18 full-time staff people, each working 40-50 hours per week, will be employed to operate the center."

Potential Client Profile

Dairy Finance Associates projects that its potential clients will be established and successful dairy farms, typically family owned and operated, with 75-150 cows and having decided they need to triple or quadruple the size of their herds to lower operating costs.

As proposed, the lease fee is to be based on a combination of base rent and a percentage of milk revenue. This means that producers and the center alike have a stake in optimizing production and milk quality. For most producers the amount of the fee is expected to be not more, and may be significantly less, than the cash outlay for debt service, milking labor and supplies, power and fuel, supervision, equipment updating, facilities maintenance and taxes required for a stand-alone operation.

"Relief from the demands of three-times-a-day milking, seven days a week, is seen by dairy families as an important contribution to family life," Dairy Finance Associates states. "Relief from the responsibility of supervising a stand-alone milking operation is a further benefit. The essential factors that attract farm families to dairy operations—rising and caring for livestock, growing crops, regular cash income—are, under the proposed style of operation, all retained under the direct control of each dairy producer."

Principals Involved

Principals involved in Dairy Finance Associates are:

• Donald Ault, president, Ag-Nomics Research, a Minneapolis dairy/agribusiness consulting firm;

• Charles Hann, who heads Norwood Capital Group, Inc., a Minneapolis capital management company with interests in petroleum and agricultural business operations;

• Ralph Hofstad, president of Hofstad Associates in Minneapolis who, during his 41 years in ag business, served three regional farm cooperatives in executive level positions, including heading Land O'Lakes;

• William Hueg Jr., professor emeritus in agronomy and plant genetics and former vice president of Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics at the University of Minnesota;

• Leslie Peterson, president, Farmers State Bank of Trimont, who has been engaged in banking and farming for over 40 years and chaired the agricultural division of the American Bankers Association, and

• James Schoettler, president of Mellgren Schoettler Investments, Inc., and a financial analyst with experience on projects for large and small businesses.

Stanislawski notes that a proposal such as that by Dairy Finance Associates is one of several potential answers for some dairies. It is projected that it would take 40 to 50 operations such as that proposed by the association to simply regain Minnesota's lost dairy market share as noted earlier in this article.

"Growth in herd size and making changes in financial structure and herd management may not be the way we would prefer to go," Harold Stanislawski says, "but it may be the way we have to go if Minnesota wants to retain a profitable dairy industry that is competitive and an economic benefit to the entire state."

(Next week: A couple of non-dairy entries in the dairy business.)

Dairy farmers had no pay raise for 18 years

by Terry Nelson
Area Dairy Director
National Farmers Organization

The series of articles in the Watch these past weeks on area dairying has caused me to write this article. I work with dairy farmers every day. It is appalling and scary to see the number of farmers selling out because of not being able to make a living at dairying. I want to share with you a few facts and observations about dairy.

In 1963 the average price for 100 pounds of milk was $3.11. In 1973 the average price was $6.30 and in 1983 it was $12.49. In 1993 the average price was $11.80 and for the first 11 months of 1997 the average price was $11.93. These prices are from the USDA—prices announced for the Minnesota and Wisconsin Series and the basic formula price for each month and the average for the year.

From 1980 through 1997 the price averaged $11.96. Dairy farmers have not seen an increase in their milk price for 18 years. How many businesses would still exist if they were charging the same for their service or product today as they did in 1980? How many people in the labor force are receiving the same wages as they were paid in 1980? How can anyone expect farmers to pay 1997 expenses on 1980 income? Compare how taxes, insurance, equipment, repairs, fuel and all of our living expenses have increased in the last 18 years.

The dairy farmer is receiving the same price for his product as he did 18 years ago. Is it any wonder why dairy farmers are going out of business? Farmers have been told to get bigger, get more efficient, and you can survive. Is that what life is about —surviving? Or is it to make it better for the next generation?

Farmers have also been told that "when your neighbor goes out of business, it will be better for you." They try to pit farmer against farmer.

Look at the number of farmers who have gone out of business. On January 1, 1992, there were 603 dairy farms in the 10 northwest counties of Minnesota. As of January 1, 1998, there are 314—a 48% decrease is just six years. Has that helped the remaining dairy farmers' price? No, it is lower today than it was in 1990.

Are you paying the same for milk in the store today as you did in 1980? In 1980 the retail price was $2.10 per gallon. Today the retail price is $3.50 per gallon. The farmers' share of the milk price in 1980 was 52%; today the farm share is 29%. The consumer price has increased but the farmers have not received any of it. The same story holds true in other farm commodities, including livestock and grain.

Farmers were given the right to organize and set their price in 1922 when the Capper-Volstead Act was passed. Co-ops were formed by farmers for farmers. They were designed to buy in volume and pass the savings on to the members. The co-ops were also designed to process the farmers' production, sell it and return the profits to the farmers.

The co-ops now control 85% of the nation's milk supply but they have forgotten why they were formed and who formed and built them. They have the ability to pay producers the price they need to be profitable but they have become big business. Their leaders receive wages and bonuses based on their profit dollar. The cheaper they buy that milk supply, the higher their profits.

Now the co-ops are using their members' dividend dollars to build mega dairies controlled by the co-op, guaranteeing their supply of milk and not worrying about the farmers who built the co-op and their production. Their goal is to control the milk supply from the cow all the way to the consumer, like poultry and hogs.

In 1955 the National Farmers Organization was formed for the sole purpose of gaining cost of production plus a reasonable profit in all commodities for farmers and ranchers. As farmers organize, National Farmers Organization, through collective bargaining, can obtain the higher prices farmers so desperately need to continue in business.

Farmers are the owners of their production and are the best producers and managers around. They also need to become the best marketers through collective bargaining. Individually they have no strength in the marketplace with the giant companies, but together they can get the prices they need and deserve.

For more information, I invite farmers to call me at 1-800-584-7057.

Self defense and violence prevention seminar Feb. 2

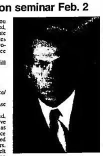
Intended for both men and women, a two-hour self defense and violence prevention seminar will be presented Monday, February 2, in the theater at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls.

Three separate sessions will be conducted at 10 a.m. to 12 noon, 1 to 3 p.m and 7 to 9 p.m., and interested persons are encouraged to attend the one most convenient for them. The seminar sessions are free of charge and open to the public but not suitable for small children. Registration is not required.

The event is being made possible through the efforts of Northland Community and Technical College, the NCTC student senate and the Violence Intervention Project. For additional information contact the Violence Intervention Project at 681-5557.

Speaking on the subjects of personal safety and sexual violence and how they impact the life of individuals will be Bill Nelson, chairman of the board and volunteer advocate at the Central Minnesota Sexual Assault Center.

Nelson said he specifically wants to share what he has learned with men and women who want to make the world a safe place to live.



"The seminar will empower you with essential, but often overlooked, self defense strategies and educate you about sexual violence," states Kelly Rogalla, sexual assault program coordinator with the Violence Intervention Project.

Topics which Nelson will address include:

• Myths vs. Reality;
• Self Defense Techniques;
• Environmental Awareness;
• Roots of Sexual Violence/Sexism, and
• What We Can Do To Decrease Sexual Violence in Our Society.

From his diverse background, Nelson brings a unique perspective to the seminar subject. He has gained insight into sexual violence from his interviews with convicted rapists and child sexual molesters. He is a Fifth-Degree Black Belt Master Instructor in the art of Soo Bahk Do Korean Karate.

Nelson earned his BA degree in psychology with a minor in criminal justice from St. Cloud State University. He has been a private investigator for the past 15 years and is a former police officer. He has published the book Your Weapon Within which will be available at the seminar.

TRF hockey JV beaten

Thief River Falls junior varsity high school hockey team is 3-10 for the year following a 4-1 Saturday loss at Roseau and a 2-0 Tuesday setback at East Grand Forks.

Josh Holmes was in goal for the Thief River Falls squad.

Prowlers rally, edge Gators

■ TRF girls beat Badger/Greenbush-Middle River

Thief River Falls wiped out a 10-point third quarter deficit and beat Badger/Greenbush-Middle River 45-43 Tuesday in girls high school basketball.

The visiting Gators led at each quarter stop, 14-10, 25-20 and 32-31. But they watched a 30-20 third quarter spread disappear in the face of an 11-0 run by the Prowlers. The two teams then swapped leads until Thief River Falls gained the upper hand near the midway point of the fourth quarter.

"We didn't panic when we fell behind," said Thief River Falls coach Jeff Loe. "We were patient. We kept picking away."

The Prowlers comeback was tied to Nicole Kopari, who scored 9 of her game-high 20 points in the fourth quarter.

"We were moving her around earlier in the game," explained Loe. "In the fourth quarter we put her back in the middle and tried to get her the ball more."

While Kopari led the Prowlers' rally, the Gators' problems started when point guard Tiffany Hagen went to the bench with her fourth foul early in the third quarter.

"We were up by 10," noted Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Tom Neibauer. "But when she (Hagen) sat, things came to a standstill for us."

Stefanie Sparby scored 14 points and Missy Smith had 12 for the Gators. Kopari was the Prowlers' only double figure scorer. Rest of the points were spread among several key contributors, mentioned Loe.

The outcome was affected, pointed out Neibauer, when the Gators' standard full court pressure defense proved ineffective against the Prowlers. "I was real disappointed we couldn't handle the man-to-man," he said. "They were breaking our press. After three minutes we went to zone. That's the most zone I've played my whole life."

Thief River Falls was 18-for-51 from the field (35 percent) and 8-for-16 at the free throw line. Badger/Greenbush-Middle River went 14-for-35 from the floor (40 percent) and 13-for-16 at the line. The Gators finished with a 25-20 rebound edge, but also had more turnovers, 16-12.

Results left the Prowlers 5-8 and snapped a six-game win streak for the 11-3 Gators.

Grygla-Gatzke snaps streak

Philip Brateng scored 26 points and grabbed 12 rebounds Tuesday to lead Grygla-Gatzke past Kittson County North 61-52 in a boys high school basketball game played at Lancaster. The victory snapped a nine-game losing streak for the 3-9 Eagles.

It looked for a while, however, like the Grygla-Gatzke losses might continue to mount when Kittson County North jumped out to a 13-4 lead.

But the Eagles quickly rallied. They were within 17-16 by the end of the first quarter and took charge of the game by building a 35-22 halftime lead. It was 48-32 through three quarters.

"We made some adjustments defensively," said Grygla-Gatzke coach Vern Johnson in explaining the Eagles' recovery after falling behind early. "The two middle quarters we played some really good defense. We also did a nice job on the boards, and we were more patient on offense; we were looking for the good shots."

Brateng sparked the comeback with 19 first half points. "He (Brateng) had a great all-around game," noted Johnson.

Alex Anderson added 18 points to the Grygla-Gatzke offense. Jeremy Hostrup scored 23 points to lead the Cougars, picking up 12 in the fourth quarter. Kris Hokanson and Adam Wilebski both contributed 12 points to the Kittson County North total.

Grygla-Gatzke shot 41 percent from the field (23/56) and made 12 of 17 free throw attempts. Kittson County North shot only 36 percent from the floor (20/56) and went 8-for-15 at the line. The Eagles finished with a 31-19 rebound advantage over the Cougars, who topped the turnover charts 16-9.

Nordics lose to Warroad 59-51

Jon Doebler scored 24 points and Warroad shot 51 percent from the field (24/47) Tuesday in a 59-51 boys high school basketball win over Marshall County Central.

"They shot the ball awfully well, and we didn't shoot it very well," reported Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland.

Warroad led at the quarter stops 13-8, 32-28 and 46-41. Marshall County Central pulled even at 47-47, but couldn't produce a lead.

In addition to the hot shooting touch, Warroad won out on most loose ball situations – many of them leading to lay-ups after gaining possession on scrambles near the basket.

"The ball was tipped around all night," noted Ueland, "but we couldn't convert on the opportunities. They're a lot quicker than we are; they got most of the loose balls."

It was the third straight loss for the 8-6 Nordics. "All the things that were going right for us earlier this year are now going right for the opposition," noted Ueland.

Caleb Holthusen scored 14 points and Jon Donarski had 11 for the Nordics.

Marshall County central was 19-for-48 from the field (40 percent), while Warroad went 24-for-47. Both sides were 9-for-15 at the free throw line. The Nordics had more rebounds (26-25) and more turnovers (14-13).

B/G-MR shooters notch easy 73-28 win over Warroad

A 22 percent shooting performance by Warroad and 50 percent shooting by Badger/Greenbush-Middle River added up to a one-sided 73-28 win for the Gators in a late-reported Friday (Jan. 16) boys high school basketball match-up.

"We shot well and they didn't," pointed out Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Eldon Sparby.

The Gators led only 15-11 at the end of the first quarter, but had a 36-15 halftime cushion and enjoyed a 57-20 third quarter spread.

Difference in shooting also carried over the free throw line, where the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River was 16-for-23 and Warroad went just 5-for-15.

Pioneers beat Raiders 50-39...

Strong finish nets win for Northland

Northland out-scored Central Lakes 16-0 over the final 3 1/2 minutes Wednesday as the Pioneers turned a five-point deficit into a 50-39 Minnesota Community College Conference women's basketball victory over the Raiders.

Sarah Houle of Central Lakes scored from underneath the basket to give the visitors a 39-34 lead with 4:01 to play. That matched the biggest spread in the game, and it would also prove to be the Raiders' final points of the night.

Northland's game-winning finishing kick was jump started by Jenny Johnson's 3-point basket from the side with 3:36 to play. That was followed by a Darlene Nelson free throw and a Naomi Wilebski basket on the inside to put the Pioneers on top for good, 40-39, with 2:02 remaining.

Eight straight points at the free throw line (on 10 tries) then iced it. A fast break lay-up by Wilebski with 2.8 seconds on the clock finished the scoring.

Until Northland took over at the end, the two teams both struggled to get into a rhythm in a game that featured more turnovers (37) than field goals (35). The Pioneers shot just 28 percent from the field (17/60) and turned it over 20 times. The Raiders shot an only slightly-better 32 percent from the floor (18/56) and lost the ball 17 times.

"It was kind of a ragged game," admitted Northland coach Rick Nikunen. "We finally settled down the last five minutes and quit turning it over."

The Pioneers won with 13-for-21 free throw shooting, compared to a 2-for-9 showing by the Raiders. Northland also finishing with a 42-31 rebound advantage – 15 of those coming on the offensive end.

"Defense won it," said Nikunen. "We're going through kind of a mid-season slump right now as far as offense goes."

Northland went into halftime with a 20-19 lead as Nelson scored on a drive with five seconds left. Central Lakes went ahead 29-27 when J.J. Steinhurst scored with 10:53 left in the game, and the Raiders didn't give the lead up until their stretch drive collapse.

"This was a big game; it will go a long ways in determining a state tournament spot," said Nikunen, referring to the Northern Division standings that, at the start of the night, showed Vermilion at 4-0, Fergus Falls and Central Lakes 3-1, Northland and Itasca 2-2, Mesabi 1-3, Rainy River 1-4, and Hibbing 0-3. Top four regular season finishers in the eight-team division earn MCCC playoff spots.

Nelson scored 14 points, Johnson 13 and Wilebski 12 to lead the Pioneers, who are 7-5 overall. Central Lakes did not have a double figure scorer.

Green Wave skates to 4-2 win over TRF

Regrouping from a poor showing in a 2-0 Saturday loss at Roseau, Thief River Falls put together a strong effort Tuesday in a Section 8A high school hockey match-up against East Grand Forks. However, the result was the same - a loss. This time by a 4-2 margin, dropping the visiting Prowlers to 2-13.

"I thought we played pretty well," said Thief River Falls coach Scott Bergland, who let it be known in no uncertain terms that he wasn't happy with the Prowlers' performance against Roseau. "We played a pretty good hockey game against a quality opponent."

Early-game goals by Kyle Cash, who scored just 41 seconds into the contest, and Brian Bakken, who scored at the 3:47 mark, provided the Green Wave to a 2-0 head start.

Thief River Falls matched that with goals by Wade Chiodo and Jared Reierson just 1:31 apart in the first five minutes of the second period.

East Grand Forks broke the tie on a Travis Carlveau goal 4:36 into the third period and added an insurance goal by Cash with 34 seconds left.

Thief River Falls, meanwhile, fell into a season-long pattern with a handful of near-misses that could have turned the game in the Prowlers' favor, pointed out Bergland.

Sophomore Mike Dower had 31 saves in the Thief River Falls nets. East Grand Forks goalie Wade Holtman finished with 23 saves.

Scoring

First period - EGF, Kyle Cash (Brian Bakken), :41. EGF, Bakken (Tyler Palmiscno-Cash), 3:47.

Goalie saves - TRF, Mike Dowers 10-12-9-31. EGF, Wade Holtman 8-8-7-23.

Huskies fall to Bears

Goodridge had trouble on both offense and defense Tuesday in a 62-48 boys high school basketball loss to Lake of the Woods.

"We couldn't shoot from the outside," reported Goodridge coach Eric Mickelson. "They sat in a zone and there was nothing we could do about it."

And it wasn't any better at the other end of the court, according to Mickelson. "I was disappointed in our defensive effort," he said. "We're just not playing aggressive enough on defense."

The visiting Bears trailed 13-12 at the end of the first quarter, but they were ahead 28-18 at halftime and were up 44-30 through three quarters.

Rian Berg scored 20 points to lead Lake of the Woods. Ben Hanson paced Goodridge with 18 points. "Ben had a good game," pointed out Mickelson. "He's been pretty consistent."

Goodridge shot only 35 percent from the field (17/49), while Lake of the Woods shot 47 percent (28/60). At the free throw line, the Huskies were 12-for-17 and the Bears went 2-for-4. Goodridge had a 27-20 rebound advantage. Lake of the Woods topped the turnover charts 14-13.

It was the fourth straight loss for the Huskies, who are now 5-8.

Raiders pull away, beat NCTC 102-82

■ Northland men fall to 1-12

Central Lakes, after threatening to break the game open on several occasions, finally took charge at the end as the Raiders posted a 102-82 Wednesday night Minnesota Community College Conference Northern Division men's basketball win over Northland in Thief River Falls.

The Pioneers overcame four double digit deficits to stay in the game, but they couldn't keep pace down the stretch. Trailing 64-51 following a three-point play by the Raiders' Gus Bollum with 14:46 to play, Northland relied heavily on the strong inside play by Chaka Ali to get back in it. A put-back by the 6-4 freshman pulled the Pioneers within 73-70 with 8:05 remaining.

Northland was still within 84-78 on a base line drive by Ali with 4:50 left, but that's when Central Lakes put together a game-securing 11-0 run. Andre Watts began it with a three-point play and Bollum finished it with a fast break lay-up as the spread zoomed to 95-78 with 2:37 on the clock.

Two sets of free throws by Northland's Grant Skibicki and Dwight Goodwin interrupted the Central Lakes outburst, but the Raiders tacked on seven more points in the final 1:49 to win going away.

"We played hard for 35 minutes, then gave it away in the last five," offered disappointed Northland coach Ted Krize. "I thought we had them."

Despite 17 first half turnovers, the Pioneers played the Raiders on near-even terms while trailing just 46-41 at intermission.

"We had too many first half turnovers," noted Krize moments after the conclusion of the contest that dropped Northland to 1-12 for the year. "I don't know what the turnover situation was in the second half, but I do know we had poor shot selection."

Ali finished with a game-high 30 points, while Josh Whitlock netted 18, Goodwin 16 and Skibicki, the newest member of the team, contributed 10. Five Raiders hit double figures, led by Bollum, a 6-4 sophomore from Brainerd, with 28 points.

Northland was 29-for-62 from the field (47 percent) and stayed in the game with 24-for-29 free throw shooting. Central Lakes enjoyed a 41-for-72 shooting performance from the floor (57 percent) and made 14 of 23 free throw attempts. The Raiders finished with a 34-30 rebound edge. The Pioneers had more turnovers, 27-21.

The week began with Fergus Falls and Central Lakes tied atop the Northern Division standings at 4-0, followed by Mesabi 2-2, Vermilion and Rainy River 1-2, Hibbing 1-3, and Northland 0-4. Top four regular season finishers earn MCCC state tournament spots.

Gators handle Storm

Strong play under the basket earned Badger/Greenbush-Middle River to a 62-53 boys high school basketball win over Stephen-Argyle Tuesday.

The Gators out-rebounded the Storm 39-27 and had a huge advantage at the free throw line, where they were 21-for-29, compared to a 1-for-4 night for the visitors.

"We controlled the inside game," explained Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. "We put the ball inside and drew a lot of fouls."

Stephen-Argyle stayed close with outside shooting, hitting 8 of 15 from 3-point range.

The Gators led at the quarter stops 14-6, 28-18 and 38-36. They iced it with 15-for-18 free throw shooting in the fourth quarter – most of them down the stretch with the Storm backed into a must-foul situation.

Jeremy Vacura 12-for-12 at the free throw line as part of a game-high 25-point game for the Gators. Teammate Shane Nelson netted 16. Steve Crummy scored 12 points, Reece Setterholm 11 and Jared Hanson 10 for Stephen-Argyle.

From the field, the Gators were 23-for-64 (36 percent) and the Storm went 30-for-65 (46 percent). Both sides had 12 turnovers.

Thief River Falls held leads at each quarter stop Tuesday en route to a 44-39 girls junior varsity high school basketball win over Badger/Greenbush-Middle River.

Kim Almquist scored 14 points to lead the winners, who led at the breaks 12-9, 18-14 and 31-22.

Second half fast break lifts Eagles past RLCC 68-46

East Grand Forks speeded things up in the second half Tuesday, and as a result, ran away with a 68-46 boys high school basketball win over Red Lake County Central.

The Mustangs, who had an 11-10 lead at the end of the first quarter, played the Eagles to a 21-21 first half tie before the Sacred Heart offense went into fast break mode. The winners went ahead 44-37 in the third quarter and stretched it to a 22-point spread over the final eight minutes.

"They increased the tempo, and we didn't get back on defense," explained Red Lake County Central coach Chris McLean.

It was the fifth straight loss for the 3-9 Mustangs, who once again had trouble getting shots to fall in a 32 percent 18-for-56 performance from the field. "It was another awful shooting night," noted McLean, whose team has struggled to hit even the 40 percent mark during the losing streak.

The Mustangs were 6-for-10 at the free throw line; the Eagles made 8 of 14.

Mahnomen/Waubun is 39-32 winner over TRF wrestling team

Thanks to three open-weight forfeits, Mahnomen/Waubun built an early lead, then held off a Thief River Falls comeback to emerge a 39-32 dual meet high school wrestling winner over Thief River Falls Tuesday.

Trailing 27-10 after seven of the 13 matches had been completed, the visiting Prowlers rallied behind wins by Josh Hagen at 145 pounds, Josh Stinson at 152 and Jeremy Houske at 160 to pull within 27-26.

The Thief River Falls charge was stopped at 171, but a second period pin by Cody Crapeau at 189 chopped the Mahnomen/Waubun lead to just 33-32. However, a first period pin by heavyweight Miles Baker put an abrupt end to the Prowlers' bid for their first win in six dual meet starts.

Earlier in the evening, the visiting Prowlers came up with wins by Beau Abrahamson at 103 and Jon Swanson at 135.

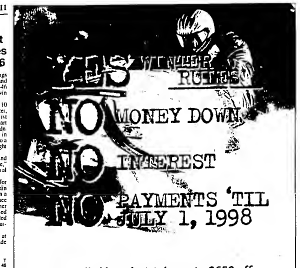
TRF swim squad to host Park Rapids in Tuesday dual meet

After making back-to-back trips to Crookston, the Thief River Falls boys high school swim team will be at home Tuesday when the Prowlers host Park Rapids Area in a 5 p.m. dual at the Franklin Middle School pool. It'll be just the third home appearance of the year for the Brian Olsen-coached Thief River Falls squad.

The Prowlers competed in the Crookston Invitational Friday (Jan. 16) and returned to the Pirates' pool for a triangular Tuesday.

Moorhead won the invitational meet with 355 points, followed by Grand Forks 210, Detroit Lakes 203, Park Rapids Area 159, Crookston 153, Thief River Falls 91, and Perham 88.



In the triangular, Bemidji collected 149 points, Crookston 94 and Thief River Falls 63.

"A lot of guys are dropping times," pointed out Olson, noting that the Crookston pool is measured in meters, compared to yards featured at most pools, which requires a bit of adjusting in figuring individual performances.

Karlstad

Karlstad, located north of Thief River Falls on Hwy. 59, is the second largest city in Kittson County with a population of approximately 872. The city boasts a number of businesses, recreation areas and schools. Around 1883 a Swede named Anthony Carlson established a homestead in the country west of Twin Lakes. In 1904 the Soo Line Railroad built a track across Carlson's farm and purchased acreage for a townsite from him.

The new town needed a name. Some suggested Klingville and Clayton. Karlstad was suggested and chosen, honoring both Mr. Carlson and the city of Karlstad in Sweden.

Pelen, a village to the east that had been busy during stagecoach days, moved its buildings to Karlstad. Early businesses included two hotels, a blacksmith shop, two livery barns, a general store, a mercantile, a lumber mill, a flour mill and an elevator. Another store building was moved in from Fir, about three miles southwest of Karlstad. The first business actually built in Karlstad was the Pearson Hotel.

Today the city of Karlstad is home to eight churches. In addition to the public school system, the Heritage Christian School is located in Karlstad.

Moose Park includes 16 campsites with water and electrical hookups, bathroom facilities, two picnic shelters, two tennis courts, two softball fields, playground equipment and two sand volleyball courts.

Karlstad Country Club is a nine-hole public golf course with grass greens and a newly remodeled clubhouse.

There is a municipal skating rink in the city.

The 8,200 acre Twin Lakes wildlife management area is located four miles northeast of Karlstad on State Hwy. 11.

Businesses of all types are located in Karlstad to meet the needs of the residents and surrounding farm community.

In addition to the activities provided in the churches and schools, there are a number of organizations which encourage adults and children alike to be involved in their community — Lions Club, Mosse Country Gardens Club, Halma Ideal 4-H Club, Karlstad City and Commerce and Royal Neighbors.

Alicia Haviland Takes on ED with a Loving Vengeance

Alicia Haviland blows into a room like a whirlwind, raising her audience's understanding of the misery she calls ED like dust on a hot August day.

At her presentations, a rubber snake is curled around her neck and shoulder, and breathes its phony breath into her ear. "ED reminds me of this," she says, gripping your gaze with hers and refusing to let go. "This snake is what ED is like. It's like carrying around this invisible fear all the time. It demoralizes your self-esteem. It continually tells you you're not good enough. You don't look good enough. You don't act good enough. You're too fat. You're too overweight. It continually takes the wonderful person you are and beats you up."

ED is short for Eating Disorder, which Haviland defines as any obsession over food. The most well-known manifestations of ED are anorexia, bulemia and obesity, but there are others.

"I don't have a problem with dieting. Just excessive dieting," Haviland says. "Any diet taken to an extreme is ED talking," she says. "I don't care if it's the grapefruit diet or the low-fat diet or the cookies and milk diet. Whenever you find yourself obsessing about what you eat or what you don't eat, that's ED."

Haviland recommends all things in moderation. "Breathe, eat, sleep, exercise in even proportions. Any imbalance of one of these elements allows an unsettling consequence. If you can't do it alone, in the right way, then you need to get help. You have to respect and take care of your body. It's the only one you get."

Haviland points out the Food Guide Pyramid as a good guide. "We don't want you fat; we don't want you skinny; we want you healthy. You need protein, carbs and yes, fats, too. The pyramid doesn't say 'no fat.' It says, 'a little bit of fat each day.'"

Haviland says eating disorders are in epidemic proportions right now. There are many reasons why. "It starts with day 1, when they put you in the nursery and everyone asks, 'How much does the baby weigh?'" she says. "And we say, 'Oh, what a chubby baby,' or, 'Oh, what a skinny baby.' We're classifying babies according to their appearance and weight from day one!"

Then there's the TV. "I went into 72 houses, and every piece of furniture faces the TV. I believe we've created a demi-god. Our conversations are rare of late," Haviland says. "If you want children to learn the ABCs, what do you do? Repeat it, repeat it, repeat it, repeat it. If you want them to learn crime, drugs, sex, violence and the unhealthy need for perfection, what do you do? Plug 'em into that television set and have them sit there for hours and hours! An unrealistic world of expectations begins to take form. ED waits for those moments of shaky self-esteem." She notes that everywhere we turn, we are being given obsessive messages about food.

"If you look on every single cover on every single magazine, there's something about some kind of diet. We eat, breathe and sleep dieting." She points to the front pages of popular magazines, or to a poster of Pamela Sue Anderson, star of Baywatch. "These pictures are probably computer altered or airbrushed to make them look perfect," she notes, pointing to Anderson's unusually tiny waist and hips. She holds up a Barbie doll. "And how could any girl possibly measure up to this? We must teach that Barbie is a toy, and

Daycare Provider Workshop Presented by Northwest Medical Center

Daycare providers carry a large responsibility to the children they care for as well as their parents. Their skills and knowledge concerning safety, infections, nutrition and development need to be continuously updated. As a community hospital, Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls recently provided a workshop for area daycare providers with information to help them continue giving quality child care.

On Tuesday, December 2, 1997 Northwest Medical Center joined together with representatives from Pennington County Social Services and Inter-County Nursing to present this workshop to daycare providers in the area. Presenters at the workshop were Tammy Vatthauer, Registered Dietitian from Northwest Medical Center, Sharon Jorde, RN, CIC, Infection Control Nurse at Northwest Medical Center, Ken Yetterdin, representative from Pennington County Social Services and Anita Cardinal, RN of Inter-County Nursing. Topics covered were: communicable disease prevention and infection control, child abuse; identifying and reporting, and nutrition and food safety.

Nearly 50 daycare providers from Thief River Falls, Oklee, Red Lake Falls, Plummer, Newfolden, Warren and Strandquist participated in the workshop. In response to information provided by Sharon Jorde, RN regarding Infection Control, one participant stated, "I just filled my soft soap container without washing it out, but from now on I will rinse it out or just buy a new one". Response was extremely positive by participants and Northwest Medical Center looks forward to providing more workshops of this type to area providers.

Participants received a certificate providing credit for two hours of on-going training requirements for licensed day care providers.

NORTHWEST MEDICAL CENTER MISSION STATEMENT

Northwest Medical Center seeks to provide high quality, comprehensive, community-oriented, physical and emotional health care services, in a cost effective manner, to the residents of northwestern Minnesota. Northwest Medical Center intends to achieve this mission by providing community-oriented medical, health education, human and social services. Northwest Medical Center intends to pursue cooperative endeavors with other health care providers while enhancing its role as a regional leader in the provision of those services and remaining a financially vital health care organization.

Cookbook Enthusiasm!

The first Northwest Medical Center Cookbook was printed in 1994 as a fund-raiser for the Northwest Medical Center Foundation. The first 1,000 copies sold quickly and are no longer available. We are very proud of our first effort and pleased that so many people enjoyed it.

Work on Volume II began in June of 1997. Could we meet the same goal as our last book - 1,000 recipes? We've come very close with over 950 recipes included in this book. We've made every effort to not duplicate recipes.

Again, profits from this cookbook will go to the Northwest Medical Center Foundation whose mission is to raise and allocate funds to ensure quality, personalized health care in our area.

Our hope is that you will not only enjoy using the wonderful recipes found in this cookbook, but that you may notice the name of an employee who may have cared for you or one of your family members. Although not all employees at Northwest Medical Center are directly involved in patient care, we all work each day with a focus on our patients and the care they receive.

NWMC Volume II cookbooks may be purchased by visiting the NWMC Auxiliary Gift Shop on the ground floor of the medical center or by calling Gail Holland at (218) 681-4240, ext. 210. Cost is $10.00.

NWMC Flood Stories are Full of Hope

On the night of Friday, April 18, 1997, staff members of NWMC and area volunteers learned that they had less than four hours to prepare a new home for the staff and 122 residents of the East Grand Forks Good Samaritan Center, which had to be evacuated because of the Great Flood of 1997. The Thief River Falls community never realized that it could do the task. The only question was, What to do first?

To create a make-shift "dorm," volunteers went to work in the gymnasium of the Northland Community College and the job was accomplished well before the first National Guard trucks rolled into town at about 10 P.M.

Sandy Parker, RN, C&NC Supervisor from NWMC and Deb Erret, RN, Director of Nursing from NCTC met at Northland Community College to assist in coordinating preparations. Theresa McNerney, Director of Medical Records at NWMC and a volunteer that night says, "It was amazing. Beds, racks, medical records—the National Guard literally moved the entire nursing home. We tried to get that semblance of organized chaos that initial residents arrived."

"The residents started arriving after midnight," says Gail Holland, Public Relations Coordinator for NWMC. "The staff of NWMC worked alongside the staff of Good Sam and members of the community until about 4 in the morning."

By 8 A.M., things had settled down a bit. But just after the residents had eaten breakfast, volunteers started pouring in, and the action reached a new high. Deb Erret, Director of Social Services for NWMC says, "At the beginning, it was so chaotic that we didn't know who was a resident and who was a volunteer!" According to Holland, "The volunteers never stopped coming that weekend. It was fun watching all these people come up with ideas on how to get organized."

There was much that needed to be done to ensure the well-being of the residents. Nursing duties had to be assigned, social activities arranged and food services coordinated. The Good Samaritan staff helped the NWMC personnel organize the volunteers. There was only one happy problem: There were more volunteers than jobs. "People wanted to help so much that even if they hadn't signed up to volunteer, they came anyway," says Marilyn Wigness, retired Director of Nursing at NWMC and Volunteer Coordinator of the Good Sam project.

Wigness adds, "After about two days, the enthusiasm waned, so it became our jobs to get volunteers. The response from people was fabulous. We rarely got a no. We had sheet (2 hour) volunteer segments to help feed residents and get them to bed. No matter what we asked for, people helped." She laughs. "And people kept baking for us—there were always cookies!"

"I learned how giving the people of Thief River Falls are," Wigness continues. "When we would call people to work a shift or help in some way, help came pouring in. Our problem became, how fast can we get what Good Sam needs?" It was both individuals and businesses. I couldn't believe how wonderful people were."

Wigness notes that she received help from another source, too. "On one of the more chaotic days, three or four individuals scheduled to volunteer called to cancel, for one reason or the other. I was miserable, knowing we needed those positions filled immediately. But in each instance, someone called and volunteered their time and expertise to fill these open slots. I know with absolute certainty God's hand was at work to help us. There could be no other explanation."

"We had volunteers from ages 12 to 70," Linda Spyhalski, Volunteer Coordinator, explains. "It was especially impressive with the youth. This one young man, about 13 years old, came out with his boy scout leader. But later came on his own because he said it was so much fun.

He'd ride his bike out and take two shifts back-to-back. These were just people who had been sandbagging and got blisters on their hands, but would walk across the street to see if they could help us."

McNerney says there was no shortage of nurses either. "Nurses came from Thief River Falls and the surrounding communities, as well as nurses and nurse assistants from Minneapolis, St. Cloud and Rochester who gave up vacation time to come up and help."

The volunteers were not the only ones who performed impressively under such trying circumstances. Spyhalski says, "One thing that impressed me were the residents. The first night some were scared and confused, but it just took a very short time before they got over their fear." The Good Samaritan residents stayed at the college for almost 4 weeks. And NWMC was there the entire time. Linda Spyhalski says, "It was a real benefit to know the hospital was behind us. Dan Olson, Associate Administrator for NWMC, was out there every day. We knew if we really needed something we couldn't find in the community, we could call and they would bring it over. It wasn't necessarily big things—like a laundry cart—but whatever it was, the hospital helped. If we had a handicapped resident,

Levinson Creates "Following Through" and MotivAider® to Help Others Reach Goals

Have you ever started an exercise program but never got past putting the stationary bike in the bedroom? Do you write New Year's resolutions that seem to fade into oblivion before February? Maybe it's not your fault.

"We humans are poorly designed for follow through," says Steve Levinson, PhD, a clinical psychologist and director of NWMC's Mental Health Division. "Our brains include some very advanced equipment along with some extremely primitive equipment. Unfortunately, the advanced and the primitive often work at cross purposes with each other. The brain is capable of producing well thought-out plans--intentions--that map out exactly what we should do to get what we need and want out of life in the long run. But because the brain is also designed to constantly monitor and react to things around us, we routinely get distracted from our plans. We get blown off course. It's ironic: First, we use the awesome power of the brain to decide what we should do. Then the very same brain causes you to do something else instead.

"You can wake up one morning and say, 'That's it. I'm going on a diet. I don't like the way I look, and I don't like the way I feel.' Two hours later when you're confronted with a fattening, gooey caramel roll, the same brain that put you on a diet says, Let's eat!'"

Levinson says it's like being a passenger in a car that's equipped with two steering wheels and two drivers that have very different ideas of where you should go. "The advanced driver thinks things through and tries to steer a course that's best for you in the long-run. Meanwhile, the primitive driver steers you towards every distraction along the way," he says.

Levinson's new book, Following Through: Why We Don't, How We Can, aims to change forever the way people experience and treat their own good intentions. To be published in 1998 by Kensington Publishing Company of New York, Levinson's book is co-authored by Pete Greider, a nationally-known "peak performance" consultant to businesses, such as the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company and sports teams like the Orlando Magic.

"We believe people have been taking a bum rap for years," says Levinson. "It's not really their fault that they do such a lousy job of following through. Poor follow through is the result of the mixed-up way the human mind is designed."

But Levinson's book does a lot more than just get people off the hook for failing to follow through. It goes on to teach people methods and strategies that Levinson and Greider have developed for following through despite the mind's design problems. "The book begins with the premise that because having a good intention doesn't automatically mean you'll follow through on it, you have to learn how to follow through manually."

Levinson cites an example of an obese New England man whose downfall was overeating in restaurants. The man decided he should just stay out of restaurants altogether. But when he failed to follow through on his intention, he devised a radical plan. He created and put up "Wanted" posters of himself all over the area, with the promise of a $25,000 reward to anyone who caught him eating in a restaurant! The man's weight loss was as dramatic as his plan: He lost over 125 pounds.

Not all follow-through strategies involve putting pressure on yourself, according to Levinson. He describes, for example, what he calls the "Leading the Horse to Water" strategy, which is especially helpful if you want to start an exercise program. "If you insist that you must work out, say, 20 minutes at a crack, 3 days a week, you may never successfully launch your exercise routine," says Levinson. "If, on the other hand, you require yourself to do nothing more than put on your exercise clothes and go sit on the seat of your exercise bike, and you invite yourself to get off at any time that it feels burdensome to be there, you'll build a routine that's not worth avoiding. Eventually, you'll feel, Oh well, I'm already here. I might as well just start pedaling.'"

Following Through is an outgrowth of a device called the MotivAider® that Levinson invented several years ago to help people follow through on their intentions. "The MotivAider® is a remarkably simple electronic device that's designed to keep any intention on the front burner of your mind," Levinson says. The MotivAider®, which is marketed by Behavioral Dynamics, Inc., a Thief River Falls company that Levinson co-founded in 1987, is used by organizations like the Mayo and Menninger Clinics and the Sister Kenny Institute, as well as by athletes, business leaders and students all over the world.

Levinson says he's amazed at all the good ways people have found to use his follow through invention. He tells the story of a Texas man who used the MotivAider® for spiritual purposes. The man wrote, "I used to go to church once a week. Now with the MotivAider®, I go once every five minutes all day long! It's been a wonderful blessing."

Levinson is passionate about helping people follow through on their intentions. And he's proud to work at NWMC and to live in northwestern Minnesota. "To me, rural doesn't mean backwards. It means having a chance to create and pursue innovative ways of doing things," he says. "I feel good about the fact that every day experts in my field from all over the world call or write to order a product I created right here in Thief River Falls."

Pennington County and NWMC Work Together to Treat Children and Their Families

It's the third night this week that your preteen hasn't come home on time. You've tried talking to her and grounding her for a day. Instead of getting better, the problem seems to be getting worse. You don't think she's in any trouble, but it looks like some might be headed your way if you can't gain her cooperation and trust. What do you do now besides worry?

Call the Information Line of the new Family Preservation Center, (218) 683-7180. "We have a telephone information line that parents can call to talk with a mental health professional free of charge, without entering any system or doing any paperwork, to get advice on parenting," says Terry Demars, Director of the Pennington County Family Preservation Project.

The Pathfinder Children's Center, the project's residential facility, is the latest innovation in family preservation. It looks and functions like a house, but acts as a resource center to enhance parenting skills and a child's emotional well-being. The Center, located at 923 North Atlantic Avenue in Thief River Falls, is a 5300 square foot building with six bedrooms (10 beds). It will include a resource room for the community, including internet access and videos, magazines and books on parenting, child development and emotional disorders. The Department of Human Services has licensed the treatment center to serve up to 10 children, ages birth through 17. There is generally little or no charge or membership fee to use facility. Residents are usually referred to the Center by a parent, health-care professional, court or police department, or other social service agency. "The Pennington County Department of Welfare and Human Services needs to approve placement," Demars says. "Assuming we have an opening, we can provide services within minutes or the hour, once a referral has been made. We're going to serve these children as quickly as we can."

The Pennington County Family Preservation Project, including the Pathfinder Children's Center, was made possible through the vision and support of the Pennington County Welfare Board and, the Pennington County Family Collaborative, a group of agencies serving the children of Pennington County.

"It's very hard to get kids into most traditional treatment centers these days, so by the time they get into the centers, the problems are large and hard to fix," Demars explains. "We're trying to create a center where we can get the children treatment early on, while the problems are still fixable. This facility will serve only Pennington County children. It will allow us to get children in earlier."

The goal is to prevent major problems while keeping children in need of treatment close to home. "The purpose of the facility is to allow children, whenever possible, to remain with their families," Demars continues. "And when it's not possible, to at least allow them to remain in the community. Some of these (other treatment centers) make an effort to get the family involved, but when you have to drive two hours or more to have a family session, it doesn't work. There will be a significantly better transition from this treatment center to life at home than there is in other treatment centers, simply because this treatment facility is in the community and the children will be able to engage with their families on a regular basis."

For example, in the case of the child who continually brakes curfew, one night in the center may be sufficient to fix the problem. "The length of treatment depends on the child, but it should be significantly shorter since our project is based on a much broader model, including home-based counseling, parenting groups and activities in the community," Demars says. "If a child comes to us, he or she will not only be receiving the services of the Children's Center, but the services of the Pennington County Family Preservation Project." These include anger management groups for children; parent support groups; parenting groups, where parents develop specific parenting skills; the free telephone info line and home-based counseling. In most cases, the services of both the Project and the Center are free or of minimal cost to families. Instead, the county and grants cover most of the projected costs.

The Center is staffed with mental health-care professionals. These include a psychologist and a licensed clinical social worker as the Center's director. These will enable the Center to deal with problems like Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD), depression and behavior problems. "We have a strong mental health presence, and we intend to provide mental health treatment for those children who need it," Demars says. But the Center won't be taking in all deeply troubled children. "We're not planning on serving children with violent behavior or children with a recent history of sexual deviancy."

Demars notes, "We don't want to psychologize these kids to death. We want more of a family kind of atmosphere. We want people who want to connect with the kids." Allan and Peggy Kuck have been hired as the houseparents. They're former satellite home parents from Thief River Falls. Peggy and Allan formerly had a foster home for children who had been in the correctional system. "They're a couple who have experience managing children with emotional difficulties," Demars says. Peggy is house parent and coordinator of the treatment center. Allan is a houseparent and activity coordinator.

Demars says the treatment center's strengths lie in its staff, its closeness to home, but most importantly, its emphasis on strengthening family ties. "We're going to have a strong emphasis on family involvement right from the get go," Demars says. "Instead of recreating these kids all together, we're going to have recreational activities with the child and the child's family, so that we can help them connect with each other." The Center is going to emphasize work as a means to better self-esteem, and plans on developing a business that children will staff.

The Center presently uses a strong community volunteer program where kids are helping others. "This past summer, it was called Gardening for Others," Demars explains. "We had kids who planted, weeded, harvested the gardens and distributed the food. The intent is to help these kids redefine themselves, so they're not seen as the community's problems, but as givers to the community. And it's working real nice." The treatment center will have the children in its programs helping others in many different ways. For example, an elderly person who needs help shoveling his sidewalk in order to be able to live at home could call the Center and a child volunteer might go over and do the work. "We're also going to have a strong mentorship program, where kids can connect with others from the community," Demars adds.

Most important of all is the child's self-esteem. "A part of the program is going to be focused on competency building. We're making an assumption: That too much energy, historically, has been placed on trying to solve problems. And that often the problems are not easily solved. Instead, we want to identify the child's strengths and the strengths that the family has and put more energy into beefing up the strengths rather than trying to solve the problems. That doesn't mean we won't be doing any problem-solving, but we're going to make sure we put at least as much energy into building up the occupational therapists would bring out a special spoon so that person could feed herself. The local law enforcement people were great, too. They handled funding. We needed flashlights, and they told us to get what we needed and somehow they would be paid for later. But we didn't need to come up with finances, other people handled it for us."

The NWMC staff and volunteers faced only one major problem: fatigue. Wigness explains, "In the early weeks, we were working 12 and 14 hours and more. We were tired, but there were a million things to do, so you just try to get them done. I was so tired, I forgot to water plants at home for a whole month, and my English ivy died!"

"I found it was hard to leave, almost physically impossible to walk out the door," Holland agrees. "You just felt like you had a part to do."

Those jobs often had humorous results. When one of the nurses ordered that a man in a wheelchair had no shoes, Wigness sprang into action. "He wore the same size as my husband, so I went home and found a pair of Jerry's old shoes. But it wasn't long before we got a call from someone in the chemistry lab where the resident had wheeled himself down there! Another resident commented that he had always wanted to go to college, although this wasn't how he had hoped to do it.

Heartsaver CPR Class

Thief River Falls residents, Floyd Hallan, was one of many participants in a recent Heartsaver CPR class sponsored by Northwest Medical Center, the local VFW and the Dakota Clinic. The Class participants learned adult 1-person CPR, Heimlich Maneuver (choking), Heart Risk Factors and Nutrition and Heart Healthy Living.

McNerney adds, "The members of a local band, Saddlestramp, played some old time country songs. One lady got up with a gentleman and started dancing. And then another and another followed. To see the residents actually having fun was remarkable."

Holland tells a more personal story. "I was typing some resident labels and found a family name. Little did I know that this was a relative that I hadn't seen since I was very small. I didn't even know he was in Good Sam, and probably helped him in that night they first arrived."

But aiming for the Good Samaritan medicine wasn't the only humane actions taken by the NWMC staff in April 97. They also opened their doors and became the night of Bluebird Hannah, when power lines were snapped and the city was suddenly plunged into darkness and cold.

"It was the scariest night I've ever had," says Linda Welk. "I remember how dark it was. You just knew something bad was going to happen. I got a call at about 1:30 A.M. to come in."

Welk credits House Supervisor Jan Nelson, RN, with maintaining a sense of order and calm. "She really took charge. People were suffering in frightened because the power was out. One woman called in whose husband needed nebulizing regularly, or he would drown in his own secretions, and Nelson told him calmly, now don't you worry. Take your time and get here, and we'll take care of you." And they did."

"We found hope in watching people come in with their sleeping bags and pillows, and seeing our employees arrive and ask, 'what do you need me?' How can I help?" Holland says.

McNerney sums up both disaster efforts: "I was amazed and proud of the community, the way everyone pulled together."

Holland adds, "I am proud of NWMC, of the fact that our administration allowed and encouraged us to do what we needed to do."

How to Outsmart a Cold or the Flu

If you get a cold or the flu this season, you might be in for a surprise more unpleasant than the virus itself. "There is no magic cure," says Sharon Jorde, RN, the Infection Control Nurse at NWMC. "Many medical experts agree antibiotics are not the answer. They don't work against the common cold or the flu, both of which are caused by viruses. Reserve antibiotic use only for when you truly need it."

So what are you supposed to do when aches, sniffles and temp-strike? The worst thing you can do if you catch a cold is to go on and push yourself, keep going yourself. Stay home, get adequate rest, eat right, drink fluids," Jorde suggests. "If you keep pushing yourself, you're likely to see your cold advance to other infections, like sinusitis or bronchitis. If you get run down, you become more susceptible to other kinds of infections. A cold that advances to sinusitis, for instance, can turn a 7-day cold into a 21-day ordeal." She adds, "Don't go to work or spend times in crowds. And don't send your child to school with an infection."

Contrary to popular belief, it is not necessary to try to eliminate the symptoms of a cold or the flu. "You don't have to treat a temp--that's your body's way of fighting the virus. But only you can decide what's tolerable for you or your children," Jorde explains. "There's no need to take aspirin to eliminate the fever, unless the fever makes you or your child listless. Use your best judgment about what is too high for you."

A change in room temperature will make your symptoms seem worse. "If you go out in the cold, your nose will run, but not because the cold is making you worse," Jorde says. "Same cold is making you worse," Jorde says. "Same is true if you find yourself sitting in a hot room. Your head will stuff up, but it's not the heat that's making you sick. It's just your body's way of adjusting. So when people say things like, 'I caught my cold because I was sitting in a draft,' that's not true. Your virus didn't happen there."

As for other discomforts, Jorde says that, in most cases, less treatment will yield a faster recovery. "If you can get by without taking anything so your own immune system can develop a response, you're better off," Jorde says. "Over the counter medicines might relieve your symptoms for a while, but they do nothing to shorten the length or severity of the virus."

But what do you do if you feel a cold coming on but need to get to work? "Keep your distance from others. Colds are not airborne viruses; they are transmitted in droplets that only travel 2 to 3 feet. Cover your mouth and nose if you sneeze or cough. Wash your hands often," Jorde recommends.

You should see a doctor if a cold or the flu persists more than 5 days, in spite of adequate rest, a good diet and abundant fluid intake. "If you're not getting better with that kind of care, you probably should see your doctor," Jorde suggests. "Or at any time if you see a change in the color of your secretions; if your temp gets higher than it has been; if a cough gets real, real persistent; or if a sore throat escalates, getting worse instead of better, then call for an appointment."

The best advice? Prevention. "With regard to reducing germs, researchers have shown that it's the caregivers and the family who come to visit who should truly have the flu shots," Jorde says. "You pose a much greater risk to Grandma than she does to you, since you're bringing in germs from the outside. So if you are a caregiver to an elderly person, you should protect yourself, and them, by getting a flu shot."

To prevent infection, try following some of the guidelines presented in the accompanying box. And get an annual flu shot. "A new thing we're hearing this year is that people who are getting their flu shots on an annual basis are staying healthier overall," Jorde says. "The shot is a dead virus--you don't get sick from the vaccine. You might get a sore arm or a little temp, which is normal, since you're trying to trick your body into believing you've had the virus and to build up antibodies against it." Each year, the flu shot is made up of what researchers believe through their tracking will be the 3 most common strains of the virus coming through the United States that year. They also look for the strains that are likely to make you the sickest, the ones that would produce the worst consequences.

"Because there are between 100 and 200 different strains of influenza out there, you could get a flu shot and still get the flu," Jorde explains. "But you won't be as likely to catch a strain that would make you so drastically sick. And even if your flu shot contains some substances that are similar to those you've had in the past, you're just that much better off for getting the new shot this year."

Who should get a flu shot? Everyone. "It's not just for the elderly or caregivers--if you don't want to take a week in bed, get the flu shot," Jorde says. "The clinics give them, the school nurses, the nursing homes, and increasingly nursing offices it at a very minimal charge. The Heritage Center is a flu shot site, too. The best time to get a flu shot is between early-mid October to mid-December. It takes a few days for the immunity to build up, so it's best to get the shot early in the season."

NWMC provides the vaccinations and education to all employees and volunteers. Infection Control education is also presented to the public, including a recent workshop for child care providers where the topic of how to prevent the spread of the common cold and flu was discussed. NWMC also provides inservice workshops to other caregivers in the region on Infection Control issues.

Jorde belongs to the Minnesota, North Dakota and National Association for Infection Control, and has extensive experience in the Infection Control field. Jorde promises, "I will sure try to answer all questions and provide information, or at least put you in touch with the right people to meet your needs." For more information, call Sharon Jorde, RN at (218) 681-4240.

TOP TEN WAYS TO HELP PREVENT COLDS AND FLUS

1) Wash your hands. "People say somebody gave me a cold,' but that's not true," Jorde says. "You take it yourself. You take it off the doorknob or put it in your mouth by not washing your hands before you eat." When to scrub? After going to the bathroom, before you eat, including snacks, when you come from shopping, school or work. In other words, every time before or after you've been around a group of people. Anytime you cough or sneeze into your hand. "Otherwise, you'll touch a doorknob or a telephone and someone's going to come along behind you and pick up what you have," Jorde says. And keep your hands away from your face at all times. "The linings of your eyes, nose and mouth are real susceptible to the cold virus."
2) Get a flu shot annually. They're for everyone who doesn't want to spend a miserable week in bed, not just caregivers and the elderly. Check your local newspaper or clinic for details of when flu shots will be given.
3) Get adequate rest. If you can't sleep 7-8 hours every night, take cat naps or rest breaks.
4) Exercise. Keep your body strong and flexible.
5) Push fluids all through the colds and flu season. The more cracked and irritated your mucous membranes are, the greater your chance of getting sick. Humidifiers are good, as is keeping the temp in your house down.
6) Reduce the amount of dairy products and oily, greasy foods you eat; they increase mucus. Add garlic to your diet wherever you can; it appears to lessen the severity and duration of a cold. Cider-base chipsalve are fine in place of the real thing.
7) Avoid caffeine, as it acts as a stressor on the adrenal glands, which are already working hard to fight the cold.
8) Avoid sugar. It fuels the cold virus, and slows the activity of white blood cells. This includes white bread and baked goods, since the body converts them to sugar. Fruit juices are also high in sugar. It's better to drink water, teas and broths. Get your vitamin C from vegetables like bell peppers, broccoli, tomatoes and leafy greens.
9) Sterilize your sponges and dishrags every other day by tossing them in the dishwasher on the hottest cycle available. Wet surfaces like those are perfect breeding grounds for bacteria and viruses.
10) Lower your stress. Research has shown that immune function drops after a period of stress, leaving you more susceptible to getting sick. Keep a positive attitude. Research has shown that it enhances immune function, even during difficult times.

Alicia Haviland Takes on ED

not a realistic model for perfection.

Haviland tells some gut-wrenching stories about people who struggle with ED. "I know a girl with 13 jars of vomit in the closet, stored there because she doesn't want anyone to know she has an eating disorder. I know another one who shoplifts to support her binging on almost $200 a day on food that she then vomits. Another who stores rotting food in the hollowed-out pillasters of her canopied bed. I have a 14-year-old girl who meets with me at 5:30 AM once a week. She hides from view so that she can maintain privacy. She is not prepared to acknowledge ED's control. She cries and emotes."

Bingers also purge through exercise, Haviland notes. But not the healthy, life-sustaining kind. "You stand for 6 solid months jogging in place. Why? Because ED says you're not worth it. It says, 'You deserve to die. Don't you stop. Don't you ever stop.'"

Haviland's zeal is giving her a nationwide reputation, and people of all ages suffering from ED call her daily. "One of the most important was a call that came at 3 in the morning. A young girl was crying and sobbing, 'I don't think I can go on; I heard you can help me.' I tried to make contact, to meet her, to pick her up, to help somehow, but she hung up." Haviland adds, "It makes me tearful, and more determined to fight ED. That girl is still out there, perhaps alone, struggling to battle ED. I will not let them battle alone.

"I'll never stop, because I know the pain that girl is feeling," Haviland says. "She doesn't see the sun come up. She doesn't enjoy music like you or I do. She doesn't fix her hair or casually think about common daily events like the rest of us do. She's taken by ED." ED takes its victims to a very destructive place. "There is something that's not going right in their life," Haviland explains. "The food's not the problem; it's the manifestation of the problem. Because if some unworthy thought comes into your head, and if you're vulnerable with your self-esteem in question, you jump over the line, and ED is just sitting there, waiting to grab you. What you have to do is work with the individuals to piece the parts together."

Haviland likes the Narrative Therapeutic Approach. "It takes the problem away from who you are," she explains. "Instead of saying, 'You're an anorexic,' it says, 'You're a human being with an eating problem. You're Susan with a problem, not Susan THE problem. So you talk to your person, and you talk to your problem. For instance, when the behavior starts spinning out of control, you say, I know that's not you speaking to me. I know that's ED. I'm going to sit here until ED stops speaking. I will always, always hear and love you. And I'll be here for you until it goes away.' Basically, you have to earn back your life, step-by-step."

Haviland's message is one of love and self-acceptance. "We're forgetting to love each other. We're forgetting to love the beautiful parts of ourselves," she says. "At my presentations, I give out postcards and ask each person to write down one thing they like about themselves. I can't begin to tell you what a struggle it is for people! The bottom line is that they can't do it. They're trained not to say anything nice about themselves, to love the beautiful parts of themselves.

"I once read a story that said that God sent his most lovable angels to earth in the form of the most unlovable people so we can learn to love each other and be less judgmental," she adds. "The kid with the blue hair; the one with the tattoo or the pierced everything. It's just their way of saying, 'Please notice me. Please love me.'"

Haviland, who has an RN, BSN, MSN, is employed by Northwest Medical Center. Her 28 years of nursing experience includes Critical Care and Administration at several large medical centers. Recently, Alicia Haviland presented her ED program at NWMC's Education Days. Haviland's power-packed presentation is available to groups of all ages and sizes. Her message is that there is help and hope to prevent ED's presence or if necessary, to eliminate ED's grip. Haviland says she is ready and waiting to "love it out of them." To reach her for group presentations to discuss an Eating Disorder, or for intervention, call Northwest Medical Center at (218) 681-4240.

"I really, honestly do care, and I will do whatever I can to get you help," she promises.

the child's strengths."

To that end, each child who comes to the treatment center is going to be asked to identify a fairly major goal, something they want to accomplish while they are involved with the Family Preservation Project. "It's going to be big enough that when they get through with it, they're going to feel good about themselves," Demars says. Some ideas might be running half a marathon, completing a 30-mile canoe trip, or being a cast member of a community theatre project. "Whatever it is, it has to fit the child's interests and be significant enough that when the child is through with it, he feels good enough about him self to notice a difference."

"In the future, we're looking at putting together a therapeutic foster care program, looking at the need for specialized day care for families who have emotionally disturbed children," Demars says. "We're going to look at any or all services needed to help families function better and our children to remain in the community."

Fire department responds to fewer fire calls in 1997

Thief River Falls Fire Department responded to 10 fewer calls last year. In all, they responded to 153 fire calls, according to the annual report presented to the Thief River Falls City Council Tuesday, January 27.

Rick Jensen, co-fire chief, reported that the calls were very diverse. They included 25 structure fires, 17 vehicles fires, two mutual aid calls and many other responses. The dollar loss from these fires was about $858,000. Well over half of the total was due to the Drevlow building fire, which occurred this fall.

The fire department reported four injuries and or deaths. Jensen noted that the department responded to several vehicle accidents, including one with a fatality and two with injuries. One firefighter suffered a minor injury — a puncture wound caused by stepping on a nail at a fire scene.

According to the statistics presented to the council, increases were observed in false alarm reports. That number has steadily increases since 1994. Last year they received 37 false alarm reports. Other increases were noted in residential or garage fires (16 from 13), trash or dumpster fires (11 from 2), wood or piled material calls (5 from 2), electrical (4 from 1), and public service responses (15 from 5).

Decreases were observed in auto fires (8 from 12), appliance fires (11 from 19), smoke or good intent calls (22 from 42), business fires (3 from 7), spills (9 from 14).

The last two years, the estimated damage loss due to fire has been high. In 1996, the total loss was estimated at near $1 million. This year it was estimated at $858,725. In 1995, however, it was $114,150, $337,440 in 1994, $362,800 in 1993, $285,900 in 1992, and $328,150 in 1991.

The Thief River Falls Fire department consists of a small staff of full-time firefighters and a much larger group of volunteer firefighters. Due to a retirement and a resignation the fire department was short one full-time man for six months and a volunteer for four months. Fire Chief David Bjorkman retired effective August 1, and volunteer Gordy Hall resigned effective September 1. Bjorkman was replaced by Barry Fellman and Rick Jensen acting as co-chiefs. Mike Spears was hired as a full-time fireman effective January 25, 1998. His hiring brought the staff up to seven. Gordy Hall made a job related move to Red Lake Falls and his position remains unfilled at this time.

Firefighters on staff are constantly updating skills. Firefighter training totaled 880 hours last year. Last year, they reported 1,000 hours of training.

The fire department responds to other emergencies and provides assistance or service in other ways too. During the ice storm, it assisted by chauffeuring people to and from shelters, pumping basements, and sump holes until people could get their own generators, allowed their facility to be used as a temporary shelter, hauled water to livestock, and staff also filled sand bags and participated in safety camp for youngsters in the community and attended the demolition derby to provide assistance in case of fire or extrication needs.

The Thief River Falls Fire district covers 198 square miles. Currently, it is in the second year of an eight-year contract with six townships surrounding the city: Excel, Norden, North, Rocksbury, Silverton, and Smiley. The fire department also has mutual aid contracts with eight neighboring fire department within 40 miles of Thief River Falls including: Crookston, Goodridge, Middle River, Newfolden, Plummer, Red Lake Falls, St. Hilaire and Warren.

Rydell Refuge Winterfest salutes Groundhog's Day

1st Annual Groundhog Day Winterfest will be held at the Rydell National Wildlife Refuge tomorrow, Sunday, Feb. 1. Activities will include sleigh rides, games, demonstrations, refreshments and door prizes. Rydell refuge is located three miles west of Erskine on US Hwy. 2 and two and one-half miles south on Polk County 210.

by Kathi Carlson
Northern Watch Reporter

While the official date of Groundhog's Day is February 2, the opportunity to celebrate this obscure holiday exists on Sunday, February 1 at Rydell National Wildlife Refuge near Erskine during the 1st Annual Groundhog's Day Winterfest.

The festivities will begin at 1 p.m. with horse-drawn sleigh rides. Games — schmoosh races, a snow snake toss and "whapplt" — will begin at 2 p.m. Snowshoe making will be among the demonstrations, and there will be a number of interesting wildlife exhibits on display. The refuge Visitors Center will serve as headquarters for activities. Birdwatchers will delight at the active and well-stocked "backyard" bird feeding area which can be viewed from the center.

Visitors are welcome to bring their cross-country skis, and snowshoeing is encouraged with several pairs of snowshoes available for people to try the increasingly popular winter activity.

Hot beverages will be available throughout the afternoon with additional refreshments served at 3:30 p.m. The event is free of charge, and door prize drawings will be held throughout the afternoon.

At 4 p.m. a short program will be held to recognize the many volunteers who have assisted with a variety of projects at the refuge in the past year. The day's activities will conclude with a final door prize drawing at 4:30 p.m.

The event is being co-sponsored by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS), Detroit Lakes Wetland Management and Friends of the Rydell Refuge Association, a non-profit organization of volunteers committed to promoting and improving the refuge.

Currently under "custodial status," the refuge is not officially open to the public. The Detroit Lakes Wetland Management District administers the refuge as a satellite facility, and one full-time maintenance worker is assigned to operations.

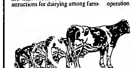
Milk makes good mix in farm crop diet

Alfalfa and manure are positive additions to acreage for farm crops



(This is the ninth in a series of Northern Watch stories on the loss of dairy farmers and a view toward the future of the dairy industry in northwest Minnesota.)

by Marvin Lundin
Northern Watch Editor

People involved in dairying naturally want to maximize the profit potential of their cows through the sale of milk, but the total value of having dairy cattle isn't reflected in the milk check. That is one of the attractions for dairying among farmers who have not traditionally had cows on their farm.

"Most of the investors in Little Pine Dairy wanted to get into it for what it would do for their land," says Terry VanDyke, head herdsman for the 1,400-cow dairy located at Perham, midway between Detroit Lakes and Wadena on Highway 10.

There are seven investors involved in Little Pine Dairy, all of whom are landowners in the immediate area surrounding the dairy operation. Land for the dairy was purchased from Ron Tobkin, the primary investor and general manager.

VanDyke, a veterinarian by profession who also has experience in animal nutrition from a job with Purina Mills, is one of the investors.

Two Acres Of Crop Per Cow

"It takes a little better than two acres of cropland to support a dairy cow in this area," he said. "Our 1,400 cows mean we need the hay and other forage crop production from about 3,000 acres of land. And it also takes an area about that size to provide for manure disposal.

"We test both the soil and the manure to determine the frequency and rate of application when we incorporate the manure into our fields," he said. "About half of the manure removed from our seven million gallon storage pit is piped directly to the equipment tilling it into the ground. The remainder is hauled with tank trailers and applied with tillage equipment as well."

In addition to the manure application for fertilizer, inclusion of alfalfa in the crop rotation is also a good land use practice. The partners in Little Pine Dairy have sufficient acreage to provide the hay and corn needed to support the dairy.

Land Improvement Attractive

Ability to improve the land while creating a market for diversified crops is one of the reasons a number of traditional small grain or sugar beet farmers are seriously looking to dairy as a profitable investment.

VanDyke said the amount of time required to get into the business was amazingly short. Ground was broken in September of 1995 and the first cows were being milked on November 14 of the same year. At that time the dairy was built for 700 cows and included a double 12 milking parlor. The barn was set up with six pens of 100 for lactating cows and room for 100 dry cows.

In April of 1997 work was started on a second 108x510 barn for another 700 cows—this one with four pens of 150 lactating cows each

Rhino draws crowd in Baudette

Baudette - It's not everyday that one gets to see a rhinoceros herded into a bank, and the feat drew more than a little attention recently in Baudette.

The animal, a project of area taxidermist John Lind, went on display in the lobby of Norwest Bank.

The main problem encountered by the more than half a dozen strong men who moved the rhino was a mounting that was just a tad larger than the front door. The Baudette Region

Tri-County student creates Moose Mystery game

Karlstad - Tri-County senior Mandi Ruud created a clever Moose Mystery board game for elementary students. It will also be used by Jodi Provost, assistant manager of the Karlstad Wildlife Office of the DNR.

The game deals with the question of what is happening to the population, and Mandi is going to make copies of the game for other local school involved in the Moose Mystery Challenge.

Tri-County School has adopted three moose, two in the high school and one in elementary. North Star News

Rhino draws crowd in Baudette

Baudette - It's not everyday that one gets to see a rhinoceros herded into a bank, and the feat drew more than a little attention recently in Baudette.

The animal, a project of area taxidermist John Lind, went on display in the lobby of Norwest Bank.

The main problem encountered by the more than half a dozen strong men who moved the rhino was a mounting that was just a tad larger than the front door. The Baudette Region

SOUPÇON
Sherry LaCoursiere

Today we'll have some rather unusual soups, as well as a couple of "old favorite" ones - enjoy.

This tasty soup can be used as a main dish or served as a side dish to some delicious sandwiches:

CAULIFLOWER SOUP
2 pounds cauliflower
1 pound potatoes
3 cups skim milk (or whole), heated
1/2 cup half and half (or cream)
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1 cup croutons

Cook cauliflower in boiling water with peeled sliced potatoes, pepper and salt for 30 minutes.

Remove about half of the cauliflower and set aside. Drain remaining cauliflower and potatoes, reserving stock, and press through a sieve. Combine with heated milk, reserved stock, half and half and remaining cauliflower pieces.

Heat for 5-10 minutes and serve topped with croutons.

This would definitely be a main dish meal - serve with crusty bread and yum:

CHICKEN CORN CHOWDER
2 chicken breasts
2 cups water
1 cup celery, diced
1 bay leaf
2 cups skim milk
1/2 cup onion, diced
2 tablespoons margarine
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups potatoes, peeled and cut into 1/2 inch cubes
1 (14 ounce) can cream style corn
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
Chives or parsley, minced (optional)

Combine chicken, water, celery and bay leaf in large cooking pot. Bring to a boil and simmer, covered, until chicken is tender (about 25 minutes). Remove chicken from broth, reserving broth, cool, dice and refrigerate.

Strain broth. Add milk and set aside.

In large saucepan, sauté onions and celery in margarine until soft but not brown (3-4 minutes). Blend in flour. Gradually stir in milk mixture.

Add potatoes and simmer until tender (15-20 minutes). Stir in chicken, corn, salt and pepper. Heat through. Garnish with chives or parsley.

Here's another tasty soup - it can be served cold as a summer soup too:

GINGER WINTER SQUASH SOUP
1 1/2 cups yellow split peas
2 cups winter squash, cooked (any variety)
1 teaspoon olive oil
1 small onion, chopped
2 tablespoons ginger root, finely diced (or grated)
3 bay leaves
1 1/2 teaspoons ground coriander
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1/4 teaspoon cayenne, if desired
4 cups water

Sort and rinse peas and cook with bay leaves in water until peas are soft and falling apart.

Sauté onions and ginger in oil until onion is translucent. Add coriander, cumin and cayenne and cook for another minute on low heat.

Blend or mash squash with a bit of water until smooth. Add this, with spices and soy sauce to peas, mixing well. Cook on low heat for 15 minutes to blend flavors. If soup is too thick, add a little water or milk and reheat, but do not boil.

Serve, sprinkling with any condiments you like, such as lemon juice, cilantro, black pepper, toasted unsweetened coconut, plain yogurt, grated cheddar cheese, or whatever you wish.

This is a simple soup, nothing fancy, but the family will love it:

HAMBURGER SOUP
1 pound ground beef top round
1 (16 ounce) can tomatoes
3 medium carrots, peeled and sliced
2 medium potatoes, cubed
1 medium onion, chopped
1/2 cup celery, chopped
3 cups water
3 cubes beef bouillon
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon oregano, crushed
1 cup green beans

Brown hamburger and drain. Add remaining ingredients except green beans. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer 15 minutes. Add green beans and simmer 15 minutes more.

The kids will love this one too - and it is so simple to combine everything early in the day and let simmer in the crock pot on low:

TACO SOUP
2 pounds ground turkey or beef, browned
1 (10 ounce) can black beans
1 (10 ounce) can pinto beans
1 (10 ounce) can corn, drained
1 (8 ounce) can hominy, drained
1 (10 ounce) cans diced tomatoes with green chilies
1 (10 ounce) can water
1 package taco seasoning mix
1 package ranch dressing mix

Add above ingredients, in order given, to a crock pot. Simmer on medium for 2 to 3 hours, stirring occasionally.

Serve topped with sour cream, cheddar cheese and tortilla chips.

Apart from his veterinary career, he raises beef cattle and Swedish Warmblood horses. He is president of the Swedish Warmblood Association in North America and will tell about this unique breed at the luncheon.

Dr. Crabo reportedly has relatives in Marshall county and has hunted there. His wife, Margareta, is the gift shop manager at the American Swedish Institute.

Annual meeting of the society will take place April 18 at the Heritage Community Center in Thief River Falls.

Local volunteers are preparing for American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days. Ueland serves on task force for worker training Pat Ueland of Newfolden is one of 25 members on a task force organized by the Blandin Foundation of Grand Rapids to make recommendations to the Minnesota legislature on how worker training can be improved in Greater Minnesota.

Ueland is field office area manager for the Minnesota Department of Economic Security at the Workforce Center in Thief River Falls.

The task force report, Worker Education in Greater Minnesota: The Need for Life-Long Learning, is the focus of four regional conferences beginning with one conducted in Bemidji January 30. Others are scheduled for February 5 in Alexandria, February 10 in Worthington and February 12 in Owatonna.

Minnesota business leaders say the most pressing issue they face today is the availability of skilled workers. The task force was formed to make suggestions for solving that problem.

Lincoln choir adds a cathedral performance to New York City trip

Lincoln high school concert choir from Thief River Falls has been successful in securing an opportunity to sing at the cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City on May 8, according to Mrs. Darcy Reese, vocal music instructor at Lincoln and choir director.

Mrs. Reese said that the choir made an audition tape at the Assumption Catholic Church in Florian and sent it to an audition committee at St. John the Divine in December. She received word last week that the committee had selected Lincoln as one of the cathedral's performing choirs for 1998.

"St. John's is the major Episcopal church in New York City," the director said. "Right now it is the second largest cathedral in the world, but when work in progress is completed it will be the largest cathedral in the world.

"The students will have a rare, fascinating opportunity to perform in a classic Gothic cathedral that is still under construction," she added. "St. John's has 121,000 square feet of area with ceilings that you literally have to tip your head way back to see."

Lincoln choir's performance will be from 11:30 a.m. to noon on May 8, prior to a service, and the entire community of Thief River Falls has been issued an invitation to attend.

Final fund-raiser for the New York City tour will take place Saturday, February 7, when the choir presents its "Evening of Enchantment" candlelight supper at the Evangelical Free Church.

Members of the 1998 concert choir tour group include the following:

To The Editor:

Twice in the last month I have read or heard on the news that the laborers in our country are getting more wages than they were getting 20 to 25 years ago. One of these was in an article in the Northern Watch and the other was on the national news this morning (January 27).

Why are these statements being made? Is it because there are so many younger people in the work force who don't know the truth and that the powers that be think that these people won't know that it is not the whole truth?

Back in 1970, as a young person with a family, I was working for a company in the Twin Cities and was making $8.25 per hour. I could buy an Oldsmobile for $6,000 or a small car for $2,000 to $2,500. During that time, I had a six-hour surgery in the Twin City area which cost $3,200. The surgeon got $2,000 and the hospital got $1,200 and I was in the hospital for a week.

The statement in the paper said, "How many people in the labor force are receiving the same wages as they were paid in 1980?" The statement on the newscast said that the wages in the last year went up a little over three percent, causing inflation.

I guess it doesn't do much good to complain about what is, but it does bother me that everyone wants to blame inflation on the laborer instead of trying to figure out what or who is causing the inflation. In 1970, my medical insurance was paid for 100 percent by the employer and there was no deductible. The only thing I had to pay for (in the hospital) was the TV rent. Today, there are people who have no insurance because they can't afford the premium, even though they are working full-time.

The laborer has a long way to go to catch up with the wage he was getting in 1970, taking into consideration the inflation that has already wiped out his "living wage." We, the people, need to keep better informed on all areas of concern, and do what we can to help improve the situation.

Enough said for now. Thanks for the opportunity to give my opinion.

Sincerely,
Faye Suko
St. Hilaire, Minnesota

To The Editor:

It is very interesting to read all of the opinions on the wolf situation. In the letter by Ginny Yingling of the Sierra Club, published January 17, she states "nowhere in North America, in all our history, has there been a single wolf attack on a human."

In the July, 1997 issue of Reader's Digest there is a "Drama in Real Life" story entitled Night of the Wolf by Kathy Cook. This is an account of a wolf attack on a sleeping 11-year-old child camping in Ontario. This wolf repeatedly charged at the boy and his mother when the father tried to chase it away.

While this was an extremely rare incident and that particular wolf was caught and killed, an attack by a wolf has occurred, and people should not be led to believe otherwise.

Sincerely,
Connie Hagen
Plummer, Minnesota

To The Editor:

This letter is in response to Ginny Yingling's guest editorial published in the Jan. 17, 1998 Northern Watch.

Yingling states that fear nor facts guide wolf debate. She also says that, "nowhere in North America, in all our history, has there been a single wolf attack on a human."

The fact is, Ginny, you didn't do your homework very well before writing to the Northern Watch. The following article was taken from the January 3, 1907, issue of the 13 Towns newspaper at Fosston, MN.

(Editor's Note: Attached was a photocopy of a newspaper article headed WOLVES KILL BOY.) The article reads as follows:

"Fergus Falls Journal: Sheriff Albertson has returned from a trip to Sebeka, where he went to serve some papers, and states that reports are current there of a ghastly tragedy that had just occurred in the timbered country eighteen miles to the eastward of the village. Children of that vicinity have very considerable distances to go to and from school and ordinarily several of them go together. In this instance a boy of eight had been kept after school for a short time, and his companions went on, leaving him to come home alone. He failed to arrive, and as darkness came on, his father took a lantern and started out in search of him. He had gone some distance when he heard the growling of wolves in a clump of timber not far away, and going in the direction from which the sound came, was horrified to see the mangled remains of his little boy with two large wolves standing over them. The child was dead and partially devoured."

Sincerely,
Lynn Vennes

Beef herd management meetings start Tuesday

Five area meetings on beef herd management have been scheduled by the University of Minnesota Extension Service in northwestern Minnesota beginning Tuesday, February 3.

"The beef industry is looking better than it has in quite awhile," notes Howard Person, Pennington county extension educator. "This has been encouraging to producers, but it is no reason to decrease the emphasis on management. These meetings will be covering many different aspects and options for beef producers."

Topics to be covered at the meetings include "Managing Annual Cow Costs," "Beef Record Management Programs," "Backgrounding and Stocker Cattle Scenarios," "Hull-less Oats as a Feed Ingredient in Beef Rations" and "The Beef Home Study Course."

Meeting schedule is as follows:

Tuesday, February 3—1:30 p.m. at the Java Cafe in Lancaster;

Wednesday, February 4—9:30 a.m. at the Community Center in Plummer and 1:30 p.m. at the Community Center in Middle River;

Thursday, February 5—9:30 a.m. at the museum room in Warroad and 1:30 p.m. in Baudette (contact Lake of the Woods extension office at 218-634-1511 for location).

"These meetings will cover information for producers at all stages in the beef industry," Person said. "The information may also be interesting for grain producers to look at as an option for diversification."

Questions may be directed to Troy Salzer, Roseau county extension educator, at 218-463-1052 or 1-800-450-1052.

MCC financial aid workshop on February 4

Annual financial aid workshop for Marshall County Central high school seniors and their parents has been scheduled for Wednesday, February 4, at 7 p.m. in the MCC library in Newfolden.

According to Floyd Olson, MCC school counselor, the workshop will allow parents to learn about the various sources of financial aid and how to complete the application forms required by federal and state agencies.

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) will be the primary document for getting federal and state financial aid, Olson said. A financial aid director will be available to present information on all programs.

Proposed Legislation Should Stir The Waters

Bills have been introduced in the Minnesota Senate that should generate a good deal of comment in the next few weeks. Two of the bills are revisions, one of which would create a license system for taking of timber wolves and the other would increase compensation for livestock losses to timber wolves from $400 to $600.

Also introduced is a new bill which would transfer the powers and duties of the Commissioner of Natural Resources (DNR) to a board of natural resources created by the bill. The board would consist of the Commissioner of Natural Resources as chairman and eight members appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Under the proposed legislation, the board would include no officer or employee of the state or federal government except the commissioner, only two members at one time who are officials or employees of a municipality or any governmental subdivision, not less than three farmers actually residing on a farm and engaged in agriculture and not more than three members from the metropolitan area.

The bill is sure to bring about some active discussion, but we would think it unlikely to get very serious consideration by the legislature as a whole. It would be a radical departure from the established and existing system of departments and commissioners and will be strongly opposed by the bureaucracy, which would see creation of any such board as a threat to their own territory.

The bill may have some effect, however, in creating an awareness among all legislators of some of the disputes and deep discontent in the rural population with the DNR. As such, it may grease the skids for passage of other issues helpful to rural Minnesota.

Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Thief River Falls has drafted the bill to create a timber wolf hunting season once the wolf is removed from the threatened list under the federal Endangered Species Act. Among other things, his bill calls for a $3 nonrefundable application fee, a $150 license fee, potential for up to four persons per license, a $25 guide's license (does not permit personal taking of a wolf), resale of licenses by qualified livestock owners obtaining such licenses, baiting, and sale of legally taken and tagged hides.

If the intent is to reduce the population of wolves to the approximate number goal of the 1992 recovery plan for the eastern timber wolf, we question the effectiveness of a hunting season in accomplishing that end. A relatively small number of license holders in the large expanse of the wolf range for a restricted period of time puts the odds decidedly in favor of the wolf. Unless the season would coincide with the deer season, when thousands of hunters are afield and wolves move about as their territory is invaded, we expect few wolves would be taken by hunters. We see trapping as the most effective way to control wolf numbers in specific population areas, and that on a nearly year-round basis.

Regarding compensation for livestock losses, placing a restriction on the value of animals lost to wolves is unfair, whether it is $400 or $600 or any other figure. That portion of the law should be excluded and the term fair market value allowed to remain as a determination of compensation—so long as the wolf is afforded any protection by law. A livestock owner should not be penalized because wolves select a $1,500 registered cow instead of a crossbred calf.

In the total scheme of things in the state budget, as we have said before, the prompt payment of full damages for wolf depredation is a pittance. To the producers who sustain the losses, however, the value is great. Why incur more ill will, dissatisfaction and discontent? Cut the red tape and pay for the losses—in full, on time.

It will be interesting to see how these ideas in bill form are received in the legislature. The 1998 session could be a stormy one.

Deaf Candidate Seeks Republican Nomination

It must be with a great deal of courage that Cathy Bolcar has announced her candidacy for the Republican endorsement for U.S. Congress from the Seventh District. Like other newspapers in the district, we have received a number of letters in support of her candidacy—most of them likely solicited by Bolcar or her committee.

We do not publish letters in support of candidates in our public opinion columns, but we note the support Bolcar is deaf—a condition she has not only called attention to in announcement of her candidacy but has made a focal point of her campaign. Each support letter we have received has mentioned that disability.

During her campaign Bolcar will have to demonstrate that she is the best candidate for the endorsement, not because of being deaf but in spite of it. She may well show that her personal experience of living with this handicap has given her knowledge and insight that would make her a good representative of the people.

A letter from Russell Pudas, president of the St. Cloud Area Deaf Club, states that "mainstream hearing people don't understand the conflicts and politics that dominate the deaf community. When we are small children decisions are made for us regarding attending deaf schools (Faribault), public schools, the use of hearing aids, how much speech training we need and if it will even be successful.

"Our parents deal with us being left behind, teasing from peers about our voices or hearing aids or using sign language. Our parents deal with our ear infections, balance problems, and acting out in frustration over why we are not 'normal.' Sometimes deaf kids have been known to flush $2,000 hearing aids down the toilet, and fight their speech teachers because they see no point in trying to talk clearly when they can't hear their own voice."

Not knowing much of Bolcar's qualifications to serve in Congress, we are impressed with her effort to show how it is possible for someone with a major communication difficulty to handle the responsibilities of such office. She will have to persuade delegates that she is not a single issue candidate but capable of multi-interest representation. It is a big challenge, but for someone who is accustomed to meeting challenge it should not be insurmountable. We look forward to seeing how the situation plays out.

LETTERS

To The Editor:

This past December a man went to buy gas at Co-op Oil in Middle River, where he collapsed unresponsive. Fortunately for this man, Filmore McBride was on the scene. Mr. McBride has completed a community CPR class. He promptly and properly started CPR and continued until the ambulance arrived.

Tri-County Emergency Medical Services responded with an ambulance equipped with an automatic defibrillator. This automatic defibrillator had been purchased through fund-raising activities of the Middle River American Legion and the Middle River Jaycees.

Using this equipment the ambulance crew was able to establish a normal heart rhythm. The patient was then transported to Thief River Falls and subsequently transferred to Dakota Clinic in Fargo, ND, where he received an implanted automatic defibrillator. He was subsequently discharged from the hospital.

Although we frequently read of impressive medical advances such as the implanted automatic defibrillator, this man's life was saved through community action. The presence of an individual such as Filmore McBride—trained in when and how to initiate CPR—prolonged life long enough for the ambulance to arrive. The fact that community organizations had equipped this ambulance with the necessary lifesaving equipment was then responsible for restoring his heart rhythm.

This type of episode should encourage all those not trained in CPR to enroll in a CPR class. One never knows when a family member or community member may need this lifesaving activity. The next time we are approached by a community organization such as the Middle River American Legion or the Middle River Jaycees to support a fund-raising event, let's all remember that they use these funds to provide lifesaving equipment to benefit us all.

Sincerely,
Jim Langland, MD

Milk makes good mix in farm crop diet

and a separate area for dry cows. The milking parlor was expanded to a double 20 system and the herd expansion has been nearly completed with about 1,100 cows now being milked at the rate of 140 to 150 per hour.

22 Full-Time Employees

The dairy has 22 full-time employees and was privately financed by the investors without other corporate or cooperative input.

Somewhat as an off-shoot of Little Pine Dairy, Ron Tobkin and his partner Jim Lofien have formed Dairy Management Services (DMS) which will soon have offices in Perham. DMS will provide expertise for building and managing similar dairy operations—one of which is currently under construction in Iowa. Plans are to centralize the records of the separate operations to gain the advantage of a wider pool of information.

In building the milking herd, Little Pine Dairy has attempted to bring in only first calf heifers, and those from a single location as much as possible.

"When you add older cows from other herds, you can bring in a lot of problems and invite a lot of potential trouble," he said. "We contract the raising of heifer calves from our own herd that we want to keep as replacements. We sell the bull calves to farmers raising dairy steers."

Fehr Family Charts New Waters

Tobkin had dairy in his farming background from a number of years ago. For the Fehr family at Morris, however, the decision to go into dairying was charting new waters—although they had a good idea of how to handle a boat. Their livestock expertise had been in feeding beef cattle.

When they decided to get their feet wet, however, it wasn't one toe at a time. Riverview Dairy was started in September of 1995 with 800 head and now is the largest dairy in the state with 1,800 cows, 1,450 of which are currently milking.

"We had been finishing beef cattle for quite a few years as part of our total farming operation," said Diane Fehr, who operates the farm with her husband Lloyd, their three sons and a daughter. The eldest son, Gary, had the greatest interest in dairy and, along with Lloyd, heads that part of the business. The youngest son, Bradley, has responsibility for crops but also works with the dairy operation.

The middle son, Randy, helps oversee the beef operation which finishes about 2,000 animals per year. Daughter Julie helped plan the dairy and she and her husband Blair Metzger of Rock Rapids, IA, are part owners in the family corporation. Also in the corporation is Lloyd and Diane's nephew, Kurt Duminick, who does the accounting work.

Concerned About Moratorium

Diane Fehr said the permitting process from the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) was not a particular problem except for the amount of time required to get the permit. And since the family controls about 4,500 acres around the dairy farm location, there were virtually no complaints from near neighbors about the dairy plans. A current political concern, however, is Attorney General Hubert (Skip) Humphrey's proposal for a moratorium on feedlot expansion in the state.

Riverview Dairy raises its own corn for forage but buys the hay it needs. Facilities include two free-stall holding barns 688x144 in size and a double 24 milking parlor which permits milking 48 cows at a time. There is ample room for manure application on family-owned acreage near the dairy.

The dairy employs a herdsman and has a total of 30 employees, including five part-time. There is no milk processing plant in the immediate area, so the two semi-trailer loads of milk picked up at the farm each day go to market in Milbank, SD.

Reaon For Expanion

Expansion of dairy herds is often done to provide enough income to permit dairy farms to remain in the family as a younger generation becomes involved and eventually assumes operation.

In figures compiled from the 1996 Farm Business Management annual report, dairy farms with an average of 23.6 cows averaged profit of $229 per cow and total dairy cow profit of $5,404. Those with an average of 41.3 cows had profit per cow of $392 and total dairy cow profit of $16,199 and those with an average of 58.9 cows had average profit per cow of $471 and dairy cow profit averaging $27,765.

According to the records, 13 herds with 201 to 300 cows (an average of 238.9 cows for the 13 herds) had an average net profit per cow of $508 and dairy cow profit of $121,459. The five producers with more than 300 cows averaged herd size of 335, showed a net profit per cow of $458 and an average dairy cow profit of $153,605.

It is acknowledged that 1996 was one of the best price years for dairying in recent years—and projections indicate it won't be matched for at least the next six or eight years into the future.

Cost Control Important

Young dairymen are finding success in dairying by finding ways to control costs outside their own operations. In one meeting of area dairymen the costs of hoof trimming were discussed. It was determined the average cost was $10 per cow. Dairymen in the room had about 5,000 cows. They cooperated in hiring their own hoof trimmer to work on everyone's herd for $30,000 a year, paid for some of his health insurance, and still saved $3 per cow.

They keep their barns full of producing cows, negotiate for the best prices, call other farmers in Minnesota and other states to compare and formulate buying strategies, treat employees as an investment rather than an expense, specialize in given dairy areas, treat manure as an asset, seek to improve production management, keep cows healthy instead of treating problems and take the emotion out of decision making.

Friends Ass'n. has made many improvements and provided numerous programs for the public at the fledgling refuge that isn't "officially" open. In 1996 volunteers contributed 5,438 hours to help refuge operations.

Most of the volunteers are local residents. When Grand Forks businessman Leonard Rydell accumulated the 2,120 acres that is now Rydell National Wildlife Refuge he purchased many smaller farms. Many of today's volunteers have historic ties to the property and fond memories of growing up in the area.

In 1992 the Richard King Mellon Foundation purchased the land from Rydell and then donated it to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. As private property, the area was managed as a private game refuge and commercial fish farm.

Today's "custodial status" of the refuge is pending the completion of a comprehensive management plan. The plan is nearly ready, and upon its approval, the refuge will qualify for additional staff which will allow it to be open to the public on a more regular basis. Currently, the Visitors Center is manned by volunteers and open Sunday afternoons from 1 to 4 p.m. in the winter with slightly longer hours during the summer months.

The refuge was established to protect its habitat and wildlife diversity, encourage waterfowl and migratory bird production, provide wildlife oriented recreation and promote environmental education.

The Rydell Refuge is located in the transitional zone between the flat Red River Valley floodplain to the west and rolling forest and lake country to the east — a mosaic of wetlands, mixed stands of hardwood trees, conifer plantations, grass meadows and cropland. The combination of habitats provides for a diversity and abundance of waterfowl and wildlife. Over 190 species of songbirds have been identified at the refuge. Timberwolves and black bear have also been sighted.

The cooperation between federal, state and local organizations, along with a host of volunteers, has allowed wonderful things to happen there — all with little or no money.

The Rydell poolhouse has been transformed into a visitor center through donations, volunteers and assistance from USFWS staff. The swimming pool was filled with concrete and the new floor was carpeted. Floor to ceiling windows surround the huge room enabling visitors to enjoy the picturesque outdoors, particularly the bird feeding area in the "backyard." The former Rydell home nearby will become the Refuge Headquarters. Swan Lake and Golden Pond, two of the refuge's nine lakes, are visible from these buildings.

In addition to continuing the many naturalist programs at the refuge, the Friends Ass'n. has plans to plant protective shrubbery around the backyard bird feeding area and develop a demonstration area there, develop new trails, provide benches and other amenities along the trails, improve directional and interpretive signs, repair existing and build new overlooks of natural areas, extend the hours that the refuge is open to the public and more.

Any organization or individual looking for a volunteer project will be welcomed with open arms. The refuge abounds with opportunities for Scout projects and Eagle Scout candidates.

Closed to regular hunters, the refuge permits special deer hunts for youth and disabled persons. Last year, a total of 40 12- to 15-year-old youth hunters with firearm safety certificates were able to hunt during two seasons — 25 during the 4A season and 15 during the 4B season. A special hunt for hunters with disabilities was also held.

In its last legislative session, the Minnesota Legislature recognized the accomplishments of this unique partnership between the government and private citizens and organizations and allocated $200,000 to assist in developing what could be the only truly accessible refuge in the country.

The funding will develop seven miles of accessible hard-surface trails with overlooks, upgrade and make accessible the deck behind the headquarters, construct a boardwalk on Sundew bog, and enhance the accessibility of the visitors center. The center will have better speaker/listening devices and additional rest rooms. The lighting in the building has already been improved. The outside will be landscaped and have interpretive areas. The parking area and driveway will be paved.

Wayne Gocken, secretary of the 11-member board of directors of the Friends of the Rydell Refuge Association, stated that the Rydell Refuge is probably the busiest custodial status refuge in the country — an example of the great things that can be accomplished by dedicated volunteers. For more information about the association, Gocken can be reached at (218) 574-2622.

Even in the dead of winter the area is beautiful, the dark green pine a handsome contrast against the sparkling white snow, the air filled with the song of the hardy birds that dare to brave the cold.

The 1st Annual Groundhog's Day Winterfest tomorrow is the perfect opportunity for the young and old alike to celebrate the season. The weatherman is forecasting mild temperatures with a chance of snow — a perfect winter day.

According to tradition, if the groundhog sees his shadow on Monday, he will return to his hole for another six weeks of winter. Only six more weeks? Who would complain?

Prowlers win 2-1 in overtime

He admitted it was his first high school hockey game of the year. But it didn't take long for the fan to recognize what Thief River Falls head coach Scott Bergland has been saying all year. "They're not that bad," said the observer. I saw their record, and I didn't expect them to play this well. They skate hard. They just don't have the goal-scorers."

Those are the exact points Bergland has been selling since the season began in late November. Tuesday, the Prowlers were rewarded for their efforts, with the hard work producing a 2-1 overtime victory over Crookston.

It was just the third win in 17 starts for the Prowlers. Things haven't been a whole lot better for the Pirates, who are 4-13 and have lost six overtime games this winter.

"This came at a critical time," said Bergland. "We needed a win."

For the longest time, it didn't appear either side would come out of it with a victory. Missed opportunities, along with strong goaltending by both Thief River Falls sophomore Mike Dowers and Crookston junior Joe Reese, resulted in 2 1/2 periods of scoreless hockey.

The stalemate was shattered when Crookston sophomore Nate Yeager found himself in the right place at the right time. Left standing alone in front of the net, Yeager spun around in time to corral a rebound and put a backhand past Dowers at 6:43 of the final period.

Thief River Falls didn't get on the scoreboard until the 11:24 mark when Wade Chiodo came up with a burst of speed on the right wing, got a step on the defenseman and blasted a high, hard shot into the far upper corner of the net.

"That was the big goal," noted Bergland. "We played hard. We had lots of chances. We could have had eight goals."

While the Prowlers might have had the better chances to score throughout regulation time, the Pirates came alive in overtime. Dowers, though, met the challenge, and Thief River Falls came out the winner when Kyle Anderson scored with just 50 seconds left in the eight-minute extra session.

Moments earlier Anderson was in alone on Reese, but couldn't convert. Given a second chance, the Thief River Falls senior forward charged down the right side and pushed the puck into the net to snap the Prowlers' six-game losing streak.

Reese finished with 38 saves. Dowers wound up with 32.

Early Moorhead lead stands up
■ Spuds beat Thief River Falls girls 54-46

Moorhead burned a Thief River Falls first quarter zone, then held off the Prowlers' comeback attempts Tuesday to pick up a 54-46 girls high school basketball win.

The Spuds led 21-10 after eight minutes. The Prowlers stayed within 29-22 at halftime and cut the difference to 37-35 by the end of the third quarter. But they were never able to pull even and fell to 5-10 for the year.

"We started with a zone, and they shot the ball real well," explained Thief River Falls coach Jeff Loe, pointing to the Spuds' 10-for-16 first quarter shooting – all from the outside. "We switched to a man-to-man in the second quarter and played right with them."

A balanced Moorhead offense was led by Beth Gilyard with 13 points. The Prowlers went to Nicole Kopari, who finished with a game-high 24 points.

The Spuds cooled off after their first quarter blitz, shooting 37 percent for the game (19/52). They were 14-for-22 at the free throw line, with nine of those 14 free throw points coming in the fourth quarter.

"We put them at the line too many times," noted Loe.

Thief River Falls shot 49 percent from the floor, but they put up only 39 shots (hitting 19). The Prowlers made 8 of 9 free throw attempts. They were out-rebounded 28-19 and had more turnovers, 18-13.

Lumberjacks' first quarter burst nets win over Prowlers

Bemidji jumped out to a 22-8 first quarter lead and rolled to a 67-45 boys high school basketball win over Thief River Falls Tuesday.

The Prowlers were up 6-4 early, but the Lumberjacks finished the quarter with an 18-2 run and their lead was never threatened the rest of the way. It was 33-16 at halftime and 48-29 through three quarters.

Keith Salscheider scored 11 of his game-high 17 points during that first quarter Bemidji run. He was joined in double figures by teammate Chris Fairchild with 12 points and the Prowlers' Jeremy Swanson with 11.

It was the second win over the Prowlers this winter for the Lumberjacks, who won by a 76-57 margin back on Dec. 18. It was also just the second home game of the year for the 9-5 Bemidji squad. The loss dropped Thief River Falls to 1-14.

Moorhead JV 76-17 winner against TRF

Moorhead ran a fast break from beginning to end Tuesday en route to a one-sided 76-17 girls junior varsity high school basketball win over Thief River Falls.

Thief River Falls, down 13-5, 34-9 and 58-15 at the quarters, was led by Rachel Mathson with 7 points.

Mustangs top Bears with balanced attack

Angie Chervestad wasn't in the line-up, so it took a collective effort by her Red Lake County Central teammates to produce a 54-39 girls high school basketball win over Clearbrook-Gonvick Tuesday at Oklee.

Chervestad, the Mustangs' leading scorer and rebounder, missed the game because of back problems. In her absence, Jenni Morinville scored 16 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, Sylvia Hilgeman netted 13 points and Tracy Rosten added 11 as Red Lake County Central improved to 9-5.

"It was good to see the balanced scoring, especially with Angie missing," said Red Lake County Central coach Rick Koivisto.

The two teams played to a 15-15 first quarter tie. The Mustangs went ahead 32-28 at halftime and had a 42-34 third quarter advantage.

Misty Olson scored 12 points to lead the Bears, who lost an early-season 62-30 decision to the Mustangs.

Red Lake County Central shot 37 percent from the field (20/54) and made 11 of 22 free throws. Clearbrook-Gonvick shot only 30 percent from the floor (14/52) and went 9-for-14 at the line. The Mustangs finished with a 33-23 rebound advantage. The Bears had more turnovers, 24-19.

Wolverines beat KCN

Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke turned back an upset bid by Kittson County to win a 59-50 girls high school basketball game played Monday at Lancaster.

It was the second win for the 9-6 Wolverines over the Cougars this winter, but a far cry from the 64-30 blow-out in the earlier meeting.

"They (Cougars) played real well," noted Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke coach Mike Gast. "They showed a huge improvement since the last time we played them."

The Wolverines held narrow quarter leads of 16-10, 28-24 and 37-36.

A 15-point game by Angie Gast and 12 from Kathryn Stanley helped the Wolverines offset a game-high 23-point performance by the Cougars' Kendra Hunter.

Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke was 22-for-61 from the field (36 percent) and 15-for-20 at the free throw line. Kittson County North went 13-for-45 from the floor (29 percent) and 23-for-33 at the line. The Wolverines finished with a 34-27 rebound advantage.

Panthers' numbers produce dual meet swim win over TRF

Numbers added up to a Park Rapids victory Tuesday in a boys high school dual swim meet against Thief River Falls at the Franklin Middle School pool. There were more Panthers than Prowlers, leading to a 109-73 victory for the visitors.

"We knew ahead of time the score would be lopsided because they have more numbers," explained Thief River Falls coach Brian Olson. "But the meet was competitive from beginning to end. There were a lot of really close races. It was a lot of fun."

The Prowlers don't have a diver, but they placed first or second 10 of the 11 swimming events, pointed out Olson. "The kids we have are doing everything they can," he said. "They swam extremely well."

A young Thief River Falls team was led by sophomore Zach Olson, who won both the 200 and 500 freestyle, and anchored a first place 200 freestyle relay team that also included junior Colin Browning and sophomores Rory Hoven and Sam Kezar.

Kezar added a win in the 50 freestyle.

The Prowlers are 1-5 in dual meet competition.

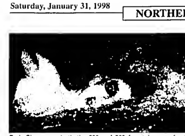
Goodridge knocks down free throws, tops Sacred Heart

Goodridge came up with five late-game free throws to insure a 57-53 boys high school basketball win over East Grand Forks Sacred Heart Tuesday at Alvarado.

The Huskies opened the game with a 19-11 first quarter lead and had a 37-25 halftime cushion. The Eagles stormed back, however, to go in front 45-44 at the end of the third quarter.

"We played an excellent first half," reported Goodridge coach Eric Mickelson. "They played a couple of different zone defenses, and we attacked it really well. We did a nice job moving the ball around."

The roles were reversed in the second half, according to Mickelson. "We were a little flat on defense, and they started to attack us," he explained.



Down one with about a minute-and-a-half to play, the Huskies faced disaster when they were hit with intentional foul call and a technical foul on the same play. That gave the Eagles four free throws, and allowed them to maintain possession of the ball. But they missed three of the four free throws, and then had the in-bounds pass picked off.

Two free throws apiece by Nicky Kotrba and Ben Hanson, along with a single free throw by Jared Eidelbes, helped the Huskies pull out the win down the stretch, improving their record to 7-8. They were 10-for-14 at the line for the game, compared to a 1-for-6 showing by the Eagles.

Fergus Falls whips shorthanded NCTC

Unbeaten Fergus Falls, the top-ranked men's basketball team in the Minnesota Community College Conference polls, handed Northland a 121-84 Northern Division loss Monday.

The Pioneers, who have just one win to their credit and were huge underdogs to start with, faced an even biggest challenge by going on the road without leading scorer Chaka Ali. The 6-4 freshman forward/center missed the game because of an ankle injury.

Another Northland starter, Melvin Whitney Jr., and reserve Arthur Hamilton were also absent when the team bus left Thief River Falls.

Fergus Falls played to form in racking up a 61-31 halftime lead.

"They're a great team," said Northland coach Ted Krize. "They're heads and shoulders above us, especially without all of our players."

With the outcome decided, the second half played out a little more even. "We played a lot better in the second half," noted Krize. "We just told them to go out and play basketball and not worry about the rest of it."

Dwight Goodwin picked up part of the slack for the Pioneers by scoring a game-high 25 points. Northland finished with five double figure scorers, but Fergus Falls had seven, led by Andy Lerberg with 21 points.

Northland shot 36 percent from the field (26/73) and was a busy 27-for-34 at the free throw line. Fergus Falls shot 50 percent from the floor (46/92) and added to to the free throw parade with an 18-for-28 night at the line. The 14-0 Spartans out-rebounded the 1-14 Pioneers 61-39. Northland topped the turnover charts 24-15.

Strong RLF defense nets win over RLCC

Poor shooting continues to plague the Red Lake County Central boys high school basketball team, with the Mustangs struggling through a 33 percent night from the field Tuesday in a 53-46 loss at Red Lake Falls.

Low shooting percentage has become a common occurrence for the Mustangs during a seven-game losing streak that has dropped them to 3-11.

"We didn't shoot very well, but some of that credit should go to Red Lake Falls," explained Red Lake County Central coach Chris McLean. "They did a good job defensively. They play aggressive man-to-man defense."

The Eagles were up 14-9 at the end of the first quarter, 28-20 at halftime and 39-32 heading into the final eight minutes.

Mark Lorenson came up with a 29-point game for the Mustangs. Eric Hopperstad led the Eagles with 17 points.

Red Lake County Central was 9-for-13 at the free throw line, where Red Lake Falls made 12 of 20. The Eagles had more turnovers, 18-11.

MCC girls lose lead, game against Storm

Stephen-Argyle fell behind at the start, but emerged with a 51-37 girls high school basketball win over Marshall County Central Tuesday at Newfolden.

The visitors trailed 10-5 at the end of the first quarter and were down 22-21 at halftime before turning things around in the third quarter to go ahead 40-29.

Early foul trouble for Kristi Kilen put the Nordics' season-long scoring leader on the bench, opening the door for the Storm, pointed out Marshall County Central coach Alice Dahl.

Marshall County Central was 13-for-44 from the field (30 percent) and 8-for-13 at the free throw line. The Nordics were out-rebounded 34-28, and although they turned the ball over only 13 times, those mistakes hurt. "They scored off our turnovers," noted Dahl.

Stephen-Argyle went 17-for-48 from the floor (35 percent) and made 11 of 20 free throws while turning it over 10 times.

The loss dropped the Nordics to 1-14.

Third quarter run produces victory for B/G-MR boys

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River turned a narrow two-point halftime edge into a 26-point third quarter spread Tuesday, propelling the Gators past Kittson County North 81-50 in a boys high school basketball game played at Lancaster.

"We made some offensive adjustments at halftime," explained Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Eldon Sparby, whose team led only 9-7 and 25-23 at the first two quarter stops. "We weren't attacking in the first half, and we weren't shooting very well. In the third quarter we started taking the ball to the basket and all of a sudden things started to take off."

The 33-point third quarter provided the Gators with a 58-32 cushion as they improved their record to 11-3.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River shooters were busy with a 30-for-73 night from the field (41 percent) and a 15-for-23 free throw game. Kittson County North was 17-for-59 from the floor (29 percent) and 13-for-21 at the line.

Milk marketing order reform proposal gets cold reception

An 800 page document referred to as the Proposed Rule for Federal Milk Marketing Order Reform has met with a cold reception from both sides of the Minnesota Congressional delegation.

Seventh District Congressman Collin Peterson (DFL) called it a "watered-down version of dairy reform" while Minnesota Senator Rod Grams (GOP) labeled it simply "disappointing."

As reported in the Northern Watch Saturday, a summary of the proposal was received here from Congressman Peterson's office on Friday.

In releases dates Friday, Sen. Grams and Rep. Peterson provided their reactions to the proposal.

"The new proposal offers two options: one that essentially maintains the status quo and another that starts to create a more even playing field across the country," Rep. Peterson said.

"Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman appears to be moving in the direction of reform, however, there are still many mixed signals in his proposal. An option supported by the Upper Midwest was not included."

Another provision of the document was consolidation of the current 33 federal milk marketing orders into 11 orders, but Peterson said the new Upper Midwest order shows very little change.

The dairy reform proposal was issued in response to a call from Congress to reform the 60-year-old milk marketing system.

"USDA had the opportunity to provide greater equity to the Upper Midwest with the order consolidation," Rep. Peterson said. "It failed to do so."

Sen. Grams immediately wrote a letter to Secretary Glickman to express is disappointment over the proposal which he said falls short of addressing concerns that he and Minnesota dairy producers have expressed to Secretary Glickman in the months preceding the report's release.

"I am writing to express my great disappointment in USDA's proposed rule for federal dairy reform as mandated under the 1996 Farm Bill," Sen. Grams wrote. "The options presented are particularly discouraging given your personal comments in support of substantive dairy reform. The proposed rule lacks any substantive reform."

"The livelihoods of Minnesota dairy farmers are at stake," he continued. "On their behalf, and on behalf of their families and communities, I again express my great disappointment in this half-hearted attempt at reform of antiquated dairy policy. This government can—and must—do better by its farmers."

Upon sending the letter, Sen. Grams said the government should not be picking winners and losers as it does in the report and he believes the proposal is based on politics and not on fairness. He said he will consult with Minnesota dairy producers and members of the Upper Midwest Dairy Coalition prior to determining how best to respond legislatively to the report.

"Although it is still unclear which direction USDA will take," Congressman Peterson added, "I will continue to push for real reform. Minnesota's dairy industry has been devastated by the status quo—we cannot continue to do nothing."

Context For Reform

In the general overview, USDA stated the following:

U.S. agriculture is transitioning to a more market-oriented sector, free from traditional government involvement typified by price and income support programs. This transition was continued by the 1996 farm bill, which mandated the gradual phase-out of traditional price and income support programs, including the dairy price support program that has existed for 60 years, in which the federal government supported milk prices by offering to purchase butter, cheese and nonfat dry milk at certain specified prices.

The Federal Milk Marketing Order (FMMO) program is being restructured to be consistent with this trend toward a market-oriented dairy sector in which dairy farmers respond to market signals. However, the FMMO program retains its basic purpose—to provide for orderly market conditions in which milk is marketed so that producers have an assurance of stable markets, and adequate supplies of milk are available for consumers.

Federal milk marketing orders will continue to establish minimum prices that regulated handlers must pay to producers for milk based on its end use. The FMMO program also will continue to recognize the higher costs of supplying milk for fluid use, including the costs of transporting milk and the costs associated with balancing supplies and use within each market.

What's In The Proposed Rule?

The proposed rule covers all aspects of the FMMO program and contains provisions dealing with consolidation of marketing orders, classified pricing, basic formula price (BFP) and classification and identical provisions.

As noted above, the 33 federal marketing orders would be consolidated into 11 orders.

Under classified pricing, the proposed rule suggests changes to the level and manner in which milk is priced according to its use. The summary states that for milk in the highest-valued, fluid use (Class I), two pricing options are presented for consideration. Both options recognize a location value of milk—that is, milk is costly to transport and therefore its value will differ by location.

Option 1A is a set of Class I prices that vary by location (called a "price surface"), and closely reflects the current price surface, but makes adjustments for recent changes in economic conditions.

Option 1B is more market-oriented, still providing minimum prices for higher valued fluid use, while relying more on the market to generate higher prices when needed to attract sufficient milk to markets. Three methods of transitioning to option 1B are offered: a graduate phase-in to lower Class I differentials with no transition assistance; transition assistance that "bumps up" Class I differentials initially to offset any loss in cash receipts due to the decline in Class I differentials; and transition assistance that initially "bumps up" the Class I differentials even more, while still phasing toward a more market-oriented price surface over a five-year period.

Basic Formula Price (BFP)

The current BFP has gradually become less representative of competitive conditions for milk for manufacturing over time. The current BFP is based on the Minnesota-Wisconsin price for unregulated Grade B (manufacturing-grade) milk, which is dwindling as a share of all milk produced in those states and nationally, and a product formula updated to reflect current competitive conditions for manufactured products.

The proposed rule suggests replacing the BFP with a Class III price based on multiple component pricing, which continues, but partially decoupages, the tie between the price of milk used in fluid products and the price of milk used in manufactured products. The proposed Class I price mover, which is a six-month moving average of manufacturing milk prices, will provide additional stability to the Class I market, the summary says.

Following publication of the proposed rule, the public will have 60 days to provide written comment. Following the comment period, a final rule will be published, taking into account all submitted materials from interested parties. Then, a referendum will be held to determine approval for each new milk marketing order by at least two-thirds of the producers in each new order.

The summary did not provide an address where the written comments may be submitted.

Average farmland sales price increases in 1997

Average sales price of Minnesota farmland went up again in 1997, according to the annual study made by the University of Minnesota.

The 1997 study of 1,643 sales showed a median price of $916 per acre of farmland, compared to $901 in 1996 and only $759 in 1995.

"The buying enthusiasm I reported a year ago seems unchecked," says Steve Taff, a public policy economist with the university.

"Most 1997 sales were for parcels of 160 acres of less. Hardly anyone buys whole farms any more," Taff said. "Most transactions are for pieces of farms, and purchasers are not new farmers, but neighbors rounding out existing operations."

Some of the high prices can't be supported by conventional farming income from the parcels themselves, Taff adds. But many farmers and lenders say these prices make sense from a whole-farm perspective.

"As long as farms continue to be cannibalized by neighbors to round out their land base, there will be higher prices," Taff says.

Some high farmland prices have little to do with production potential. But Taff says that as long as residential development pressures at the edge of big and small towns remain unchecked by effective land use policies, there will be upward pressure on farmland for conversion into residential use.

"And as long as people are prepared to buy farms to retire on, enjoy on weekends, hunt on or simply enjoy the pleasures of ownership, there will be upward pressure on prices," he continues. "The production component seems to be losing its prominence—even in traditional farming areas—to the financial, locational and speculative components."

Taff says use of farmland price data needs scrutiny. "Is 'agricultural land' really a separate market?" he asks. "Possibly we should shift toward analysis of a single 'land' market in rural areas, one that operates independently of intended use, whether it be crops, recreation, timber or speculation."

The study is reported in the fall, 1997, issue of the Minnesota Agricultural Economist, published by the University of Minnesota Extension Service. Free single copies of the publication are available from the Waite Library, Department of Applied Economics, 1994 Buford Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55108-6040, phone 612-625-1705.

Taff is a faculty member of the university's College of Agricultural, Food and Environmental Sciences.

According to the University of Minnesota Dairy Initiatives newsletter, Tim and Amy Leonard of Young America have increased the production of their 50-cow dairy herd to a rolling herd average of 27,003 pounds of milk, 1,150 pounds of butterfat and 881 pounds of protein through several herd practice changes, including use of BST. Despite the increases, the herd is seventh in the state in per-cow production.

Census of Agriculture deadline is February 2

Forms providing information for the 1997 Census of Agriculture are due for return by February 2, 1998, according to the National Agricultural Statistics Service of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Report forms were mailed in late December to the nation's farmers to collect data for the 1997 calendar year. The census includes as a farm every place from which $1,000 or more of agricultural products were produced and sold, or normally would have been sold, during the census year.

Many of the questions are similar to those asked in the 1992 census. Data will be collected from all farmers on land use and ownership, crop acreage and quantities harvested, numbers of livestock and poultry, value of crops and livestock sold and operator characteristics. New items include area and value of cut Christmas trees harvested, acres of maple trees tapped and number of taps.

Report forms sent to 25 percent of farmers include additional questions on production expenses, fertilizer and chemicals, machinery and equipment, market value of land and buildings, and income from farm-related sources. The report forms are tailored by region to make them less burdensome on respondents.

The Ag Statistics Service said that the report forms were developed by using advice from farmers, farm organizations, agricultural universities, members of the Census Advisory Committee on Agriculture Statistics and state and federal agencies.

Compilation of census information will provide a statistical portrait of U.S. agriculture at the county, state and national levels, showing in detail how farmers stand today, compared with five years ago.

"The picture will focus on key information," states Michael Hunst, state statistician with the Minnesota Agricultural Statistics Service, "including the number of farms, farm size, operator characteristics, crop and livestock production, agricultural products sales and production expenses of farmers and ranchers."

Data reported by individual farm operators in the census is held confidential by law. The same law requiring a census of agriculture also forbids revealing information about individuals. Data is summarized to prevent identification of individual farms. Statistical results are analyzed and made available in printed and electronic form.

Farmers can do several things to make this census an effective tool to help chart the future, Hunst said. They can return their census forms and make sure the information is complete, accurate and timely. They can also use the statistics to plan practical improvements in U.S. agriculture.

Some examples of how census of agriculture numbers provide practical information to improve farm operations and agribusinesses are as follows:

• Farm organizations, Congress and state and local governments have information on which to plan programs to help farm operators get the most for their investments.

• Farm machinery manufacturers more effectively target their industries to where they are needed by using county and state statistics, resulting in economic benefit for farm operators.

• Seed and fertilizer producers can compare yields and other information to help operators do the most effective job.

• Irrigation specialists, water resource developers and irrigation equipment manufacturers can learn much from census data and convert that knowledge into practical advice for farm operators.

• State and national lawmakers can determine where to allocate funds that will benefit agricultural producers.

• Farm broadcasters and agricultural editors can convey census results to their audiences, and use the data to help focus their stories on important areas of agriculture.

• Researchers and legislators can use county-level data to define problem areas and help farmers recover from outbreaks of disease and pests.

• The information is used for evaluating programs affecting agricultural production.

The census of agricultutre is the only source of uniform, comprehensive agricultural data tabulated for every county in the nation.

"Farmers represent a major sector of the nation's economy," Hunst added. "America counts on agriculture."

Half-cent boost sought in wheat checkoff rate

A half-cent increase in the Minnesota wheat checkoff to one and one-half cents per bushel is being endorsed by the Minnesota Wheat Research and Promotion Council and the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers, according to articles in Prairie Grains, jointly published by Minnesota and South Dakota wheat growers, Minnesota barley growers and North Dakota grain growers organizations.

Minnesota established its wheat research and promotion council in 1977 when producers approved the council in a statewide referendum. The checkoff rate of one cent per bushel was established at that time to support council activities and the rate has remained constant for the past 20 years.

Cliff Keller of Fergus Falls, who chairs the Minnesota Wheat Research and Promotion Council, points out that in 1977 Minnesota harvested 3.327 million acres of wheat with an average yield of 39.6 bushels per acre. In 1997 only 2.465 million acres were harvested in the state and average yield had dropped to 32.6 bushels. Total production in 1997 of 78.9 million bushels compares with total production in 1977 of 131.9 million bushels.

As recently as 1992 the state produced nearly 140 million bushels of wheat when average yields on 2.8 million acres were year 50 bushels per acre. Since then, infestations of disease—particularly scab—have taken a severe toll on the state's wheat crop...and on the resulting checkoff funds which are tied to production.

As Keller notes, the reduction in checkoff fund receipts comes at a time when additional money is needed to support research on scab and disease resistant varieties.

Tim Dufault of Crookston, president of the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers, said his organization supports the wheat council's decision to seek a checkoff increase. A resolution adopted by the association states:

"The MAWG supports an increase in the state's wheat checkoff to help improve wheat profits through increased research, wheat customer service and market development. Priorities under an increased checkoff would include scab research and funding a state wheat breeder."

Dufault said that the state organizations have been successful in attracting scab research funds from the state legislature and U.S. Department of Agriculture, but the key question legislators ask is: "What are you doing to fund the problem?"

Dufault said that "the fact that producers are committing more of their own money through the checkoff to research is the lynch pin in leveraging state and federal taxpayer dollars."

He also noted that the checkoff dollars that 18 wheat-producing states use to fund U. S. Wheat Associates, the U.S. wheat industry's export market development organization, is matched by the Foreign Ag Service of USDA.

"As farmers," wheat council chairman Keller says, "we can't expect to grow and sell a wheat crop if we don't invest sufficiently in fertilizer, fuel, pesticides, land and machinery. How can we grow and sell wheat if we don't invest sufficiently to meet the significant challenges facing our industry?"

Wheat Council recognized

Minnesota Wheat Research and Promotion Council was recognized by the American Cancer Society of Minnesota in appreciation of the partnership the two organizations have in promoting a high fiber diet.

Wheat bran and whole grains have high insoluble fiber, which plays an important role in the digestive system. Research indicates a high fiber diet can be helpful in preventing certain cancers, such as colon and breast cancer.

"The Minnesota Wheat Council provides the funding for booth fees at county fairs and health fairs and the American Cancer Society provides the volunteers who not only emphasize good nutrition and high fiber, but also help promote the consumption of wheat products," says Patty Swanson of Hallock, immediate past chair of the ACS Minnesota division.

"Including our volunteers and the people we reach in the booths, we are educating about 100,000 people a year about wheat and a healthy diet," Swanson said. "That means over the last five years, by working together, we've reached about a half million people."

Area man charged in double accident

A Newfolden man faces drunk driving charges after his vehicle crashed into an accident scene on Highway 1 Friday, January 30.

According to the Minnesota State Patrol, Tawnya Panek had been involved in a single vehicle accident about four miles west of Thief River Falls on Highway 1 at about 11:19 p.m. January 30. According to information released and reported in The Times, Panek was driving past a shelterbelt, hit and icy patch, her vehicle skidded and rolled, and she was ejected from the vehicle.

As Panek was lying in the middle of the roadway a vehicle driven by Dean Engen crashed into the accident scene.

Information about that accident was not released until recently because of an ongoing investigation. According to the information, Brandon Yoney of Argyle, who was driving a 1991 Pontiac Grand Am, came upon the accident scene, and noticed a woman (Panek) lying on the road waving at him. Yoney pulled to the side of the road, but not entirely off the road, to assist Panek. He then noticed another vehicle approaching the accident scene and flashed his lights at the driver in an attempt to slow the vehicle. That vehicle, a 1988 Ford pickup continued into the accident scene, glanced off the Panek vehicle, hit the Yoney vehicle, and ended up in the ditch. Yoney then noticed that the woman (Panek) was lying face down in the ditch, and presumed she had been struck by the pickup.

Upon arriving at the scene, State Patrol identified the driver of the pickup as Dean Engen, 21, of Newfolden, although Engen denied that he was the driver. Yoney, Engen and passengers in those vehicles were not injured.

Panek was taken to Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls and then transferred to Altru Hospital in Grand Forks. As of Friday, February 6, Panek was listed in satisfactory condition at Altru Hospital in Grand Forks.

Pennington County District Court records show that Engen appeared in court on Monday and has been charged with criminal vehicular operation resulting in great bodily harm, enhanced gross misdemeanor driving while intoxicated, and driving without insurance. He was released on personal recognizance.

According to court records, Engen has two prior DWI convictions, one in 1993 and one in 1994. He stands charged in this case with "enhanced driving while intoxicated", a new violation recently adopted by the Legislature, which imposes a tougher sentence.

Roseau native finalist in bake-off

Roseau - Roseau native Hazel Nute of Tacoma, WA is one of 100 finalists competing for a $1 million prize in Pillsbury's "Quick and Easy Bake-off." The televised contest will be held on February 24 and hosted by Jeopardy's Alex Trebec.

Nute is one of 100 finalists chosen from over 20,000 entries. The contest is divided into four categories — simple side dishes, main dishes, appetizers and quick and easy treats — with 25 finalists in each group. Nute's recipe, for a side dish made with Green Giant Vegetables, will remain a secret until after the winner is announced. Roseau Times-Regian

After two year absance fishing derby returns

Fosston - Cancelled for the last two years due to weather conditions, the ice fishing derby sponsored by the Fosston Area Sportsman Club will return to Cross Lake on Sunday, February 8.

In addition to prizes for fishing results, there will be ticket drawings for cash prizes and items donated by area businesses.

Proceeds from the derby will be used for the numerous conservation projects of the club. The Thirteen Towns

Baudatte company builds floating track vans

Warroad - M & C Fabrication of Baudette constructed two positive floatation track vans now in use on Lake of the Woods.

Each new van weighs 7,340 pounds and can safely keep 11,600 pounds afloat. There are no cords to pull or switches to flip. A specially-designed foam blown into the floors, benches and walls of the vans.

Mark LaValla and Chad Beckel of M & C Fabrication took the body off an old track van and constructed a new body for it. The black UPS truck-looking vehicles can carry up to 12 people, one and one-half times as many as the older converted street vans. Warroad Pianeer

Clearwater saves for new facility

Bagley - Clearwater County is building a new $4.3 million jail and addition to the courthouse the old fashioned way — by budgeting and saving for it.

One of the poorest counties in the state, Clearwater County needs to replace the rundown jail the county bought from the City of Bagley in 1905, but instead of asking the tax payers to pay for it with a bonding issue, the county has been saving and budgeting for it since about 1994.

Construction began in May of 1997, and the jail is expected to open this summer. The Pioneer

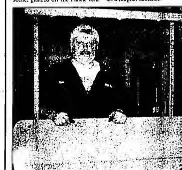
Three police officers from the Thief River Falls Police Department were honored by the Kiwanis Club of Thief River Falls recently. The three officers were credited for saving the lives of a number of people during an apartment fire in downtown Thief River Falls on September 21. Each of the officers, investigator Tim Miller, Officer Terese Mattison, and Officer Brent Monroe, received a plaque, and an award from the AAL of Trinity Lutheran Church. Pictured from left are: Don Jorsted, division 12 district Lt. Governor for Kiwanis, Officer Teresa Mattison, investigator Tim Miller, Officer Brent Monroe, and Les Vigness, Kiwanis.

Officers honored for bravery during fire



During a banquet Tuesday, February 3, three police officers from Thief River Falls received special recognition for risking their lives to save others during a fire September 21, 1997.

The Thief River Falls police department, fire department and ambulance service were honored at the banquet. Kiwanis Club and AAL of Thief River Falls singled out Officers Brent Monroe, Teresa Mattison and Investigator Tim Miller for special recognition after they risked their lives to save others during the September 21, 1997 fire at the Drevlow building in downtown Thief River Falls. The three officers entered the burning building, awakened a number of people who were sleeping at the time, and guided them through thick smoke to safety.

Accounts of the event were read to a crowd of friends and relatives gathered at the Best Western. Thief River Falls Mayor Mark Borsheim said he was very proud of the officers who clearly went beyond the call of duty. Police Chief Ken Froschheiser thanked his department, the fire department, and ambulance service and then said he was proud to have the opportunity to work with these three officers and command them.

Adeline Parnow of AAL at Trinity Lutheran Church presented the three officers with special grants. She explained that every year they get a grant to recognize someone who has performed outstanding service to the community. This year, she said, they decided to give the grant to these three officers. (The officers have donated the grant to the DARE program.)

Tom Morrissey is president of Scribe-Rite Steel, Inc. of Gatzke. The welding and machining business is housed in the former school building where Tom and two employees build adjustable, ergonomic work tables used primarily in industry.

Shop table gains wide acceptance

by Kathl Carlson
Northern Watch Reporter

During our visit, Tom Morrissey used the word "really" a lot as he described what he does as "really fun," how he feels about what's happening as "really exciting" and his outlook as "really optimistic."

Tom Morrissey is the president of Scribe-Rite Steel, Inc. (SRS, Inc.), a welding and machining operation located in the former school building in Gatzke.

The major product of the business is a table used, for the most part, as a work station in manufacturing facilities.

The ergonomic table is adjustable, a crank adjusting the height between 30 and 42 inches. It includes an air manifold with connections for five different air tools. An optional, adjustable overhead attachment will accomodate a four-foot flourescent light and five additional air tools. "The white plastic tabletop utilizes available light very well," says Tom. The table is also available with a metal tabletop for welding.

The table's design is simple. Trailer jacks are used for the legs, and the mechanism is driven by a bicycle chain.

Some of the components of the table are built by Hanson Manufacturing of Lancaster and Metal Magic of Middle River. Other parts and the nuts and bolts come out of Grand Forks. The majority of the metal is from the Twin Cities, and the tabletops are delivered from Fargo.

The price of the table starts at $500, and it is available to individuals as well as industry.

Polaris engineer Phil Johnson is credited with the original concept. Johnson owns Intercept Industries in Roseau which manufactures components for Polaris and mounts tires on the company's ATV's.

Morrissey says he took Johnson's design and "cleaned it up and made it producible." He has been making the tables since 1992 and in July of 1995, incorporated and moved his business into the school building in Gatzke.

It was Tom's original intent to Lincoln bands perform concert Monday night

"Strife and Sanctity: Music of War" will be presented by Lincoln high school bands as the theme for their winter concert Monday, February 9, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium. There is no admission fee.

Under the direction of Bruce Felt, Lincoln's jazz band, concert band and wind ensemble will be featured in songs with military and patriotic significance.

"All of these pieces portray not only the strong spirit that bonds soldiers and their country, but also the pain, fear and confusion of war," Felt said. "This concert should be a very worthwhile experience, and we invite everyone to share this night of celebration and remembrance."

• Opening the concert will be the jazz band playing Blue Train which features soloists Kyle Rokke, Jim Lehrer, Lesley Ihle and Kristine Koop. The second song, Traces, is a trombone solo with band accompaniment with Jim Lehrer as soloist. Final selection will be Rhythm Me This with solos by Brad Dekkers and Tyler Stinson.

Concert band will open its phase of the concert with Armed Forces Salute, arranged by Bob Lowden, a medley of Army, Navy, Marine, Air Force and Coast Guard songs performed with patriotic spirit. This will be followed by March of the Belgian Paratroopers, written by Pierre Leemans and arranged by Charles A. Wiley and Where Never Lark or Eagle Flew by James Curnow, based on a poem by John Gillespie Magee Jr.

Spitfire by James Barnes will open the wind ensemble portion of the concert. It begins with a fanfare style opening and develops into almost a ballad. Esprit de Corps by Robert Jager presents a group spirit which is an evident theme of the armed forces. The final number, Symphony #1: In Memoriam Dresden by Daniel Bukvich, is an unconventional piece based on the bombing of Dresden, Germany, which Felt said is sure to move the audience.

Members of the concert band and wind ensemble are the following with names of members of those bands who participate in the jazz band printed in bold type:

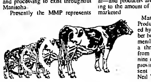
Manitoba dairymen use quota system

Farmer organization handles all milk purchases and sales in the province

(This is the 10th in a series of Northern Watch stories on the loss of dairy farmers and a view toward the future of the dairy industry in northwest Minnesota.)



by Marvin Lundin
Northern Watch Editor

Established by the Province of Manitoba in 1974, Manitoba Milk Producers (MMP) is a dairy farmer organization which handles the purchase of milk from all dairy farmers and sales to all processors in the province. This control has brought stability to the industry, enabled dairy farmers to negotiate price and permitted profitable dairy farming and processing to exist throughout Manitoba.

Presently the MMP represents 768 dairy farms which produce about 23 million liters of milk with a value of $12.5 to $13 million Canadian dollars per month. (One liter equals 1.056 quarts.) The milk is sold to the 12 processors in the province with 18 haulers contracted by the MMP to pick up milk at the farm every other day and transport it to the processors.

Board Collects, Distributes

Each month the MMP collects for sales to processors and distributes the returns to the producers on a pool basis. All producers share equally in the proceeds from all markets—both fluid and industrial—and producers are paid according to the amount of milk each has marketed.

Manitoba Milk Producers is operated by a nine-member board with one member elected for a three-year term from each of the nine districts in the province. The present chairman is Neil Van Ryssel of Oak Bank, Manitoba, representing District 6. All board members must be dairymen who are active producers in their districts. There are two or three days a month when the board meets to set policy, hear reports of marketing activity and review quotas.

Purposes Of The Board

According to information provided by Jim Wade, who has been general manager of MMP since 1987, the purpose for establishing the board has been and remains:

- To obtain fair and equitable prices for milk;
- To develop and maintain an orderly marketing strategy;
- To encourage a consistent supply of high quality milk;
- To maintain an adequate advertising and promotion program; and
- To act on behalf of all milk producers with respect to the public.

Quota System A Key

The quota system is a key to the program and is based on the domestic market. Wade said that 90 percent of the production of Manitoba's dairy farmers goes into the domestic market. Of the total, about 39 percent is used for fluid milk and 61 percent for all other industrial uses. Of that 61 percent, nearly three-fourths is used in cheese manufacture.

Quotas are permitted under the system to pass from one generation to another. They also have cash value on a trade basis, which permits dairymen who would like to expand their herds to purchase quota from dairymen offering units to sell. A quota exchange is conducted once a month. Sales are based on the production of one kilogram of butterfat per day—the equivalent of approximately one producing dairy cow. (One kilogram is equivalent to 2.204 pounds. Top 15 dairy herds in the Pennington County DHIA average 2.5 to 1.7 pounds of butterfat per day.)

February Exchange Held

At the February exchange just completed, Wade said, there were 74 bids to buy (22 of which were successful) and 19 offers to sell (10 of which were successful). As a result of the sale, 104.32 kilograms of quota changed hands at a price of

SOUPÇON

Sherry LaCoursiere

It should be time to have some real meat dishes and I've tried to pick a variety so you can enjoy whatever type of meat is your favorite. These are all from the Trinity Church cookbook.

Here's a main dish I've forgotten about - wouldn't it be good - especially cooked with the carrots and potatoes right in it:

PORCUPINE MEAT BALLS
1 pound ground beef
1/2 cup uncooked rice
1 egg, beaten
1/2 cup chopped onion
Salt and pepper
Carrots
Potatoes
3 1/2 cups tomato juice

Mix beef, rice, egg, onion and salt and pepper and shape into balls. Brown. Cover balls with carrots, potatoes and tomato juice and simmer one hour.

Since we celebrated Ground Hog Day this past week (and there will be six more weeks of winter - surprise!), here is an appropriate dish. It will serve a bunch, too:

GROUND HOG STEW or SAUSAGE-BEAN CHOWDER
1 pound or more sausage (pork or turkey)
2 cans kidney beans, undrained
1 can lima beans, undrained
28 ounce can cut up tomatoes
1 large onion, chopped
1 bay leaf
1 1/2 teaspoons seasoned salt
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon thyme
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup diced potatoes
1 quart water

Brown sausage and drain.

In large soup kettle, place sausage, beans, tomatoes, water, onion and all seasonings. Simmer, covered, 1 hour.

Add potatoes and green pepper and cook until potatoes are done, 15-20 more minutes.

Here's a simple way to fix chicken that is elegant enough for company:

DELICIOUS EASY CHICKEN
6 to 8 chicken breasts, split and deboned
1 (10 1/2 ounce) can cream of mushroom soup
1/2 cup sour cream
1/4 cup Hellmann's mayonnaise
1/4 cup dry white Vermouth

Roll chicken breasts and place, seam side down, in greased casserole or 9x13 inch pan.

Combine soup, sour cream, mayonnaise and Vermouth and pour over chicken breasts. Bake, uncovered, at 250 degrees for 2 1/2 to 3 hours.

Wild or white rice is a good accompaniment. Dish can be assembled, covered and refrigerated over night before baking.

This sounds like a really tasty main dish - how about some favorite scalloped potatoes with it:

ALMOST HAM BALLS
1 pound raw hamburger
1 can smoked Spam, ground
1/4 cup chopped onion
3/4 cup bread crumbs
2 eggs
1/2 cup milk
Sauce
1 (9 ounce) can crushed pineapple
1/4 cup vinegar
1/3 cup ketchup
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon ginger
No salt or pepper

Mix hamburger, Spam, onion, bread crumbs, eggs and milk. Make into balls and place close together in 9x9 inch pan.

Mix sauce and pour over meatballs. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour.

Recipe can be doubled and one frozen, if desired. According to the recipe, it "waits" well if meal is delayed and goes well with augratin potatoes and a broccoli dish.

Another all-in-one meal, this time with pork chops:

PORK CHOP DINNER
1 can cream of chicken soup
1/4 cup milk
4 medium potatoes, sliced
Salt and pepper to taste
1/4 small onion, sliced
3 slices of American cheese, broken
1 can green beans, drained
4 pork chops, browned
Garlic salt

Reserve 4 tablespoons of soup. Combine remaining soup and milk. Add potatoes, onion, salt and pepper. Pour into greased casserole and dot with cheese. Add beans.

Brown pork chops and place on top of mixture. Spread chops with remaining soup and sprinkle lightly with garlic salt. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour and 50 minutes, removing cover for last 30 minutes.

EDITORIAL OPINIONS

NORTHERN WATCH
Thief River Falls, Minnesota

John P. Mattson, Publisher
Marvin Lundin, Editor
David Hill, Associate Editor

Editorial opinion published under this heading is intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. Unless specified otherwise, the editorials are written by Editor Marvin Lundin and do not represent opinion of other staff members. Opinions in items from other publications may not coincide with the editor's own views but are offered for their general interest.

Legislature Abuzz About Personal Watercraft

That buzz you have been hearing lately hasn't been one of Arctic Cat's Tigersharks. It has been the state legislature giving and listening to testimony about the sleek little boats that have been gaining popularity with an increasing number of public water users—and thereby upsetting an increasing number of non-riders.

Sen. Roger Moe of Erskine recently faxed us his news column which contained two pages of commentary on the dispute in the legislature over personal watercraft use. But don't ask us which direction he is swimming on this issue; he is doing his best just to tread water.

In fact, it seems he has taken the politician's equivalent of a strong stand, which is: "I know a lot of the people are in favor of this issue and a lot of the people are against this issue, and I want you all to know without a doubt that I stand squarely with the people!"

"The opinions fall on both sides of the issue, making it difficult to find middle ground when it comes to use of personal watercraft on Minnesota waters," he says early in his column. "Given the strong opinions held on both sides of this issue, striking a balance viewed as fair to all concerned won't be accomplished easily," he concludes. In between, he waffles.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature which would ban personal watercraft from all Minnesota lakes less than 200 acres in size. From what we understand, that would be a majority and perhaps most of the total number of lakes in the state. Such a law would do one of two things: Kill the personal watercraft business in Minnesota or concentrate the PWC owners on lakes larger than 200 acres—where they would be no more welcome, especially in larger numbers.

According to Sen. Moe and others, it has been projected that unchecked proliferation of PWCs could have a severe adverse affect on the state's tourist industry. One assumption is that most lake-goers who come to Minnesota lake country do so for serenity, not to listen to motorized waterbugs which can be so loud you can hardly hear the mosquitoes. Another assumption is that those serenity-seeking lake-goers spend a lot of money while doing so.

(Such may not always be the case. We recall the comment of a Lake of the Woods resort owner that Iowa farmers who sat on the bank and fished for bullheads came to his place "with a new pair of overalls and a twenty dollar bill and never changed either one.")

We can certainly understand the ire of people who have invested a great deal of time and energy over the years to create a comfortable living place on a peaceful lake, only to have that dream retreat haunted by watercraft that won't let the sun set on still waters.

Conversely, children of all ages need a place to play with their toys, and they are members of the public entitled to use public lands and waters as much as the next person. We should, as members of that public, not be too hasty to be overly restrictive of how the public's property is available to the public. Especially we should take a dim view of any description and treatment of public land and waters as "state" land and waters.

To be honest, we don't look too favorably on PWCs which buzz around our fishing area—but we aren't fond of the pilots of 26-footers who pay no heed to their noise or wake as they use the area either. Selfish as we are, we must reluctantly admit that they have no less right to pursue their enjoyment and activity than we do ours. It seems to boil down to simply being considerate of other members of the public seeking to utilize and enjoy the provisions of nature.

To be fair, we understand that Senator Moe is in an almost impossible political position in his district, with manufacturers at his front door and small residential as well as recreational lakes at his back door. How can he represent all people who are adamant on both sides of the question?

At least for the present, we would opt for tolerance of personal watercraft on all public waters where motor use is permitted. We would encourage manufacturers, dealers and users in the strongest possible way to increase their preaching of responsible, safe and respectful use of the little boats and urge riders to voluntarily curtail use in early and late hours and close to shorelines, especially near cabins and swimming areas.

If that doesn't alleviate the problem and it continues to soar, maybe the state Department of Natural Resources could initiate the ultimate control effort—declare a hunting season with an open bag limit.

A Great Governor Or Just Lucky?

If one would believe what Governor Arne Carlson had to say in his "State of the State" address, his presence in the governor's office during the past seven years had something to do with the positive change in the condition of the state.

"The truth today is that the state of the state is excellent," he said. "We are stronger financially, more prosperous and better prepared to take on the future than ever before."

He recalled that he came into office with the state facing a severe deficit, exhausted budget reserves and a system spending at a rate 15 percent higher than the growth of personal income. Today the state has a projected $1.3 billion surplus, replenished budget reserves and state spending less than the growth of Minnesotans' incomes.

Has he been that good a governor, or has he just been lucky to serve at a time when the state has had good economic times? Perhaps credit should be given to both.

It would be unfair not to give any credit to Carlson who, we believe, understands economics of the state and through his not infrequently obstinate positions compelled the legislature to be more frugal than it otherwise might have been. Conversely, the state has experienced a period of overall prosperity which has exceeded expectations and would have helped make the administration of nearly any governor look good.

The projected huge budget surplus, for instance, was more of a surprise to state officials—the governor included—than a planned situation. It is expected to happen more in spite of their actions than because of them.

We'll give Arne Carlson the benefit of the doubt as having been a positive influence on the state for his two terms. He certainly didn't do the state any real harm, and the legislature saved him from the embarrassment that would have resulted if his endorsement had been followed and the state had become involved in the Twins Stadium fiasco.

We didn't see him up this way as often as we did Governor Perpich (we can only recall Gov. Carlson being here once in his seven years in office), although he is supposed to be here next week for the Governor's Snowmobile Ride. Given his past disinclination to travel northwest, we're not making any bets that he will show up for his own event, but we've been wrong before. We would welcome his visit. It would be nice for him to see the state of this part of the state.

LHS mock trial team wins first trial of season

Lincoln high school mock trial team won the first of its two trials this season by defeating Detroit Lakes 155-144 in a trial conducted Wednesday, February 4, in the Mahnomen county courthouse.

Attorney Jonathan Olson, who served as the presiding judge, gave Thief River Falls 77 points and Detroit Lakes 70. Scoring judge Elroy Hanson awarded 78 points to Lincoln and 74 to Detroit Lakes.

The Thief River Falls team represented the defendant in this trial and the defendant was found not guilty.

Lincoln mock trial teacher coach Cal Lindberg said it was a spirited trial with a large number of objections. He said LHS scored high on the opening statement by attorney Rachel Grechs and on the closing statement by attorney Lesley Ihle.

"The team also scored very well on its cross examinations and appropriate objections," Lindberg said. "For that I credit the effort of attorney coach Mike Jorgenson who has been drilling the team members in those areas of trial procedure."

Lincoln battled illness as well as a strong Detroit Lakes team. Two team members did not make the trip due to illness and several of those who did fought their way through the trial with glasses of water and cough drops.

Second and final regular season trial for Lincoln will be Thursday, February 12, when they will represent the prosecution and Moorhead high school will represent the defense in a 1 p.m. trial at the Norman county courthouse in Ada.

Brighter uses for soybeans keep pouring in

Soybeans keep pouring into colorful new uses, like new soy-based crayons. Using natural soybean oil instead of petroleum-based wax, soy crayons are non-toxic and biodegradable. Of course, the benefits don't end with the environment. Thanks to their soybean oil base, these crayons are also brighter, smoother and less likely to flake.

Soybean benefits are also pouring into the printing industry. Soy ink has become the color ink of choice in 90 percent of our nation's daily newspapers, reaching almost 50 million readers every day. Because of its better, brighter colors, soy ink is also becoming a favorite with commercial printers. All of this from soybeans – and American soybean farmers.

Soybeans. Pouring out a better future for all of us.

Polaris profit up but sales down for 4th quarter of '97 year

Net income for Polaris Industries, Inc. for the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1997, increased nine per cent to $18,430,000 while sales decreased to $280,316,000 according to the company's quarter ending report. Net income of 70 cents per share was up 15 percent from 61 cents a year ago.

In the last quarter of 1996, the company had sales of $297,672,000 and net income of $16,837,000.

For the ninth consecutive year, the company reported an increase in net income for the full year. Net income for the full year was up five percent from $62,298,000 in 1996 to $65,383,000 in 1997. This was despite a decline in annual sales from $1,191,901,000 in 1996 to $1,048,296,000 in 1997. Net income per share increased nine percent to $2.15 from $2.24.

"As we expected," Polaris chairman and chief executive officer W. Hall Wendel said, "a continued improvement in gross margin as a percentage of sales enabled us to achieve our earnings growth despite a decline in sales." For the year, the company's gross margin improved to 25 percent of sales from 22.1 percent of sales in 1996.

The company attributed the margin improvement to its ongoing cost reduction efforts, expansion of its domestic engine manufacturing program, lower warranty expenses and a favorable Japanese yen to U.S. dollar exchange rate. In addition, the profits generated from the company's 50 percent interest in Polaris Acceptance, the company's finance joint venture, contributed to the earnings growth.

Reduced sales resulted primarily from anticipated lower snowmobile and personal watercraft sales.

"We monitor retail sales closely and adjust our production to retail demand," Wendel said. "We reduced 1997 production of both snowmobiles and personal watercraft from 1996 levels to reduce inventories in the field and more closely match supply with consumer demand." He said the company's year-end debt of $24,400,000 resulted in a favorable debt to total capital ratio of 13 percent.

Season ending field inventory of personal watercraft was better than last year but higher than anticipated, and will result in a reduction in 1998 model production, Wendel noted. He said he expects a clean dealer pipeline by the end of 1998.

Wendel also affirmed that the first of its Victory motorcycles will be delivered to approximately 150 approved dealers late this spring. He said the price of $12,995 is competitive with foreign motorcycle manufacturers and well below the American competition.

Polaris will also continue its share repurchase program in 1998. Since Jan. 1, 1997, the company has repurchased approximately 1.5 million of its common shares, leaving approximately 1.0 million shares remaining on its board of directors authorization.

Prowlers surprise Jacks 3-1

Mike Dowers stopped 27 of 28 shots and Trevor Lee, Brett Johnson and Tony Fletcher scored goals Tuesday as Thief River Falls pulled off a surprise with a 3-1 high school hockey win over Bemidji at the John Glas Fieldhouse.

It was just the fourth win in 20 starts for the Prowlers, who lost to the Lumberjacks 4-2 back on Dec. 19. Bemidji is 12-6-2.

Thief River Falls coach Scott Bergland said it wasn't a case of the Prowlers playing above their heads to record an upset. "We played average," he said. "We're capable of playing better. We got a few chances, and we capitalized."

There was no scoring until Lee put the puck behind Bemidji goalie Jim Schoonover at 7:43 of the second period.

A power play goal by Johnson made it 2-0 at 2:25 of the third period and Fletcher made it a three-goal spread at 5:47.

Bemidji didn't get on the board until a Joe Motzko goal spoiled Dowers' shutout bid with just 2:32 remaining.

"Dowers was solid," offered Bergland. "He did a nice job."

Thief River Falls will close out the 1997-98 regular season schedule with games Tuesday at home against East Grand Forks and Friday at Fergus Falls. Section 8A seeding meeting will be held Wednesday, with post-season play starting Tuesday, Feb. 17.

Wildcats handle Pioneers 87-59

North Dakota State College of Science shot 52 percent from the field (33/64) as the Wildcats handled Northland Community and Technical College 87-59 in a women's basketball game played at Wahpeton.

The winners led 39-24 at halftime.

"Their quickness hurt us," reported Northland coach Rick Nikunen. "We're not very quick and not very fast. They are. Our inside people matched up with them, but they have some very good perimeter players who really hurt us."

Northland shot 43 percent from the field (20/47). The Pioneers were 18-for-25 at the free throw line, where the Wildcats went 14-for-23. The winners had a 38-29 rebound edge. Northland topped the rebound charts 25-11.

The loss dropped Northland to 8-9. It was the final nonconference game of the 1997-98 season for the Pioneers, who wrap things up with five Minnesota Community College Conference Northern Division games from Feb. 6-20.

NDSCS men post 31-point win over struggling NCTC

Three-point shooting by Adam Forthun highlighted an 86-55 North Dakota State College of Science win over Northland Community and Technical College Wednesday in a men's basketball match-up at Wahpeton.

Forthun went 11-for-19 from three-point range to account for all of his game-high 33 points. He was 8-for-8 from that range in helping stake the Wildcats to a 42-17 halftime lead.

Northland coach Ted Krize said Forthun connected on a couple shots in the 25-foot range, and hit some other shots while under close guard by the Pioneers' defense.

While the Wildcats were shooting 48 percent from the field (31/64), the Pioneers were shooting just 37 percent (21/57). "We were getting open shots, executing on offense and getting some stops on defense," explained Krize. "We just couldn't knock down the shots."

The nonconference loss left the Pioneers 1-16 with four Minnesota Community College Conference Northern Division games remaining in the 1997-98 season. "I was happy they (Pioneers) didn't give up," said Krize. "They played hard to the end."

The Pioneers went 10-for-14 at the free throw line, where the Wildcats were 12-for-16. The winners had a 39-35 rebound edge. Northland wound up with more turnovers, 19-11.

Mustangs edge Huskies 49-46

Red Lake County Central survived a few anxious moments in the final seconds Tuesday and got out of Goodridge with a 49-46 boys high school basketball win.

The Mustangs were ahead 49-45 with eight seconds left when they were hit with a foul on a three-point shot by the Huskies. Jared Eidelbes made one of the three free throws. Goodridge then wound up with the ball on a battle for the rebound after second miss, setting up a last-chance opportunity for a tie with a trey. But the long attempt by Jim Scheef with two seconds left was off the mark.

It was the second straight win for the 5-11 Mustangs. The Huskies fell to 7-9.

Goodridge led 13-12 at the end of the first quarter, fell behind 32-31 at halftime, used an effective trapping defense and transition offensive to go back in front 42-38 in the third quarter, but could muster just four points in the final eight minutes.

"They started missing some shots," noted Red Lake County Central coach Chris McLean. "They were getting pretty decent looks at the basket, but the shots weren't going in for them."

The Mustangs were 17-for-48 from the field (35 percent) and 9-for-13 at the free throw line. The Huskies went 18-for-46 from the floor (39 percent) and 10-for-18 at the line. Goodridge had a 29-27 rebound edge, and topped the turnover charts 13-11.

"They came ready to play, and we didn't," said Goodridge coach Eric Mickelson. "I was disappointed in our first half defense, and we didn't have great shot selection on offense."

MCC girls are awarded forfeit win over Eagles

East Grand Forks Sacred Heart out-scored Marshall County Central 53-43 Tuesday in a girls high school basketball game played at Newfolden, but a violation of the player participation rule that regulates how many quarters an individual can play through the course of a junior varsity/varsity doubleheader forced the Eagles to hand over a forfeit win to the Nordics.

The official scorekeeper caught the mistake, and after conferring with the referees at the close of the game, informed Marshall County Central coach Alice Dahl that the Nordics had their second win of the year.

On the court, a second quarter run by the Eagles accounted for the scoreboard spread as they turned a 6-3 first quarter deficit into a 23-17 halftime lead. It was 37-33 through three quarters.

"We shot terrible in the first half (7/25 - 28 percent)," said Dahl, "and we didn't get the rebounds like we should."

Miki Waterworth scored a game-high 20 points for the Nordics, with teammate Kristi Kilen adding 12. Chrissy Benson led the visitors with 18 points.

Marshall County Central was 20-for-49 from the field for the night (41 percent) and 3-for-9 at the free throw line. Sacred Heart went 21-for-54 from the floor (39 percent) and 8-for-11 at the line. The Eagles out-rebounded the Nordics 28-25 and Marshall County Central topped the turnover charts 12-9.

Only other game in the win column for the 2-16 Nordics was a 46-44 victory over Kittson County North in a Dec. 16 match-up during the Northland Community and Technical College Invitational.

NCTC women wind up with MCCC split

Northland, after losing to Itasca 48-46 in a key Friday night showdown between teams competing for a Minnesota Community College Conference women's state basketball tournament berth, came back with an 80-49 Saturday afternoon victory over winless Hibbing for a Jan. 30-31 Northern Division split on the road.

"We've had too many of those," said Northland coach Rick Nikunen, referring to the two-point setback at International Falls – the third loss by five points or less for the Pioneers, who are 4-5 in the MCCC and locked in a three-way race with Rainy River and Itasca for the fourth and final state tournament spot from the Northern Division. "It was a pretty intense, real physical defensive battle."

It went better at Hibbing the next day. "We played okay," said Nikunen. "We shot the ball better."

Rainy River..........48
Northland..........46

Rainy River watched a nine-point lead with three minutes to play shrink to just a two-point edge with 25 seconds left, but held on for a 48-46 win over Northland.

Down two, the Pioneers pushed the ball inside in the final moments, but missed the close-in shot. They regained possession with ten seconds to play by grabbing a rebound off a missed Rainy River free throw, but they were unable to travel the length of the court in time to get off a shot.

Stephanie Tangen scored a game-high 17 points for the Voyageurs, who trailed 25-19 at halftime. Naomi Wilebski led the Pioneers with 13 points.

Northland went 16-for-46 from the floor (35 percent) and had a 13-for-21 free throw game. Rainy River was 20-for-49 from the floor (41 percent) and made 5 of 7 free throws.

It was the second straight game in which the Pioneers played a strong first half, only to lose it in the second half as they did in a 77-48 defeat at Fergus Falls the previous Monday.

Hibbing..........49

Naomi Wilebski had a 19-point, 10-round game to lead Northland past Hibbing 80-49.

The Pioneers led 44-31 at halftime.

Nicole Miska, who had 35 points in an earlier loss to Northland scored 20 points for the Cardinals.

Northland shot 52 percent from the field (32/61) and made 14 of 21 free throws. Hibbing shot 31 percent from the floor (19/32) and was 3-for-10 at the line. The Pioneers had a sizeable 51-29 rebound advantage.

Northland beaten by Rainy River, Hibbing

Northland, after going through the first half of the 1997-98 Minnesota Community College Conference Northern Division men's basketball schedule without a win, was still looking for that elusive first MCCC victory following Jan. 30-31 weekend losses to Rainy River and Hibbing.

The Pioneers began the second time around the home-and-home divisional match-ups by losing to the Voyageurs 76-58 Friday night in International Falls and falling to the Cardinals 76-73 Saturday afternoon in Hibbing.

In first-time meetings, Hibbing beat Northland 95-87 and Rainy River handled the Pioneers 91-75.

"The Rainy River game was almost a carbon copy of the first time we played them," noted Northland coach Ted Krize. "We turned the ball over in the first half. Second half we came back and played them even."

Northland's next-day setback at the hands of Hibbing represented the Pioneers' third loss by a margin of four points or less this winter.

"It was a tough loss, but I'm happy with the way we played," said Krize.

Rainy River..........76
Northland..........58

Thirty-nine percent shooting (26/66) and 23 turnovers added up to a 76-58 Northland loss to Rainy River.

The Pioneers, who trailed 46-30 at halftime, got a 20-point game from Chaka Ali, 14 by Grant Skibicki and 11 from Josh Whitlock, but Dwight Goodwin, who has developed into a consistent double figure scorer, collected five fouls in five minutes of playing time and did not figure in the Northland offense.

Rainy River shot 46 percent from the field (32/70) and went 11-for-15 at the free throw line, where Northland was 2-for-7. The Pioneers finished with a 43-40 rebound edge.

Scoring

Hibbing..........76
Northland..........73

With the game on the line, the final two Northland possessions generated just a single free throw, and the Pioneers wound up with a 76-73 loss at the hands of Hibbing.

The game was tied 33-33 at halftime. A Hibbing offensive rebound was converted into a go-ahead 3-point basket with 40 seconds to play. A Nic Thompson free throw kept Northland in it, and a last-chance opportunity presented itself with a Northland rebound on the defensive end with five seconds left. But needing to cover the length of the court, the Pioneers' in-bound toss resulted into a game-clinching turnover.

Northland was 30-for-67 from the field (45 percent) and 12-for-17 at the free throw line. Hibbing went 30-for-71 from the floor (42 percent) and 7-for-13 at the line.

The winners had narrow quarter leads of 12-8, 31-29 and 44-39 before wrapping things up with a 23-11 run over the final eight minutes.

"We just wore down," reported Grygla-Gatzke coach Vern Johnson. "They're a good team, and we're battling the flu right now. I can't fault the effort."

Alex Anderson of Grygla-Gatzke and Eric Hopperstad of Red Lake Falls were the game's leading scorers with 18 and 16 points, respectively. Grygla-Gatzke also got 16 points from Philip Brateng and a 10-point, 10-rebound game from Bryce Torgerson.

B/G-MR rebounds, free throws result in win over Rams

Bret Bentow scored 20 points and Daryl Wockenfuss grabbed 18 rebounds Tuesday to lead the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River boys high school basketball team past host Roseau 69-58.

Led by Wockenfuss, the Gators beat the Rams on the boards 47-27. Bentow and Shane Nelson both added nine rebounds to the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River total.

"That was the big difference in the game," said Gators coach Eldon Sparby, pointing to the rebound figures. "Daryl had a great night on the boards."

Joining Bentow in double figures in the scoring column for the winners were Jeremy Vacura with 14 points and Nelson with 13.

The Gators jumped out to a 21-10 first quarter lead. They were up 35-23 and 51-37 at the next two quarter stops.

Roseau turned an 18-point deficit to a six-point spread in the fourth quarter, but couldn't complete the comeback that wound up as a free throw contest. The Gators went 21-for-25 at the line, while the Rams were 19-for-30.

"We started the game blistering the nets," explained Sparby. "It was a fierce battle the rest of the way. We managed to make some free throws at the end."

Isaac Lang scored 20 points to lead Roseau.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River was 21-for-56 from the field (38 percent), while Roseau went 18-for-47 (38 percent).

It was the eighth straight win for the 13-3 Gators.

Thief River Falls police department, fire department and ambulance service were honored February 3 for their efforts during a fire at a downtown business and apartment complex September 21. Three police officers, Officers Brent Monroe and Terese Mattison, and Investigator Tim Miller, were given special recognition for risking their own lives to rescue several residents living in the apartments. Pictured from left are Thief River Falls Police Chief Ken Froschheiser, Officer Brent Monroe, Investigator Tim Miller, Officer Teresa Mattison, and Chief Police Deputy Duane Holland.

The Kiwanis presented the three officers with special plaques recognizing their efforts to save people whose lives were so abruptly disrupted by the fire. They also have submitted the names of the three for recognition at a higher level within the Kiwanis organization.

Investigator Tim Miller has been in law enforcement since June of 1973 when he went to work for the Pennington County Sheriff's department. On January 16, 1976 he joined the Thief River Falls police department. Recently he was named investigator for the department. Miller and his wife Jane have four children and one grandchild. Tim is the son of Lyle and Marlys Miller of Kindred, ND. He is a graduate of the Alexandria Technical College law enforcement program.

Officer Brent Monroe is the son of James and Carol Monroe of Radium. He graduated from high school in Warren and from the law enforcement program at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls. He started working for the police department in Thief River Falls on February 1, 1996.

Officer Teresa Mattison joined the Thief River Falls Police department on October 15, 1996. She is the daughter of Bill and Henrietta Ness. She was born and raised in Thief River Falls and graduated from Lincoln High school. She also has a degree in business from the University of North Dakota, and completed the law enforcement program at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls. Teresa and her husband Jim have four sons.

Manitoba dairymen operate under quota system

$11,523.45 per kilogram. Sales at these monthly exchanges have ranged from one-tenth of a kilogram (one producer makes that purchase each month) to 40 kilograms (which in February would have meant an investment of $460,938).

The exchange is held on the first business day of the month and the check for payment of the purchases is due by the last business day of the month. Manitoba Milk Producers collects the payment and pays the seller.

"At today's interest rates, which are presently quite low, a producer could expect to recover the quota acquisition price in three and a half to four years with the difference between quota price and world price," Wade said.

Comparing "Mailbox" Prices

World "mailbox" price ("mailbox" referring to the price actually received by the dairyman for his production) as of February 4 was $17.09 (Canadian) per 100 liters. Mailbox price received by dairymen under the Manitoba Milk Producers domestic pool averaged $47.03 per 100 liters for 1997.

Since 100 liters equates to 220.5 pounds of milk, the Canadian domestic price would be approximately $21.32 per hundredweight—the unit of measurement used for payment of Minnesota milk production. Allowing for the current 45 percent exchange rate difference in value of the Canadian and U.S. dollar, the mailbox price received for domestic milk sales by Manitoba dairy farmers would approximate $14.70 per hundredweight in U.S. funds—approximately $3 higher than the Minnesota basic price.

Wade said that from 1.5 to 2.5 percent of the Manitoba quota is sold through the exchange on an annual basis. This isn't a large percentage, but does allow for herd expansion or the opportunity for new producers to get into the business. New producers may purchase quota on a bid basis after their facilities are qualified as suitable for production.

There has been a five percent transfer assessment collected by the MMP for dairymen selling their quota and going out of business. That fee will be eliminated later this year. There is no other fee to sell or buy quota on the exchange. All members of the MMP pay a fee for membership which is deducted from their monthly checks and used to operate the organization and pay milk hauling costs.

Average Dairy Has 55 Cows

The average dairy in Manitoba has 55 cows, with the number ranging from as few as 15 to as many as 500. Wade said that there is a trend toward increasing numbers and he expects a substantial difference in average herd sizes in the next several years.

He also said that a number of visitors to Manitoba Milk Producers offices and dairy farms in the province have commented that the Manitoba dairymen are ahead of their Minnesota counterparts in use of technology, including feeding and milking techniques and equipment.

For the most part the Canadian domestic quotas are established once a year—on August 1—on a national basis, then allocated to the provinces and the various producer boards.

Each producer is allocated his or her representative share of the domestic quota for which the domestic premium price is paid. The producer is not restricted to that production amount, but any excess production goes into the pool for which only the much lower world price is paid.

Wade said that the government has provided a "very small" subsidy to the producers based on kilograms of butterfat per day, but it is in the first year of a five-year phase-out this year.

While the dairy business has been very provincially oriented in the past, it is being affected more and more by international influences, he added. Under World Trade Organization (WTO) rules, Canada will have increasingly greater imports permitted and a 35 percent decrease in tariffs (border protection) over the next five years. Rather than being threatened by that evolution, Wade said, it is being viewed as a positive since "there will eventually be international rules that everyone will play by."

Chairman Comments

Manitoba Milk Producers board chairman Neil Van Ryssel had just returned from a national dairy meeting in Ottawa when he took time Thursday evening for a telephone interview.

His farm at Oak Bank is 15 miles straight east of Winnipeg and the operation includes about 110 dairy cows and 2,000 acres of cropland. A 12-year member of the Manitoba milk board, he has served as chairman since 1993.

Van Ryssel said there is probably more government politics involved in milk than in any commodity, and that includes both Canada and the United States among the world's developed countries. With a cash cost (feed, veterinary services and utilities) averaging 25 cents a liter in Manitoba, it won't take much of a change in the market to turn a small profit margin into a loss.

He said he believed milk production costs are quite similar on both sides of the U.S. border, but that the United States is finding ways under its trade agreements to subsidize its dairy industry while Canada is backing away from such financial support. He said he believes the same level of support is needed on both sides of the border, and that Minnesota dairymen have been able to survive on lower prices because of that government assistance in a number of ways.

Remembers Jim Muzzy

Neil mentioned knowing the late Jim Muzzy of Thief River Falls, a recognized producer of registered cattle and a dairyman who was a strong advocate for a more structured and controlled dairy production and marketing system in the United States.

Acknowledging that the quota system for domestic milk production has worked well to this point, Van Ryssel said dairymen in his province and throughout Canada are attempting to position themselves for changes to come as a result of international agreements and pressures which are eroding local controls. This positioning includes efforts to increase herd size.

At the Van Ryssels' own farm a new barn and milking parlor have just been completed and expectations are for future expansion of cow numbers with replacement heifers from their own herd.

Since the milk board chairmanship is virtually a full-time position, much of the responsibility for operating the dairy falls on two young sons who are in college, two herdsmen and two other permanent employees. Additional help is hired on a part-time basis during the summer months.

For both Canadian and U.S. dairy producers, the money may look greener on the other side of the border. But since little can be done to change the foreign country's outlook and operations, producers on both sides of the boundary must do what they can with their own governments to attempt to improve their own situations.

(Next Week: A summary wrap up in the final article of the series and a peek at how some help for northwest Minnesota dairymen may be on the way.)

convert part of the building into a home, and he pointed out how he would have used the existing kitchen and bathrooms and partitioned the gymnasium and added a loft. The only thing the building will house, however, is SRS, Inc. While other folks laughed at him for thinking he needed all that space, the entire building is occupied by his business, and Tom anticipates the necessity of adding on later this year.

Currently, the business can produce eight tables "on a good day" and averages four to five units per day.

When Tom received his largest ever single order last fall, SRS, Inc. was a one-man show. The order for 143 tables was more than he alone could handle, and he describes himself as "very lucky" when he was able to hire two "skilled, ambitious and talented people" to work for him. Scott Johnson of Anchorage, AK was wintering in Roseau, and Brian Stanley is from Grygla and was a high school classmate of Morrissey. The trio began working on the order immediately after the deer season ended in November.

The last table that is actually sold was made yesterday, and then 25 tables will be built in advance.

Tom is excited and optimistic about future business. Minnesota Industrial Tools, Inc. (MIT), a $50 million a year tool distributor based in the Twin Cities, approached him about adding the table to its product line. MIT is currently putting together a color brochure about the table which will include the following testimonial from Gary Johnson of Product Research and Development of Bagley. "We currently have over 100 SRS, Inc. adjustable height work tables in use. I think it is the most rugged ergonomic workbench in the marketplace!"

It was MIT employee Dan Timmersman of Roseau who placed the order for 143 tables for Polaris Industries. Timmersmen occupies an office at Polaris as a single source supplier, supplying the tool crib at Polaris. That order brought the total number of SRS, Inc. work stations at Polaris to about 200.

In a telephone conversation, Timmersman had nothing but good things to say about the table. He says, "There's nothing better or tougher on the market. . . . no other like it with regard to quality. . . . twice the quality at half the price or less." He added, "MIT contracts tool cribs for 120 major manufacturers in Minnesota. When the table gets to the market, Scribe-Rite can expect major growth."

Grateful for the big order from Timmersman, Morrissey gave him a table. It looks like the Polaris order could be the first of many, and when faced with them, Tom confidently says he'll simply hire more help and add space as needed.

Morrissey is quick to point out that his work table is not a new idea, but is a better idea. Most tables, built with two trailer jacks, are flimsy and wobbly. The SRS, Inc. table is produced using four jacks and is "absolutely rigid and unique." Morrissey has sold around 500 tables and has never been called to make a repair on the product.

However, Tom adds, "The assembly process is not easy." He is "continuously in the process of product and production improvement." Assembled with readily available components, the table is not patented, but he was excited to show me a back pack stand that employer Scott Johnson has patented and spends time perfecting in the shop.

Tom Morrissey is in his late-30's, and prior to founding Scribe-Rite Steel, he was employed by Polaris and worked for Machinewell, Inc. in Grygla.

Tom's office is full of his "favorite stuff" — antler mounts, a couple of nice walleyes, fox pelts, caps and photographs. While he enjoys hunting and fishing, he does it "less and less these days." As others are going to ball games, Tom is in his shop until late at night working on what he calls "my project." He often starts early in the morning, too. He uses that "really" word again as he says his work makes him feel "really good." His enthusiasm is contagious.

Near the end of our visit, we discussed entrepreneurship, and I asked if he had the opportunity to read Edgar Hetteen's recently published book, Breaking Trail. Tom swiveled his chair and reached for his copy from a shelf. Like so many in the area, he knows Edgar and his admiration is obvious.

Tom is very excited about having a distributor for his tables because, like many risk-taking entrepreneurs, he finds joy in the creative process rather than the marketing.

Regardless of how monetarily rewarding the table becomes, with what he and his customers believe to be a superior product and his gung-ho spirit, Tom Morrissey can add successful and proud to the way he feels — really!

Birthplace of a sport

The signatures left behind by the massive glaciers which once covered this area of Minnesota tell a tale of mighty natural forces that refused to retreat to their glacial beds unnoticed. The markings and scars remaining today seem insignificant to some, but for those who call this area home the landscape sculpted by these glacial giants defines the very essence of the sport of snowmobiling.

It's fitting this area is also the birthplace of snowmobiling in the United States. It's as if the landscape to construct the first snow travelers capable of exploring this ancient winter world.

Today, this region remains home to both U.S. manufacturers of snowmobiles, Polaris Industries in Roseau and Arctic Cat in Thief River Falls. Hundreds of miles of trails connect these and other communities throughout the region. From the wide open expanses of farm land to the border west near Hallock and Crookston to big lake riding on Lake of the Woods to the north and the communities of Warroad and Baudette to dense tamarack swamps and forgotten logging trails to the south through small junction towns like Washkish and Fourtown.

Departing from the sandy flatbed shores of Upper Red Lake, the unexplored regions of the vast Red Lake Bog whisk by via the Red Lake Bog Trail. All hints of civilization are quickly left behind as you make your way through the Red Lake Wildlife Management Area and northward to Muskrat Corner – named after an old hermit who once resided there, and the one-horse town of Fourtown.

Another variation from the shores of Red Lake is the recently completed trail heading due north from Washkish to the Border Trail System of Lake of the Woods. Along the way, an even newer trail slices east, through the heart of the Red Lake Bog and the Pine Island State Forest to the Voyageur community of Big Falls.

Northeast from Muskrat Corner reside the trails of the eastern Beltrami Island State Forest which connect to the Baudette-Norris Trails. These lead to the forested and rolling trails of Hayes Lake State Park.

If you choose, the Baudette-Norris Trail darts east through the northern section of the Beltrami Island State Forest, following ditchlines, heavy stands of aspen and dense groves of pines towards the tourism community of Baudette. Here you'll join with the Border Trail system of Lake of the Woods which connects to various lake destinations and westward to the community of Warroad and the S-11 Highway Trail.

Of course, a visit to this birthplace is not complete without experiencing the big lake riding of Lake of the Woods – an adventure which beckons every winter traveler to this majestic body of water. When the ice is thick (which is often), a groomed, marked trail heads northwest some 40 miles to where the snow is crisp and fresh well into April.

Back on the mainland, the trails further to the west define the classic ditch-

Grandfather of snowmobiling is author of Breaking Trail

Edgar Hetteen's autobiography was released on January 14

Affectionately known in the industry as the "grandfather of snowmobiling," Edgar Hetteen has written an autobiography which is scheduled for official release Wednesday, January 14, and is expected to be in book stores in about two weeks. Hetteen, who now lives in Grand Rapids, is acknowledged as the founder of Polaris Industries in Roseau and Arctic Cat, Inc. in Thief River Falls.

Jay Lemke of Mahtomedi, who did the "ghostwriting" for the 296-page book, has provided the following resume of its contents:

It's been 53 years since Edgar hetteen wiped his hands on a greasy overcoat and set up a one-man fix-it shop in the dark corners of a car garage in Roseau, Minnesota—the only place he could afford. It's been 42 years since his tiny, struggling business, Polaris Industries, built a "motor toboggan" and 36 years since Hetteen said good-bye, only to begin another snowmobile company, Arctic Enterprises.

The rest is history. Polaris and Arctic have gone on to earn billions, and winter has taken on a whole new meaning for the world. All thanks to Hetteen and his snowmobile.

In his autobiography, Breaking Trail, Hetteen details how it all happened. He writes of his childhood, growing up in a farm family speaking Swedish, and then learning English in a one-room schoolhouse four miles from home. He tells of the hard, early days at Polaris, when money was as elusive as a rainbow.

"Times were tough," Hetteen writes. "When the end of the week rolled around, too often there wasn't enough money. I'd stare at what we had and sigh heavily, knowing what was to come. We would gather around the till, a little box. The money would be taken out and placed on a table. I'd scoop it up and pass it around, dividing it evenly among the employees. Sometimes it hardly fed the family."

And he writes of the day in 1955 when his partner and brother-in-law, David Johnson, built a snow machine while Edgar was away.

"Rudimentary snow machines had been around since the turn of the century, but you didn't give them much thought. They were built in garages with parts from a junkyard. Some worked, some didn't, but none had any practical sale value. Why was David wasting his time like this? Our factory built farm equipment...."

Hetteen, who quickly came to love the snowmobile, tells of the struggle with a faction of his board of directors, who thought the machine to be a rope around the company's neck, and who urged Hetteen to stop such foolishness. In the book, he devotes a chapter to his harrowing 21-day adventure on three Sno-Travelers from Bethel, Alaska on the Bering Sea coast to Fairbanks, some 1,200 miles away.

"The idea began to hold a certain fascination for me," Hetteen writes. "The more I thought about it, the more my blood raced. What an adventure—to a place I loved, to try something that might help the sputtering snowmobile industry...If we really could make the trip, it would prove to the world that we were not some rag-tag company building a goofy machine. It could move us ahead by years."

It did. Hetteen estimates by a least five years. But he would not reap the benefits at Polaris. He'd had enough in-fighting, and several months later, after a number of odd jobs in Alaska, Hetteen opened up Arctic Enterprises in Thief River Falls, Minnesota. He did it in an old seed warehouse. Again, there would be struggles before success.

"With no discretionary money, all of it going into the business, my family moved into the seed building....We moved upstairs, where there were two rooms. I put up a divider and made them three, then added a stove in the smallest one. They were cramped quarters, but we lived between those concrete walls for 14 months. I was something we had to do for the business."

At Arctic, Hetteen would build the first U.S. snowmobile with an engine in front. While testing that machine on Ruth Glacier in Alaska, he was marooned for four days, nearly losing his life.

"By Thursday, we'd finished the corned beef hash," he writes. "Hungry and with little sleep, our brains grew punchy and our bodies felt like empty husks. My stomach flipped upside down, empty and tired. Moreover, the bright sun and its reflection off the snow was burning us up. The weather was what pilots call severe clear. Our faces turned red—it hurt miserably—and we knew it'd only get worse."

All in all, the book is about Hetteen's persistence in the face of overwhelming criticism as he built Polaris and Arctic Cat. It's about tinkering, designing and inventing. It's abut him making and losing more than $1 million several times. It's about him starting over at age 60, building a wheelchair company and then co-founding ASV, a firm constructing all-terrain, rubber-tracked work machines and now one of the hottest companies on the stock market.

"Success comes from many different places," Hetteen writes. "It comes from tenacity, it comes from perseverance, and believing in yourself. Those ingredients are shown in every person who has achieved his dreams. Even though I once took an aptitude test that told me I wasn't good at anything, I didn't believe it. I knew I was capable and didn't listen to anyone telling me different."

Breaking Trail, published by Focus Publishing in Bemidji, will be hardbound and priced at $24.95 ($33.50 in Canada). Orders for the book also may be placed by calling 1-888-786-5866. Cost will be $24.95 plus $4.95 for shipping and handling.

Local clubs make governor's ride & MnUSA Rendezvous possible

It would not be possible to host an event such as the Governor's Snowmobile Ride and Minnesota United Snowmobile Association (MnUSA) Winter Rendezvous without the help of the local snowmobile clubs in northwest Minnesota.

Local clubs include the Warren Sno-Cat Riders, Marshall County Drift Skippers, Grygla Fourtown Sportsman's Club, Goodridge Trailblazers, Plummer Snowmobile Club, Crookston Drift Busters, Red Lake Falls Pathfinders, Oklee Moonlighters, Fertile-Beltrami Sandhill Snow Cruisers, Roseau County Trailblazers and the Thief River Falls Sno Drifters. All of these clubs put in hundreds of volunteer hours grooming trails.

In preparation for the upcoming Governor's Snowmobile Ride and MnUSA Winter Rendezvous, clubs have been getting ready to roll out the red carpet. Trails are being groomed to perfection, and we truly appreciate all their efforts.

The Governor's Snowmobile Ride will take place on Friday, February 13, 1998. Registration for the event is $15 for adults, and $10 for children 14 and under. Pre-registration is encouraged, but not mandatory. Individuals may register now at the Chamber of Commerce for the Governor's Ride on Friday morning beginning at 6 a.m., at the Best Western Inn. Registration includes an invitation to the Governor's Reception, 7 p.m., Thursday, February 12, breakfast at 7 a.m. prior to the Governor's Ride, two coffee stops and lunch. The ride will end back at the Best Western Inn around 4:30 p.m. Families are encouraged to "Ride the Ride." School is not in session for School District 564 on Friday, February 13.

In conjunction with the Governor's Snowmobile Ride is the MnUSA Winter Rendezvous. The Winter Rendezvous is an annual convention of the MN United Snowmobile Association. This event will take place on Saturday and Sunday, following the Governor's Ride. In previous years, this event has attracted over 400 snowmobilers from Minnesota to the host community. This has an economic impact of over $100,000.00 to an area.

Registration forms for the MnUSA Rendezvous are also available at the Chamber office. Registration is $27 for adults and $10 for children 14 and under. Individuals that plan to attend the Rendezvous are encouraged to become members of MnUSA at an annual membership fee of $15 per family. The MnUSA Rendezvous begins Friday evening with a reception at 7 p.m. at the Best Western Inn. Saturday's events include a day of riding, and a reception and banquet at 6 p.m., followed by numerous door prizes and a dance. Sunday events include the MnUSA Board meeting and a Casino Brunch Ride to River Road Casino.

Major sponsors for the three-day event include: River Road Casino, Pepsi Cola, Cellular 2000, Thief River Falls Convention & Visitors Bureau, Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce, Arctic Cat, Inc., Polaris Industries, Ski-Doo, Yamaha, City of Thief River Falls, Thief River Falls Times, Pennington County, Cell Glove, Minnesota Corn Growers Association, Hartz Foods, Inc., Cenex of Grygla, the Minnesota Office of Tourism and the MnUSA.

A special thanks goes out to Northern Pride, Home Lumber Company, Evergreen Implement/John Deere, E.M.S. of Thief River Falls, Grygla Hartz, Grygla First Responders, Northwest Minnesota Civil Air Patrol, Northern Motors and Knights of Columbus for their support of the 1998 Governor's Snowmobile Ride.

Several local businesses have also donated door prizes for the event. These businesses will be recognized in a later edition of the Northern Watch.

In conjunction with the Governor's Snowmobile Ride, there will be a Kitty Kat Parade, February 12th at Floyd B. Olson Park in Thief River Falls. Parade staging is at 4:30 p.m., parade at 5 p.m. Call KTRF Radio Station at 681-1230 to register your son or daughter. Prizes for all. Parade theme is "U.S.A." Sponsors are KTRF Radio, Arctic Cat, Inc. and the Thief River Falls McDonald's.

Snowmobile laws and regulations

Convention and Visitors Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce has issued a list of snowmobile laws and regulations that will affect participation in the Governor's Trail Ride. Anyone planning on participating in the ride should be aware of the restrictions and willing to comply with them.

On a general basis, persons 18 years of age and older may drive snowmobiles as adults. For those younger than 18, the following regulations apply:

Ages 14-17—May not drive snowmobiles across state or county roads unless in possession of a snowmobile safety certificate or a valid driver's license; may drive snowmobiles on public lands, public waters, and grant-in-aid trails without a snowmobile safety certificate or without being accompanied by someone over 18 years of age; may drive snowmobiles on streets or highways in a municipality; and must wear a helmet;

Ages 12-13—May not drive snowmobiles across state or county roads, may not drive snowmobiles on public lands, public waters or grant-in-aid trails unless accompanied by someone over 18 years of age or in possession of a safety certificate; may not drive snowmobiles on streets or highways in a municipality; and must wear a helmet.

Under Age 12—May not drive snowmobiles across state or county roads, may not drive snowmobiles on public lands, public waters or grant-in-aid trails unless accompanied by someone over 18 years of age; may not drive snowmobiles on streets or highways in a municipality; and must wear a helmet.

The term "accompanied by parent, guardian or person over 18 years of age" means: (1) being on the same snowmobile with the youth under age 14 or on a device towed by that snowmobile; (2) being on a snowmobile, or a device towed by that snowmobile, in such close vicinity that the adult is able to direct the youth's operation of his snowmobile.

For additional information on the Governor's Trail Ride, call the Chamber of Commerce office at 681-3720.

Snowmobile Trails

There are an estimated 200,000 miles of signed and maintained snowmobile trails in North America that have been developed by snowmobile clubs and associations, usually in cooperation with provincial, state and local governments.

Design

The ideal snowmobile trail system is designed to meet multiple criteria.

• Safety – It is designed, signed and maintained to specifications which will eliminate or identify hazards.

• Environment – It is designed to avoid environmentally sensitive areas and built to strict environmental standards.

• Destination – It is designed to go somewhere (to a point of scenic interest or recreation site, to connect nearby towns, etc.)

• Integrated Network – it is designed to be part of a formal, long-distance, integrated network which links towns, counties, states and provinces. A number of jurisdictions are now working to develop international, interstate and inter-provincial systems. It is now possible to ride 70 percent of North America's snowmobile trails through the continuous interconnections that exist, especially in the eastern half of the continent.

Funding

Snowmobilers have historically "paid their own way" for the development and maintenance of snowmobile trail systems.

Funding for public snowmobile trail systems, all paid for by the snowmobile user, include:

• Snowmobile registration fees;
• Snowmobile gas tax rebates;
• Trail permits, and
• Volunteer trail construction and maintenance.

Other Funding Programs

Many snowmobile trail systems have been developed through programs, known in some jurisdictions as "grant-in-aid" programs. They allow a province or state to use snowmobile funds to develop and maintain trails not only on provincial or state-owned lands but also on private lands and government owned lands – thus making possible development of a comprehensive, interconnecting system.

Under these grant-in-aid programs, snowmobile funds can be distributed to local governments or recognized snowmobile clubs.

Funds may be provided on a cost-sharing basis or they may allow for 100 percent funding up to a maximum limit.

In many jurisdictions, donated labor and materials are applied toward the "costs" incurred by local governments or clubs.

Local governments and clubs must meet certain criteria and comply with trail requirements to receive these funds.

Many areas have been very effective in developing a shared financial responsibility for trails with other user groups, benefiting business partners and tourism organizations.

Multiple Use Trails

Trails developed with snowmobile funds directly benefit other outdoor recreationalists. During the non-winter months, many of these trails are used for hiking, horseback riding, bicycling and other trail-based activities.

Because development of snowmobile trails is compatible with many other trail-based activities, and because snowmobile registration fees, snowmobile gas taxes and user fees provide a ready source of trail funds, other recreational organizations often support snowmobile trail development.

The sport of snowmobiling

There are more than four million snowmobilers in Canada and the United States.

Surveys show that over 94.5 per cent of snowmobilers consider it a family sport. The overwhelming majority of snowmobile owners are married and have children.

Snowmobiling appeals to people of all ages – from youngsters to senior citizens.

Studies reveal that snowmobilers generally ride close to home, on day trips, snowmobilers typically travel 30 to 75 miles to favorite riding areas or on favorite trails. There is a growing interest in touring – spending several nights traveling, shopping, dining and sleeping along the way. However, for overnight trips, distances traveled normally range between 100 and 150 miles.

Although primarily a recreational activity, snowmobiling also provides many other useful functions. In remote portions of Canada and the United States, snowmobiles are some citizens' primary source of transportation. Snowmobiles are relied upon by law enforcement units throughout the snowbelt for search and rescue work and emergency missions. They are used also by environmental and wildlife scientists and countless others. Ski-touring centers across North America utilize snowmobiles for trail grooming and track setting. Snowmobiles are also widely used by cross country ski race officials, dog sled races, and by ski patrols for rescue purposes.

A survey conducted in 1996 by International Snowmobile Manufacturers Association (ISMA) highlights the following profile of snowmobile owners:

• Median age of a snowmobile owner is 37 years.

• Snowmobiling is a family sport. The average number of individuals within a family that snowmobile is 3.

A recent study by the University of Montana shows:

• Sixty percent of snowmobilers are male, forty percent female.

• Seventy percent of snowmobilers report household incomes of $50,000 or more.

• Ninety-four percent of snowmobilers participate in the sport to have fun.

• Seventy-eight percent snowmobile to be able to explore new places.

• Seventy-three snowmobile with their family members as a family activity.

Economic impact of snowmobiling

Snowmobilers in Canada and the United States spend over $6 billion on their sport each year. This includes expenditures on equipment, clothing, accessories, snowmobiling vacations, etc.

Surveys show that on average, snowmobilers taking overnight trips (24 percent of these surveyed) take three to five trips a year, spending two nights per trip away from home.

The sport of snowmobiling is responsible for "spin-off" economic benefits such as:

• Jobs for tens of thousands of people, jobs which enable those people to further stimulate the economy through additional expenditures on goods and services; jobs which provide significant income tax revenues to provincial, state and federal treasuries and dramatically reduce unemployment and welfare payments.

• Millions of dollars in tax revenues derived from snowmobile-related businesses (including, but not limited to manufacturers, suppliers, distributors, dealers, resort and hotel facilities, restaurants, service stations, etc.)

• Millions of dollars in winter tourism spending which support local snowbelt economies.

• Millions of dollars in local and provincial/state sales and gas tax revenues.

The sport of snowmobiling has rejuvenated the economies of many communities.

Provincial and state travel bureaus are now actively promoting snowmobile tourism through such means as the production of snowmobile information guides and trail maps and the establishment of toll free numbers with information on snowmobiling opportunities and conditions. The current challenge is access to the world wide web, as it invites us to learn about new places.

The Wyoming Recreation Commission, in conjunction with the University of Wyoming, prepared a report on snowmobiling in the state in 1995. After analyzing monies spent on items like equipment, gasoline, service, lodging and food, the study concluded that snowmobiling is responsible for $189.5 million in economic impact and "is extremely important to the economy of the state of Wyoming."

The economic significance that the sport of snowmobiling has on the state of Vermont exceeds $165 million annually, according to a study by Johnson State College in 1995.

The Alberta Economic Development and Tourism Unit, in 1995, estimated the economic impact of the snowmobile industry in Alberta to be $162.6 million.

The Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs economic impact from direct expenditures of its Ontario members represents $550 million per year currently.

Economic impact reports across North America show the positive economic significance of the sport of snowmobiling at all levels.

Welcome to Thief River Falls

Thief River Falls is more than one of the birthplaces of snowmobiling: it is also Snowmobile Riding Central in northwestern Minnesota.

The home of Arctic Cat snowmobiles, Thief River Falls is located in northwestern Minnesota and is a crossroads for many snowmobile trials running throughout the north country.

More than 400 miles of groomed snowmobile trails exist in the area, attracting both beginners and experts to an area of riding excitement, variety and wide-open spaces. Your hosts in Thief River Falls are sure to show you a good time. And you don't have to be riding a Cat to be subject to some warm Minnesota hospitality.

Thief River Falls is a winter wonderland located about 70 miles south of the Minnesota-Manitoba border, about 296 miles northwest of the Twin Cities and 159 miles south of Winnipeg.

The terrain is relatively flat and wide-open close to Thief River Falls, with the winding banks of the Red and Thief Rivers and rolling, glacial cut hills to the south lending variety to the landscape. Thief River Falls is blessed with an average of more than 60 inches of snow annually, making for good riding and long seasons.

One of the area's snowmobiling treats is the groomed Wapiti Trail. Wapiti is an Indian word for "white," a reference to the light rump color of the gregarious elk, which live in the area and gave the trail its name. The trail follows the historic path of an electric train route that carried passengers, mail and freight between Thief River Falls and Goodridge from 1914 to 1940.

The Wapiti Trail leaves Thief River Falls to the east toward Goodridge. At Goodridge, the recently rejuvenated Northeast Wapiti winds cross-country through stands of willow and poplar. Later, it connects with the Big Red Lake BDG Trail and other systems that can take riders to the beautiful Lake of the Woods area. The southern branch of the Wapiti points riders toward Gully.

The Thief River Falls area also contains the flavor of an untamed wilderness. Wildlife along the 50 miles of the Wapiti Trail is varied and abundant, as fox, rabbit, wolf, fisher, deer and moose can often be seen from the trail.

Another popular outing is the 70-mile Riverland Trail, which heads south out of Thief River Falls, following the Clearwater, Red Lake, Lost and Hill Rivers through a naturally scenic area.

Another trail serving Thief River Falls' visitors is the Grygla/Fourtown Trail. Local snowmobile clubs have been hard at work over the last year creating a beltway system connecting all three trails around the city, with spur trails going into Thief River Falls that reach about 20 businesses.

The city also plays host to the Thief River Falls Ironman 250 Cross-Country Snowmobile Race, which awarded more than $52,000 in prize money in 1993 and continues to grow. This year, the fourth annual event will be held on January 14 and 15, 1995.

Nightly entertainment in Thief River Falls is provided by several nightclubs and restaurants. The nightclubs offer music, dancing, bingo and a friendly atmosphere. There are more than 220 total rooms available at the five different hotels in Thief River Falls, with some offering jacuzzis, pools and spas.

If you're looking for a "game of chance," visit one of Minnesota's newest gaming facilities, the River Road Casino, located about eight miles south of town. Other nearby casinos include the Shooting Star Casino in Mahnomen and the Lake of the Woods Casino in Warroad. And, while you're in Thief River Falls, you may want to take an Arctic Cat factory tour and see the production of the newest Arctic Cat snowmobiles, personal watercraft and 4-wheeler lines.

If you plan to fly into the area, remember that Thief River Falls serves northwest Minnesota with a full-service airport, with daily flights on Mesaba/Northwest Airlink.

For more information, write to Julie Olson at the Thief River Falls Convention and Visitors Bureau, 2017 Highway 59 SE, Thief River Falls, MN 56701 or call (218) 681-3720 or 1-800-827-1629.

History of snowmobiling

The first attempts at building a vehicle that would move over snow on runners happened 75 years ago. Many dreamed of building a power-driven sled, especially where heavy snowfalls often meant the difference between life and death when attempting to transport an ill person to emergency care.

In 1935, a snowmobile was built with skis in front and a sprocket wheel and tracked system in back. It carried 12 people, and family doctors, veterinarians, ambulance and taxi drivers were first in line to purchase one. A modified version found a market in the logging industry.

It was the late 1950s, with the development of smaller gasoline engines, before the one or two-passenger lightweight chassis snowmobile was marketed – and with it, a new recreational sport was born.

Today four manufacturers will produce over 200,000 snowmobiles to be sold annually in the United States, Canada and Europe. With more than four million riders, snowmobiling is a major winter recreational activity and a significant factor in increased winter tourism in much of Canada and the snowbelt of the United States.

The history of the "snow machine" is yet to be completed. Today's snowmobile bears little resemblance to earlier models. By today's standards, many of the machines of the 50's and 70's are considered antiques.

Impacting you and your community

The Economic Machine

The 1996 Minnesota Snowmobiling Safety Task Force previewed an enormous economic machine that is directly associated with and generates approximately one billion dollars of financial impact on this state. This machine is fueled by a mere seven million dollars annually from a source known as the snowmobile unrefunded gas tax, snowmobile licenses, and some other miscellaneous incomes that add another $200,000 (approximately).

Outstanding Volunteer Efforts

The reality of generating one billion dollars of activity from a seven million dollar investment, on an annual basis, would make private industry/investors green with envy. It seems an impossibility until you consider the thousands of hours of volunteer work accomplished by Minnesota's approximately 280 local snowmobile clubs. Numerous individuals in association with these clubs collectively form a statewide organization known as Minnesota United Snowmobilers Association (MnUSA). MnUSA has a membership of approximately 25,000 Minnesota families.

Tourism and Snowmobile Purchases

With more than 240,000 registered snowmobiles and more than 15,000 miles of maintained trails, Minnesota is a mecca for winter recreationalists. Winter tourism and associated benefits have exploded in Minnesota and studies indicate even the metropolitan area benefits by 80 million dollars annually through snowmobile sales and associated expenditures.

Home of the Big Guys

Although 29 states in snowbelt America have organized snowmobiling, Minnesota boasts of another leadership role as it is called home by two of the four major snowmobile manufacturers in the world: Arctic Cat and Polaris.

Maintaining the Trail System

Minnesota's Trail System is administered by the Department of Natural Resources Trails and Waterways Division. Although the DNR maintains and grooms approximately 2,000 miles of state trails, they also direct a grant-in-aid program that provides financial support to maintain and groom the additional 13,000 miles of trail. Completion of some existing routes and development of key connecting trail sections have been stymied for four years due to lack of funding. A special thanks should be extended to the private landowners who have donated most of the land in the grand-in-aid program.

Growth In Popularity

The popularity of snowmobiling in the 1990's has led to an explosion of use that has over burdened its support systems. Trail systems designed in the 1970's show inadequacies that must be addressed. Some routes remain unfinished and with increased use come increasing needs for grooming and maintenance. Proposed and unfinished trail connections would provide loops that promise to relieve excessive traffic loads in some areas.

The Future

Finally, snowmobiling and interrelated/interdependent systems including economic impact, tourism, industry, trail systems, education, training, and enforcement balance precariously on the edge of collapse at this time. It is imperative if Minnesota wishes to retain this recreation and its benefits to address those issues now.

What is the future of snowmobiling

The sport of snowmobiling will continue to offer a unique form of recreation to mankind. A recent study conducted by the Recreation Roundtable showed that people who recreate outdoors are happier, healthier and more productive. They are better citizens and neighbors. As our future holds new demands on our time, the recreation that snowmobiling affords will increase in importance.

The future will see the snowmobile itself continue to improve in dependability, reliability and quality for all consumers. Manufacturers, using the latest in technology and science, are working and planning so all aspects of the machine are updated to serve the needs of a growing populace.

Birthplace of a sport

line riding which has bred many snowmobiles from both manufacturers. Here the road rights-of-way are wide, smooth and well-marked and a simple day trip from Warroad to Roseau and the communities of Greenbush and Wannaska are made easy thanks to the S-11 and S-89 trails named for their Highway parallels.

The Pelan Trail travels southwest, following the ancient shoreline of Lake Agassiz, where it joins the Kittson County trail system and the Lake Bronson State Park and eventually the trails of North Dakota.

If long distance touring is your style, the trails south of Kennedy paralleling Highway 75 are suited for you. Along the way, a spur trail branches south of Argyle, east to Strandquist. At Thief River Falls, the trail joins the Wapiti Trail, following an old intercity electric rail grade, abandoned in 1940, between Thief River Falls and Goodridge.

South from Thief River Falls, roadway trails along Highway 32 lead to Red Lake Falls and from there to the countless farming communities bordering the southern edge of the bog.

The very nature of these trails offer feelings of exploration and escape which undoubtedly originally inspired the birth of the sport nearly 40 years ago. Aside from the thousands of miles of groomed trails, snowmobiling's true home also offers a perspective on the sport experienced nowhere else. From traditional ditchline trails to tours of the plants which produce the machines of winter, Minnesota's great northwest is a place where snowmobilers are born and memories are made.

Students learn about business the hard way

Fosston - Window signs mark the closing of the first student owned Radio Shack, Tunes and Technology in Fosston.

The community was unanimously supportive in the beginning, but as competing retail outlets offered better deals and work-school time retraints led to a lack of continuity of trained student staff, the enthusiasm waned.

Set up as a learning experience for Fosston High School students, the lesson turned hard as students faced the realities of the business world — rent, suppliers, bank notes and the fact that it takes more than a switch to keep the lights on. The Thirteen Towns

Newborns flood GF Altru Hospital

Grand Forks - Five deliveries on Thursday, five more on Friday and twelve additional deliveries on Saturday amounted to a baby boom at Altru Hospital — just a little more than nine months after the flood.

According to a birthing center nurse, the facility usually has about three or four deliveries per day. It was also noted that the hospital experienced mini spurts in deliveries about nine months after each of the eight blizzards that occurred last winter. Grand Forks Herald

Lakehead Pipeline to expand in 1999

Hallock - Construction of seven miles of pipeline in Kittson County will begin in the spring of 1999 as part of a 72-mile total Lakehead Pipeline expansion.

Lakehead is a transportation service and most of the oil travelling in its line is coming from western Alberta. Shippers want to be able to move heavier oil, and Lakehead needed to add that capacity to the system. Kittson County Enterprise

Still sweethearts after 69 years

Red Lake Falls - "We always got along fine and we still do. We never fight. We didn't know how to fight. Our love will never go away," says Isaac Sauve when talking about his wife Eva and their 69-year marriage.

Both Isaac and Eva were born near Brooks, were married on June 18, 1929 and have lived in the area all of their lives. The couple now resides at Hillcrest Nursing Home in Red Lake Falls. The Gazette

Williams cafe closes again

Williams - Cafe manager Jennifer Rivard locked the doors of the Williams Cafe for the last time on Saturday, January 31.

The owner of the building does not live in the area and has failed to provide maintenance on the building and equipment.

In the past six years, the town's only cafe has closed its doors three times, but this time the former manager sees no hope of reopening in the near future. The Northern Light

"A Day for Women" at Warren Feb. 21

Helping women feel good about themselves and a day of enjoyment for area women are the goals of "Women's Health Day—A Day for Women" planned for Saturday, February 21 at the Warren/Alvarado/Oslo High School, according to organizer Nancy Maurstad.

Nancy is a registered nurse who works in public health at North Valley Health Center (NVHC) in Warren, sponsor of the event.

Other committee members who have helped plan the special day include Cindy Anderson, Carol Anderson, Nancy Mattson, Lorette Hendrickson, Marion Halvorson, Jan Peterson and Judy Knutson, PA-C. The women, from Warren and the surrounding area, have utilized numerous community resources to plan a day of enjoyment and education.

Coffee and muffins, baked by hospital auxiliary members, will be served as the day's activities begin with registration at 9:30 a.m.

Motivational speaker Ginny Kruger will present "Wonderful You" at 10 a.m. Development Director at NVHC, Ginny is the mother of three children and active in her church and community volunteer work. She enjoys needlework, reading and gardening. She also finds time to help husband Jerry on their farm north of Warren. She has a Bachelor of Science degree in education and extension.

Following Ginny's presentation there will be time to observe the various displays provided by area businesses and agencies.

"Healthier You" will be presented by Judy Knudson PA-C at 11:15 a.m. Her presentation will include information about hormone replacement therapy, heart disease, breast cancer and osteoporosis — health issues that affect all women. Judy has been on staff at NVHC since March of 1997 and commutes from Grafton, ND where she lives with husband Art and three children. She holds a Bachelor of Science degree in nursing and is physician assistant certified. As a registered nurse, Judy worked for 20 years in various settings of public health, migrant health, hospital and home care.

Women will be able to make their own sandwich or croissant on the sandwich board buffet catered by Mick's Bar and Grill of Warren. Salads and a dessert will complete the meal.

During the luncheon, Betty East of Country Casuals will present "Fashionable You," a style show of new spring fashions. Along with her narration of the style show, Betty will present inspirational thoughts about inner beauty. A quick stop at Country Casuals, owned by Betty and Jody Larson, revealed racks of lovely new fashions in gorgeous colors that hold the promise of spring. The women also own River Jordan, a book and Bible shop, that offers a delightful selection of books, gifts and gourmet food items. River Jordan, currently located behind the clothing section of the store, will be one of the displaying retailers at the event.

The third and final session of the day, "Beautiful You," will be presented by Sharon Stewart and Vickie Dufault. Director of Dietetics at the University of Minnesota-Crookston and a consulting dietitian at the Good Samaritan Center and NVHC in Warren, Sharon enjoys helping people be healthy through diet and nutrition. She holds a Master of Science degree and is a registered dietitian.

Edger Hetteen and his wife Hennah were honored by Lt. Governor Joanne Benson during a ceremony in Thief River Falls Thursday. Benson declared February 12, 1998 as Edger Hetteen Day in honor of his contributions to the sport of snowmobiling. Benson was also in Thief River Falls to lead the Annual Governor's Snowmobile Ride.

Governor's Snowmobile Ride again features Lt. Governor

by David Hill
Associate Editor

"I'm ready to ride," said Minnesota Lt. Governor Joanne Benson.

Her message was taken literally and figuratively Thursday in Thief River Falls. Benson was announcing the start of the Governor's Snowmobile ride, and had announced only a couple of days ago that she would be seeking her party's nomination for Governor.

Several years of hard work on the part of many individuals, organizations and businesses in Thief River Falls and Pennington county began to pay off Thursday with the start of the Governor's Snowmobile Ride and Minnesota - United Snowmobile Association's Winter Rendezvous. Leading nearly 400 snowmobilers on a snowmobile trail ride Friday was Lt. Gov. Joanne Benson.

Participating in her fourth Governor's Ride, Benson stressed the importance of snowmobiles and the snowmobiling industry in Minnesota. She noted a 50 percent growth rate in snowmobile ownership in the past 10 years, a state supported trail system now estimated at over 16,000 miles, which is more than the state trunk highway system, and millions of dollars from tourism and economic growth as reasons Minnesota is paying more attention to snowmobiling. Benson, who chairs the Tourism Advisory Commission, said she has asked for another $1 million to help advertise snowmobiling in Minnesota.

Benson said snowmobiling is a great way to bring families together. Statistics also show that over 75 percent of snowmobilers enjoy snowmobiling because it brings family and friends together in the beautiful scenery of Minnesota, Benson said.

Benson said Governor Arne Carlson was in San Jose and would not be able to join the group this year. She explained that the Gover-

Lt. Governor Joanne Benson was fully equipped and prepared for the Governor's Snowmobile Ride and a shot at the Governor's office. The snowmobile ride got underway Friday morning with Benson leading the way. Only a few days before this event she announced her intention to run for Governor. Due to a prior agreement, she was wearing Yamaha clothing and riding a Yamaha snowmobile even though she was riding in the heart of Arctic Cat country. Thief River Falls is home to Arctic Cat.

Dairy industry continues to be based on bottom dollar

(This is the 11th and final article in a series of Northern Watch stories on the loss of dairy farmers and a view toward the future of the dairy industry in northwest Minnesota.)

by Marvin Lundin
Northern Watch Editor

When we began this series of dairy articles way back on Dec. 6, 1997, we anticipated it would involve two or three stories with some brief comments from dairymen and that would be about it. We now know that even with all that has been written, much is left unsaid and there are many stories left untold.

We have been gratified by a number of things during the time span of the series. First is the cooperation of dairy people, processors, organization officials and others in candidly providing information and opinion which has been the life thread of the story.

Second are those who came forward with suggestions for additional areas to consider or avenues to explore. We thank Dr. George Marx of the University of Minnesota Experiment Station at Crookston and Terry Nelson of the National Farmers Organization at Red Lake Falls, who made special efforts to write separate opinion pieces for publication. All of that input is appreciated.

Third is the number of people who have commented positively about the series, saying they have found it interesting and informative although they may not be directly involved in the dairy industry.

Fourth has been this writer's opportunity to learn from the knowledge and experience of others and to receive their help in accurately passing along the information to our readers. Throughout the series we have made the effort to check our writing with those who have provided information to be sure we understood what was said and were correct in the information presented.

This final article will contain some information about a new type of help for a limited number of dairymen and a summary of some points made during the course of the series. Our sincere thanks to all for their part in calling greater attention to a serious concern in our area's agricultural economy.

Dairy Diagnostic Teams

In an effort to boost the profitability of the state's dairy farmers, the Minnesota Department of Agriculture has announced $870,000 in grants to create and maintain dairy diagnostic programs. The regional projects provide one-on-one educational teams that will work with individual dairy producers. They will provide technological information, including sustainable agriculture methods and rotational grazing information, that can help the farmer improve his or her operation.

The dairy diagnostic teams are comprised of industry professionals, dairy extension educators and farm business management personnel. They are trained to work with the producer to identify each operation's strengths, weaknesses, oppor-

Badger High joins Northern Lights group

Badger Community Education has joined Community Education programs in Roseau, Warroad and Baudette to bring college courses to those communities in northern Minnesota. Northern Lights University is a partnership of business, community education and colleges designed to provide courses that apply toward degrees relevant to local business and jobs. The NLU educational institutions are Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls, Bemidji State University, Northwest Technical College and Moorhead State University. The business partners include Marvin Windows, Polaris, and Salvay Pharmaceutical.

Northern Lights University is unique in that it is committed to delivering entire career programs and degrees to the area. Programs are offered in their entirety on a one-time basis so participants should be aware that if they start after the program has begun, they may need to take classes on-campus in order to complete their degree or program.

The first classes offered through NLU were in 1995 by Northwest Technical college. Northland became a partner in January of 1997 offering an associate of arts degree with an emphasis in business. BSU began classes during the summer of 1997 offering a masters degree in education, and Moorhead State University offered a masters degree in business administration beginning spring quarter in 1997. Programs currently in progress include business micro-computing, manufacturing engineering technology, and supervisory management.

The concept behind Northern Lights University is to offer courses for working adults. College faculty travels to Roseau, Warroad, Baudette and now Badger or offers courses through interactive television. Most students take classes part time at night.

SOUPÇON

Sherry LaCoursiere

Since the 14th is Valentine's Day, we'll have some special sweet recipes for your sweetie(s) today.

With such a catchy title, this must be perfect for a Valentine treat:

BLUEBERRY BOY BAIT
2 cups flour
1 1/2 cups sugar
2/3 cup butter
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, separated
1 cup milk
1 can blueberries, drained (or 1 cup fresh or frozen berries, thawed)

Sift flour and sugar. Cut in butter until mixture is size of peas. Measure out 3/4 cup and reserve for topping.

In small mixer bowl, beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Set aside.

To crumb mixture, add baking powder, salt, egg yolks and milk. Beat 3 minutes on low speed of mixer. Gently fold in egg white and spread in well-greased and lightly floured 9x13 inch pan.

Arrange blueberries over batter. Sprinkle with reserved crumbs and bake at 350 degrees for 40-50 minutes. May serve warm or cold, with or without whipped cream or ice cream.

Here's a simple cheese cake topped with cherries that would be perfect for your Valentine - and it's so easy to make:

CHERRY CHEESE CAKE
1 graham cracker crust
8 ounce package cream cheese, softened and beaten smooth
1 can sweetened condensed milk
1/3 cup lemon juice
1 can cherry pie filling (or other flavor)

Beat softened cream cheese. Add condensed milk and blend well, then add lemon juice and stir. Pour into prepared crust.

Top with pie filling and chill at least 3 hours.

Forget the red stuff for those sweeties who like chocolate - here's a yummy chocolate one:

PIEROTTE PIE
(FRENCH SILK PIE)
1 1/2 squares baking chocolate
1/2 cup butter
3/4 cup sugar
2 eggs
Chopped almonds
1 package vanilla instant pudding mix
1 1/2 cups cold milk
1/2 pint whipping cream
Dab of powdered sugar
Slivered almonds

Melt and cool chocolate. Beat butter and sugar, then add eggs and chocolate and beat well. Fold in chopped almonds and pour into large baked pie shell.

Mix pudding and milk and pour over chocolate layer.

Whip cream. Add a dab of powdered sugar and then frost pie. Sprinkle with slivered almonds. Refrigerate.

Can she make a cherry pie (from scratch)? Try this easy recipe instead of using the canned filling (or add a little almond to that canned filling for a "scratchy" taste:

CHERRY PIE
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon almond flavoring
Red food coloring
1 (16 ounce) can red tart pie cherries, pitted
Double pie crust
1 teaspoon flour
1 teaspoon sugar and more

Combine cornstarch, sugar, almond and red food color. Mix well. Add cherries and stir.

Pour into unbaked pie shell that has been sprinkled with 1 teaspoon flour and 1 teaspoon sugar. Cover with top crust and sprinkle with sugar.

Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes, then at 350 degrees for 40 minutes or until golden and bubbling. Yum - serve with ice cream if you'd like.

Here's a pretty pink Valentine dessert that tastes like more:

RASPBERRY FLUFF PIE
1 1/4 cups oatmeal
1/2 cup coconut
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup melted butter
Filling:
1 package raspberry gelatin
1 cup hot water
1 pint vanilla ice cream
1 (10 ounce) package frozen raspberries, thawed

Place oatmeal and coconut in shallow pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Mix brown sugar and butter with crumbs and reserve 1/3 of the mixture for topping. Press remaining crumbs into 9 inch pie pan. Chill while preparing filling.

To make filling, dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add ice cream and let dissolve. Add raspberries and fold together. Chill until partially set (sets quickly) and then pour into pie shell. Top with reserved crumbs.

I welcome suggestions or comments on Soupcon. Contact me by e-mail at gobriel@northernnet.com. -- Sherry

Wolf Killing Sends The Wrong Kind Of Message

If the persons who killed several timber wolves in this area of the state believe they have sent a message by doing so, they may be assured that they are right. They have sent a message that is being heard over a wide area, but it is entirely of the wrong kind.

There is no great fondness for timber wolves among what is probably the majority of residents of northern Minnesota. The animals killed will not be mourned by most and their deaths may even be privately celebrated by some. But no matter how you view the timber wolf question in Minnesota, the same word can be used to describe all of the illegal killings—dumb.

Even the most dedicated of wolf haters must recognize that this is an extremely sensitive time regarding the timber wolf in our state. Wolf numbers have grown and ranges expanded beyond what many feel to be appropriate. After years of being unable under federal law to effect any real control, there is the possibility of bringing that control back to the state. Preliminary work is underway to create an acceptable wolf management plan which will require agreement from many different interest areas. It is hoped such a plan would help reduce some of the problem areas involving wolf contact with humans and domestic livestock and pets.

To bring about that agreement, it will be necessary for advocates of reduction of wolf numbers to show responsibility and reason and rational thinking in order to sway the attitudes of those who give the wolf the status of near deity. Wanton killing of wolves—and especially those carrying radio transmitters for studies—sends the message that we in northern Minnesota cannot even be trusted to obey the law.

There will be difficult enough times in the months ahead to bring reason and enlightenment to wolf management needs. Let us not provide any more ammunition to the self-appointed protectors of the wolf by such inappropriate indiscriminate killings. They are dumb acts, no doubt about it, and they may well cause a severe set-back to legitimate negotiations and compromise which offer relief in the future.

Knobby's A Yankee.... May They All Be Losers

Well, the Minnesota Twins were finally able to deal dissatisfied second baseman Chuck Knoblauch to the New York Yankees for three million dollars and four unproved minor leaguers. The Yankees were the only team with any real interest in Knobby, and that not enough to give up anything with known value—except the three million dollars.

Knoblauch played seven years for Minnesota and for the most part played well. He played hard on defense, he was a tough out at the plate, he ran the bases and he scored runs. It would be interesting to know how many RBIs Kirby Puckett had because Knoblauch was on base ahead of him.

Knoblauch played on two world championship teams with the Twins—a feat many superstars in the sport have never accomplished. His play was rewarded with an exceptional contract which was tailored to his desires. But he proved impossible to satisfy as a Twin, and the organization honored his request to be traded to "a contending team."

A real hero, we believe, would have honored his contract and done his utmost to make that contending team the Twins. A "worst to first" drive to the second world championship should have been enough evidence that it was possible.

Knoblauch may not have received the adulation he thought he deserved as a Twin. He didn't have the outgoing personality that invited friendship from the fans. His talent was recognized, to be sure, but he never achieved great popularity.

We wish him well in his career as a Yankee, but we hope he never plays in another World Series. If that seems cruel, so be it. We prefer to consider it justice. And what would be even greater justice would be another World Series appearance by the Twins without him. It could happen.

Holy Cow! That's A Lot Of Production!

They're planning a celebration March 21 at Twin-B Dairy farm at Marathon, WI. The event will be to recognize the world production record set by Muranda Oscar Lucinda, a registered Holstein dairy cow.

In a 365-day period, Lucinda produced 67,914 pounds of milk—smashing the previous world record by nearly two and a half tons! Her production averaged 186 pounds or 22 gallons of milk per day—every day—for a full year. The previous record was just over 63,000 pounds.

By way of comparison, the top producing cow in the Red Lake-Pennington Dairy Herd Improvement Association for 1997 produced 35,570 pounds of milk in a 305-day test. Had that level of just under 117 pounds per day continued for 365 days—which is unlikely—the total of about 42,590 pounds would have trailed the record by more than 25,000 pounds.

Genetics and management are pushing dairy animals to new limits every year, with constant culling reducing the number of low producers and raising the average of herds across the nation. But the record of Lucinda is truly remarkable.

LETTERS

To The Editor:

The Minnesota State Legislative session began on January 20 with Minnesota in the best condition—fiscally, socially and economically—in decades. Yet, Minnesota's families still face many challenges and among their most urgent needs is property tax relief.

A mechanism for providing property tax relief needs to be considered. Property taxes are the least equitable of all of the major taxes that families have to pay, based on ability to pay. Likewise, we know our property owners, farmers and businesses suffer in the competitive marketplace because of the tax burden. Consequently, we must pressure the legislature to make property tax cuts the key issue of the current session.

I also strongly favor using part of the surplus to reduce our reliance on property taxes to fund local schools. Again, I urge you to contact your legislators to consider this. If the state pays a greater portion of K-12 education costs, it will directly reduce the property tax burden on all property tax payers, which would be good news for home owners, renters, farmers, cabin owners and business owners alike.

The state may have witnessed an increase in overall economic growth, but we must remember that the statewide average masks the continuing difficulties of working farm families statewide. This is just another reason to remember the benefit of our individual involvement in precinct caucuses, set for March 3. The process allows us to help make a difference on these and other issues. With your help, we can make a difference on these and other issues. With you help, we can make a difference for all of Minnesota, and we can be sure that Northwest Minnesota is heard in St. Paul!

Sincerely,
Rick Nelson
Pennington County DFL Chair

Nearly 400 individuals registered to participate in the Governor's Snowmobile Ride which was held Friday in Thief River Falls. The event also served as the kick-off to the MnUSA Winter Rendezvous. Leading the snowmobilers was Lt. Governor Joanne Benson.

Governor's Snowmobile Ride

nor and Lt. Governor receive many requests each year, so many in fact, that it's more than two people can handle.

Benson has announced plans to run for Governor. She said she is aware of the feelings that many residents of Greater Minnesota have — that few know life exists beyond the Metro area. She said she's from a small town and enjoys getting out to small town cafes and listening to the wisdom of their citizens. She said it is an honor and a privilege to serve Minnesotans and that as Governor she plans to make sure people know she's the governor of the entire state.

Greg Sorenson, president of MnUSA also stressed the importance of snowmobiling in Minnesota.

He explained that there are 25,000 snowmobiling families in MnUSA. The organization is dedicated to promoting safe and responsible snowmobiling, through training, lobbying and participating on legislative driven committees. Members of the organization come from diverse background so they represent a wide variety of interests regarding snowmobiling in Minnesota, he said.

MnUSA will be holding its MnUSA Ride Day on Saturday, along with a number of other activities, including more snowmobile rides. On Sunday MnUSA will hold a board of directors meeting.

Sorenson said snowmobiling is important to Minnesota. There are roughly 285,000 snowmobiles registered in Minnesota. Each snowmobiler spends an estimated $2,400 on snowmobile related purchases each year, travels over 900 miles a season on trails (mostly within Minnesota). They also spend an average 7.2 nights at hotels, lodges and resorts each year. In 1994, he said, an estimated $576 million was pumped into the economy by snowmobilers. He estimated that close to a billion will be pumped into the economy this year, if Arctic Cat and Polaris are included.

Safety is another key element in promoting snowmobiling in Minnesota. Minnesota has taken important steps to make snowmobiling more enjoyable by making it safer. Vic Koosmann, regional training officer for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, noted that Minnesota's snowmobile safety program began in 1996. As of December 31, 1996, 269,524 students had been certified. The state plans to continue and increase its efforts to educate snowmobile users.

He noted that snowmobilers don't always enjoy a good image. Injuries and fatalities contribute to that image. In studying those accidents, injuries and fatalities seem to fluctuate with the amount of snow. Over the years, the one commonality noticed year after year, is that most are a result of collisions with fixed objects. Koosmann noted that fixed objects can be many things, and result from a number of factors. He said they hope to reduce the number of accidents by continuing their focus on safety, and focus on speed and braking distance. At 40 miles per hour, for example, a snowmobiler is traveling 58.66 feet per second. At the very best, reaction time is three quarters of a second. A normal reaction is more likely 1.5 seconds. At 1.5 seconds, a snowmobile traveling at 40 miles per hour will continue for about 80 feet.

Several activities will take place Friday and over the weekend. Safety and enjoyment of the outdoors will be the main focus. One of the events that took place Friday was to honor Edgar Hetteen.

Governor Arne Carlson proclaimed February 12, 1998 as Edgar Hetteen Day. Businesses and programs developed by Hetteen have contributed greatly to the sport of snowmobiling in Minnesota. Hetteen spent over 50 years of his life in the development of these businesses and programs. Two of the more important businesses in northwestern Minnesota are Polaris and Arctic Cat.

Friday night, Hetteen described his start over 54 years ago and explained that success involved many people. He told a crowd of people at the Best Western in Thief River Falls that the success of snowmobiling was not due to his efforts alone, and he would only accept the award on the behalf of those who helped along the way.

Vickie Dufault is a Mary Kay consultant who likes to help women look and feel their best. She also works at the Farmer Dell in Argyle where she lives with her husband. Vickie has three children and three grandchildren, and although she has only been with Mary Kay for two years, she has received local and national recognition for sales and her willingness to help other consultants.

The events will conclude at 1:45 with more time to view the displays, refreshments and drawings for approximately 70 door prizes. Each woman who attends will receive a gift bag.

Cost of the event is $8 with tickets available at North Valley Health Center and Country Casuals/River Jordan. No tickets will be sold at the door.

If the enthusiasm of Nancy Maurstad is any indication, the day will be fun, educational and exciting.

Nancy says the other committee members have been wonderful — each having something special to contribute to the planning process — and that the group has spent about four months putting the event together.

In an effort to keep costs down, the group strived to use every available community resource. Nancy and the rest of the committee members are thrilled with the response they have received from the various businesses and participating agencies. They are proud and appreciative of the town's response and see the event as a way to promote what the Warren community has to offer.

The many door prizes, ranging from gift certificates to savings bonds, were all donated by area businesses as were the items for the gift bags.

Along with press releases, flyers and brochures, letters were sent to area churches, women's organizations and businesses to promote the event.

Women's Health Day—A Day for Women will offer area women a chance to become more aware as they learn about health issues that affect them and to feel good about themselves as they hear about inner and outer beauty. Fashions, food and prizes will make February 21 a day of fun.

Sixth Annual Cultural Fest set for July 11,12

Festivals, and concerts — St. Hilaire has it all this summer. From an outdoor country concert June 27 to a full-blown cultural festival featuring performers from around the world.

The Sixth Annual All National Cultural Festival will be held July 11 and 12 at the Island Park in St. Hilaire. The "Island" is surrounded by a river and trees with a beautiful pathway for a pleasant walk along the edge of the water. In the middle of the park is one of the largest outdoor stages in Minnesota where performers from around the world have entertained, and name performers such as Brooks and Dunn, Little Texas, Edgar Winter and The Guess Who have performed as well.

For the All Nations Cultural Festival, large circus style tents are erected each year in front of the stage to allow the event to go on rain or shine. A 40-foot by 40-foot dance floor is placed between the stage and the audience for dance ensembles, and for the public to use at the Saturday night dance after the shows. Plenty of free parking is available and shuttle carts will take you to the edge of the seating area so don't worry about having to walk. The festival comes complete with arts, crafts, and a lot of good food to enjoy.

This year's featured performers include: The Hahlstead Family Orchestra direct from Norway, Oscar Mejia and Grupo Sabor a high energy salsa and soca band from South America, The Polish Dance Ensemble "Iskry" meaning "spark and flash"; Fubuki Daiko a Japanese drum group thrilling audiences by promoting the art of Taiko; The India School of Dance, Music and Theatre; Ojibwe Dancers and Drummers; The Belgian Folk Dancers, the Fialka Ukrainian Dance Ensemble; the Greek Folk Dancers; Le Metis Cowboy Show; the Barley Mow Band from Ireland; and Philippe Habeck, a talented humorous bilingual Master of Ceremonies.

There will also be mule drawn stage coach and buggy rides, Fur Trade era and Native American encampments, Patti Cakes The Clown, and a kids carnival rounding off this event to be a one-of-a-kind-don't-you-dare-miss-it family oriented festival.

Sponsors of the All Nations Cultural Festival include Hartz Foods, Pepsi, VFW Post 2793, KKAQ-FM and KKDQ-AM, Westside Motors, Harvest States Northwest Grain Division, WDAZ-TV, and KYCK-FM.

Soybeans keep pouring out a world of benefits

American soybeans are pouring into other countries in record numbers. In fact, half of all soybeans grown on American soil are exported, feeding whole communities and their livestock while helping balance our foreign trade.

In Asia, Europe, Canada, Mexico – all over the world – American soybeans help people eat better. They provide valuable sources of protein in both soy-based foods and as livestock feed supplements. And other new soybean uses, including lubricants and adhesives, are also traveling overseas. All to make sure soybeans grown in this country go the distance – feeding families and building our economy.

Soybeans. Pouring out a better future for all of us.

Kyle Anderson of the Prowlers positioned himself near East Grand Forks goalie Wade Holtman, which drew defensive attention from Nate Metcalf of the Green Wave during Tuesday's high school hockey game at the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center. Thief River Falls lost a 3-1 decision in the Prowlers' final home game of the 1997-98 season.

EGF is 3-1 winner over TRF

Thief River Falls' hopes of gaining some momentum off a 3-1 upset of Bemidji were undermined by the schedule, illness and penalties Tuesday as the Prowlers lost a 3-1 high school hockey game to East Grand Forks at the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center.

It was the final home appearance of the 1997-98 season for the Prowlers, who took a 4-17 record into their regular season wrap-up at Fergus Falls Friday.

Thief River Falls was hoping to build upon the Tuesday win over Bemidji and head into post-season play with a confidence-building mini win streak. But the schedule had left the weekend open, and the week's span between games took some of the edge off the Prowlers' game. Then came the flu bug that spread through the team. Whistles provided the final blow, with 19 penalties frustrating both sides.

The calls were very nearly split down the middle – 10 on the Green Wave and nine on the Prowlers – as the officials frequently took two players at a time in an attempt to check individual feuds they spotted around the rink. "The referees wouldn't let us play – either team," said Thief River Falls coach Scott Bergland. Eleven of those penalties were called in the second period when play came to a near standstill at times.

Just 14 seconds into the game the visitors found themselves skating shorthanded. But they turned the situation into a 1-0 lead when Travis Carivcau reached out and tapped the puck to Scott Mack, who one-timed the pass into the upper corner of the net with only 2:10 elapsed.

The Green Wave made it 2-0 at 10:34 on a rebound goal by Kyle Cash. The play began with Tyler Palmiscno walking into the slot area uncontested. His shot was blocked by Thief River Falls goalie Mike Dowers, but the puck bounced into a pile of players and Cash turned the the opportunity into a goal.

Thief River Falls scored on a power play opportunity at 12:59 of the first period. A wild flurry around the net produced several near-misses for the Prowlers. East Grand Forks goalie Wade Holtman lost his stick during the scramble and was stretched out across the goal mouth when Brady Anderson finally pushed the puck across the line.

Only other goal was scored by the Green Wave during a second period power play. Dowers stood his ground against the buzzing attack until Nate Metcalf wound up with an open shot at the top of the slot between the face-off circles to make it 3-1 at 5:46.

East Grand Forks finished the game by out-shooting Thief River Falls 14-5 in the third period when the Prowlers' bout with illness began to take its toll. "Half of our guys are sick," noted Bergland. "It was a combination of their quickness, and our sickness. We played hard. We had a couple of chances, but we couldn't put the puck in the net."

Scoring

First period - EGF, Scott Mack (Travis Carivcau), 2:16. EGF, Kyle Cash (Nate Metcalf-Tyler Palmiscno), 10:34. TRF, Brady Anderson (Kyle Anderson-Wade Chiodo), 12:59.

Second period - EGF, Metcalf (Cash), 5:46.

Third period - none.

Goalie saves - TRF, Mike Dowers 11-7-14–32. EGF, Wade Holtman 6-7-5–18.

Rebounds set up Jacks' win

Bemidji did a big-time number on the rebounds Tuesday, leading to a 50-39 girls high school basketball win over Thief River Falls.

The Lumberjacks overwhelmed the Prowlers on the boards 44-15, including a 24-5 difference on the offensive end.

"They're a big, physical team," pointed out Thief River Falls coach Jeff Loe, whose squad has had trouble on the boards all year. "We got intimated. They were getting second and third opportunities with their rebounds, and we weren't."

Bemidji doubled Thief River Falls 12-6 in the first quarter. The Prowlers managed to stay within 25-20 at halftime, but couldn't make up the deficit in the second half. It was 36-28 after three quarters.

Amy Enerson scored 15 points and Nikki Baltes had 11 for the Lumberjacks. Nicole Kopari scored 13 points to lead the visiting Prowlers.

Thief River Falls was 16-for-43 from the field (37 percent) and 5-for-8 at the free throw line. Bemidji shot only 24 percent from the floor (16/68), but the rebounds set up a steady supply of shots, and also led to a 15-for-20 night at the free throw line. The Prowlers topped the turnover charts 17-15.

Thief River Falls fell to 6-12 with the loss, the Prowlers' second at the hands of the Lumberjacks, who won a closer 57-54 contest back on Jan. 10.

Roseau shuts down Goodridge offense, wins 45-33 contest

Goodridge never got going offensively Saturday (Feb. 7) and lost a 45-33 boys high school basketball game to Roseau.

The visiting Rams jumped out to a 16-6 first quarter lead and were never challenged. They were up 26-12 at halftime and carried a 33-23 cushion into the final quarter.

"We were flat," said Goodridge coach Eric Mickelson. "We got behind right away, and that was pretty much the ball game. It was a night where neither one of us put together much offense."

Tristan Sjaaheim of Roseau (17) and Ben Hanson of Goodridge (13) were the game's only double figure scorers.

Scoring

	1	2	3	4	T
Roseau	10	10	7	12	45
Goodridge	6	6	11	10	33

Roseau - Peter Erickson 6, Tristan Sjaaheim 17, Aaron Anderson 2, Isaac Lang 8, Dustin Martens 7, Justin Kjos 5.

Gators handle Nordics 65-35

Marshall County Central struggled through a 23 percent 12-for-52 shooting performance Tuesday and wound up absorbing a 65-35 boys high school basketball drubbing at the hands of Badger/Greenbush-Middle River.

The host Gators jumped out to a 19-9 first quarter lead and never looked back. It was 31-12 at halftime and 52-22 through three quarters.

"We could not shoot the ball," said Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland. "It was awful."

With the stronger Gators controlling the inside, the Nordics needed to hit from the outside to stay in the game. They didn't, going just 2-for-18 from three-point range.

"They're a good team at the top of their game," noted Ueland. "They're big, physical kids. It was a brutally physical game. The officials didn't help us any in that regard, but if you're going to be successful, the ball has got to go in the basket sooner or later."

Daryl Wockenfuss scored 14 points and Andy Schenkey had 11 for the Gators. The Nordics were led by Matt Nelson with 11 points.

"We played, overall, our best game of the year," reported Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. "It was a real good outing for us. We played excellent defense, and offensively we moved the ball well."

The Gators' computerized performance charts, which measures various individual and team categories, had never gone above 90 this winter, noted Sparby, but it hit 100 against the Nordics. "That gives us a pretty good indicator of how well we played," he said.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River shot 53 percent from the floor (26/49) and went 9-for-15 at the free throw line, where Marshall County Central was 11-for-18. The Gators' rebound charts showed the winners with a 56-31 advantage. They also topped the turnover figures, 14-13.

The win improved the Gators' record to 15-4. The Nordics fell below .500 for the first time this season at 9-10.

Mustangs edge Eagles 56-55

Red Lake County Central has found a way to win. Grygla-Gatzke is still searching for the formula to success. Tuesday, the Mustangs, who had been saddled with a seven-game losing streak, beat the Eagles 56-55 for their fourth straight victory – three of them by four points or less – to go 7-11 for the year.

Grygla-Gatzke, meanwhile, has lost six straight and is 3-15. Seven of those losses have been by four points or less, four have been one-point setbacks, and two have come in overtime.

"This is getting very, very old," offered Grygla-Gatzke coach Vern Johnson.

Red Lake County Central led 15-14 at the end of the first quarter, fell behind 32-26 at halftime and went back on top 42-40 in the third quarter.

After trailing by six with two minutes to play, a Philip Brateng basket with just under a minute left provided the host Eagles with a 55-54 edge. The Mustangs ran time off the clock on the ensuing possession before Mark Lorenson took the ball to the basket and scored with just seven seconds to go.

Alex Anderson then headed downcourt with a Grygla-Gatzke breakaway, but was fouled just before putting up the shot. It was not ruled a shooting foul, setting up another in-bounds play with two seconds on the clock. The Eagles' pass was tipped away and time expired.

"It was a good match-up," said Red Lake County Central coach Chris McLean, who played for Johnson in high school. "Other than the second quarter, I was pleased with the way we played. The kids are playing with confidence right now."

"At times we played a pretty good game," mentioned Johnson. "But we stood around in the third quarter. We quit attacking, and that was probably the difference in the game right there."

Lorenson had a 23-point, 10-rebound game for the Mustangs, while teammate Nick Waldal came up with a 17-point, 10-rebound effort. Brateng scored 22 points and Anderson had 21 for the Eagles.

Red Lake County Central was 20-for-47 from the field (43 percent) and 9-for-15 at the free throw line. Grygla-Gatzke went 23-for-48 from the floor (48 percent) and 5-for-10 at the line.

Tri-County racks up 69-36 win over TRF

Seth Olson scored 23 points Tuesday as Tri-County handled Thief River Falls 69-36 in boys high school basketball at Karlstad.

The Wildcats took control of things from the start, hitting five three-point shots en route to a 19-9 first quarter lead. They had nine treys for the day as the gap increased to 36-15 at halftime and 51-27 through three quarters.

Tryg Splide and Ramone Porter joined Olson in double figures for the winners with 15 and 12 points, respectively. Justin Walseth was the lone Thief River Falls double digit point producer with 10.

Thief River Falls shot only 29 percent from the field (15/52) and went 5-for-9 at the free throw line, where Tri-County was 8-for-15.

The loss dropped the Prowlers to 1-16. They lost to the Wildcats earlier this season, too, but by just a 47-43 margin in the third place game of the Thief River Falls Russ Smith Northwest Holiday Classic.

Eagles pull away to beat Huskies 65-52

Red Lake Falls used its deeper bench to pull away down the stretch Tuesday in a 65-52 boys high school basketball win over Goodridge.

The Huskies had quarter leads of 14-12, 24-21 and 44-42. It was still a one-basket game with two minutes to play before the Eagles took control.

"They're a lot deeper than we are," reported Goodridge coach Eric Mickelson. "Both teams pressed the whole game, and I think we just ran out of gas at the end."

The loss dropped the Huskies to 7-11, but Mickelson was anything but unhappy with the performance. "The effort was excellent," he said. "It was the best game of basketball we've played all year – at least the first 30 minutes or so. We played with a lot of intensity."

A balanced Red Lake Falls offense featured four double figure scorers, led by Chris Swendra with 13 points. Jim Scheef of Goodridge led all scorers with 19 points, while Ben Hanson had 13.

Goodridge shot 42 percent from the field (23/55) and made 6 of 17 free throw attempts. Red Lake Falls shot 52 percent from the floor (23/44) and went 16-for-23 at the line. The Huskies had a 32-31 rebound edged and forced the Eagles into 22 turnovers while turning it over 15 times themselves.

RLCC girls control second half in win

Red Lake County Central took control of the game in the third quarter Tuesday and beat Norman County East 67-45.

The visiting Mustangs led only 26-23 at halftime, but they began the fourth quarter with a 47-27 spread and kept the points coming over the final eight minutes to improve to 12-7.

"We had a good third quarter," confirmed Red Lake County Central coach Rick Koivisto. "It was our best second half in a long time."

Katie O'Neill scored 20 points to lead the Mustangs' offense. Angie Chervestad, still keeping an eye on a back problem, sat out the first half, but played most of the second half and scored 13 points. Tracy Rosten had an 11-point, 14-rebound game and Frances Hilgeman had 10 points and 10 rebounds for the winners.

Kari Christiansen was the lone Norman County East scorer in double figures, finishing with 11 points.

With a 40-24 rebound advantage, Red Lake County Central was a busy 27-for-71 from the field (38 percent). Norman County East was 16-for-44 (36 percent). The Mustangs made 11 of 16 free throws, the Eagles 8 of 15. Norman County East topped the turnover charts 19-9.

Northland women beaten by Central Lakes team 58-42

Northland started poorly and never recovered Wednesday in losing a 58-42 Minnesota Community College Conference women's basketball game to Central Lakes at Brainerd.

The Raiders opened with an 8-1 lead and had a 34-18 halftime cushion.

"We turned the ball over and we shot poorly," reported Northland coach Rick Nikunen. "I thought our worst performance was behind us, but this was the worst we've played all year."

Northland beat Central Lakes 50-39 earlier this winter, but the loss in the rematch dropped the Pioneers to 10-10 for the year and 6-6 in the Northern Division. They finish the regular season with Northern Division home games against Fergus Falls Monday and Itasca Friday. A win in either game will earn an MCCC state tournament spot for the Pioneers.

Northland - Jamekka Lucas 4, Paula Hovda 8, Jenny Johnson 8, Naomi Wilebski 7, Garlene Nelson 7, Karrin Stoskopf 4, Mackenzie Malwitz 4.

TRF JV boys collect two basketball wins

Scores were similar as the Thief River Falls boys junior varsity high school basketball team upped its record to 10-7 with wins over East Grand Forks Friday (Feb. 6) 52-41 and Tri-County Tuesday 54-42.

Zach Bosh scored 20 points in the win at East Grand Forks, where Thief River Falls posted quarter leads of 14-8, 18-17 and 33-25.

Bosh came back with a 15 point game against Tri-County and was joined in double figures by Aaron Hendricks with 11. Thief River Falls led at the quarters 12-4, 25-15 and 36-27.

North swimmers sweep top spots against Prowlers

A strong Fargo North team had winning performances in all 12 events Tuesday as the Spartans cruised to a 138-35 dual meet high school boys swimming win over Thief River Falls at the Franklin Middle School pool.

It was the final home appearance of the 1997-98 season for the Prowlers, who fell to 1-6 in dual meet competition.

Despite the one-sided results on the scoreboard, Thief River Falls efforts impressed coach Brian Olson, who pointed to season-best times turned in by Cody Sorvig and Bryan Sorvig in the 200 freestyle; Sam Kezar and Neel Patel, 50 freestyle; Gabe Carlson and Andy Hudson, 100 butterfly; Cody Sorvig, 500 freestyle, Nathan Browning, 100 backstroke, and Aaron Field, 100 breaststroke.

"Everybody swam extremely well," said Olson. "North has a really good team and they swam well. But our kids didn't back down at all. I was very happy with the way they swam."

Thief River Falls' top swimmer, sophomore Zach Olson, missed the meet because of illness.

The Prowlers, who had a dual at Moorhead Thursday, will close out the regular season schedule today (Saturday) at the Grand Forks Invitational. Post-season competition under the new two-class system will find the Prowlers swimming in the Section 4A meet at Hibbing Feb. 26-28.

Dairy industry continues to be based on bottom dollar

tunities and threats, then to develop an individualized program for each participant.

Northwest Minnesota Dairy Diagnostic Team Project has received a grant of $47,000 from the Minnesota Department of Agriculture to carry out its program with about 40 dairy farmers in the northwest corner of the state. The project is intended to provide assistance to about 10 percent of the dairy herds in the counties of Lake of the Woods, Beltrami, Clearwater, Mahnomen, Norman, Red Lake, Pennington, Polk, Marshall, Kittson and Roseau.

Opportunity To Join

Troy Salzer, who heads the team program from the Roseau county extension office, said that the program is just getting underway and there is still opportunity for dairymen to make application to participate in the strictly voluntary program. He said the diagnostic team for this area includes extension people with dairy and crops expertise, a banker, a veterinarian and adult farm management instructor.

Dairymen may initiate their involvement by contacting Salzer at Roseau (phone 218-463-1052 or 1-800-450-1052) or Vince Crary at McIntosh (phone 218-563-2465 or 1-800-450-2465). The producer will be provided with an application form and worksheet which will provide summary information of the farm operation.

Farm Visit Is Made

When the complete farm financial analysis is available, the core team including the veterinarian, banker, extension educators and farm management instructor will visit the farm for a diagnostic workup. A complete written report will be compiled by the diagnostic team in a timely fashion, and the team will schedule a revisit to the farm. At this visit, the producer will be encouraged to have the people he or she works with present to review the report and visit with the team.

The team will also work to keep all farms involved in the program as a group and work with the group on pertinent educational needs.

"The purpose of a diagnostic approach is to help you look at areas that affect the profitability and management of your dairy operation," Salzer said. "The people involved in this project are interested and involved in helping dairy producers become more profitable." He said that bankers involved, for instance, have means to find sources of non-traditional financing.

While the program is initially expected to serve 10 percent of the region's dairymen, Salzer said that if the demand exceeds that number it is likely funding will be provided for an extended program.

The Region In Review

The stories we have run in this series have led to some of the following observations and opinions:

It is obvious that the prices dairy farmers receive for their milk has not come close to keeping pace with the prices they must pay for products and services they purchase. The decision of many dairymen to leave the industry is related to that cost-price squeeze.

Hand-in-hand with price as the reason for quitting is the disinterest by the next generation in taking over a highly restrictive lifestyle with diminishing rewards. This leaves the small dairyman not interested in investing in expansion due to age or economic situation with an investment in facilities that likely can not be recovered.

The Saddest Aspect

We view this situation as one of the saddest aspects of the loss of dairymen in our area. Middle-aged and older farmers who have spent much of their lifetimes putting their effort and money into their business now have only the animals themselves with saleable value. The facilities and equipment are virtually worthless.

Bottom Dollar Industry

The dairy business—perhaps like most businesses—is a bottom dollar industry. Rather than seeking to establish a price that will encourage dairymen to stay in business, their cooperatives have failed them as marketing representatives and seek instead to purchase product as cheaply as possible. Dairy product marketing is extremely complex, but the fact is that every aspect of the dairy industry receives profit consideration before the producer.

Recognition of the value of the dairy industry to the agricultural economy of Minnesota has been established and efforts at revival are being made by the state department of agriculture and the legislature.

Survived Without Changes

It may well be that northwest Minnesota dairying has survived longer than other areas of the nation without major changes, and that the changes deemed necessary now are corrections that came about in other areas years ago. Adoption of new ideas and technology in facilities and equipment in many cases can result in continuation of profitable dairying despite a flat price structure. Projections in U.S. Livestock and Dairy magazine show the average Minnesota milk price of $13.39 per hundredweight in 1998 as the highest price to be received through 2006, when the price is pegged at $13.15.

University of Wisconsin economist Bob Cropp says it would create "a huge mess" if the federal government established a $14.50 floor price for milk. Much like the early 1980s when price supports were at record level, he said, a $14.50 price floor would stimulate unprecedented production increases and would likely require the government to buy 10 to 12 percent of production at a cost of several billion dollars. Imports would likely increase an additional two billion pounds, the ability of the U.S. to export dairy products would grind to a halt and consumption of dairy products would fall.

Production Cost Down

"Further complicating the issue," he says, "is that the national cost of producing milk in recent years has decreased. As thousands of dairy producers struggle, thousands more see profits sufficient enough to invest millions of dollars in new facilities. Sad for some though it is, the days of marching lobbyists and PAC money into Washington and walking out with indexed price supports is long gone."

Few would argue that it is better for society to have fewer and larger dairy operations to provide a vital food product for the people of our nation and elsewhere in the world. Yet the structure of profitable operation causes that very situation to be evolving. If our area is to continue to have a rule in dairying, it seems necessary that it must make the changes required for profitable operation at low prices.

The Canadian system of a much higher price for milk used domestically and quotas assigned on production to cover those domestic needs has protected dairymen in that country. It has given the retiring dairyman an additional marketable item—his quota—but it is highly unlikely U.S. dairymen would accept a quota system even if our trade policies would make it viable.

Handwriting On The Wall

It would seem that the handwriting is on the wall and the "traditional" dairy farm as we have known it for generations will continually slip from our culture. Some will hang on for a time as management and finances permit, but the long-term outlook is not at all promising.

Because the quality of our dairy families is extremely high and their work ethic is beyond question, we hope that they can find a means to continue as residents of our communities even if they are unable to do so profitably in dairy.

We liked the following poem printed in the brochure prepared by the Northwest Minnesota Dairy Diagnostic Team Project, and it will serve as our final thought for this series:

"The Optimistic Frog"

Two frogs fell into a deep cream bowl. The first was an optimistic soul.

The second one took a gloomy view. "We both shall drown," he cried. "We're through!"

So, with a last despairing cry, he flung up his legs and said "goodbye."

Said the other, with a determined grin, "I can't get out, but I won't give in.

"I'll just swim around 'til my strength is spent, and then I'll die, the more content."

So, bravely he swam, until it would seem, his struggles began to churn the cream.

On top of the butter, at last he stopped, and out of the bowl he gaily hopped.

What is the moral? 'Tis easily found: "If you can't hop out, keep swimming around!"

Roller hockey tournament to benefit Clint Sorenson

Seven-year-old Clint Sorenson, son of former Thief River Falls residents Greg and Karen (Lindquist) Sorenson, has been receiving treatment for acute lymphoblastic leukemia since last August.

Karen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edsel (Red) Lindquist of Thief River Falls. Greg's mother is Mrs. Yvonne Wheadon.

Greg and Karen had many notable musical performances at Lincoln high school and spent a number of years in Nashville, TN, where Greg was a musician. They now live in Chandler, AZ.

An article regarding a benefit for Clint Sorenson states the following:

A Valentine's Day benefit tournament for a young roller hockey player with leukemia is scheduled for February 13-15 at the Chandler Sports Spectrum in Chandler, AZ. Adult Bronze, Silver, Gold and Women's Division teams are cordially invited to participate.

Clint Sorenson is a seven-year-old roller hockey player from Chandler who is fighting the battle against leukemia. Clint has played roller hockey in the Mite Division at the Chandler Sports Spectrum a facility owned by his aunt and uncle, Jody and Todd Trickle of Gear/ Chandler Roller Hockey. He was diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic leukemia on August 22, 1997, but because of the intensive chemo therapy Clint is currently undergoing, this dreaded disease has been brought into remission.

Acute lymphoblastic leukemia (ALL) is a cancer of the bone marrow. Patients can experience severe anemia as well as low platelet counts which can put patients at risk of life-threatening bleeding, so Clint's roller hockey playing is on hold. Patients with untreated ALL may develop serious infections because of reduced number of infection-fighting cells. Left untreated, ALL can be a rapidly fatal disease. ALL had a survival rate of only 2% in 1960 but today, thanks to dedicated and untiring research, that survival rate has soared to 80%.

The chemo therapeutic battle against leukemia is a three to five-year crucible. Clint's treatment regimen includes weekly trips to the Phoenix Children's Hospital's oncological clinic for spinal taps, blood transfusions and the infusion of several chemo medicines.

When the disease was diagnosed, Clint was hospitalized for about a week. At that time he had a "porta catheter" surgically implanted in his chest so the doctors could administer the drugs and blood transfusions he needs more easily. Clint still has all his hair but isn't afraid to lose it as his chemo treatments continue. He says, "It's not a big deal. Look at Michael Jordan! And besides, it will all grow back."

When remission actually becomes cure is still hotly debated and Clint's parents will probably wonder when it is "safe to exhale." But by the grace of God, the faithful prayers of His people, the help of brilliant doctors, nurses and researchers, and the support of groups like the roller hockey community, Clint will win the battle.

Clint is the son of Gear/Chandler Roller Hockey's chief operating officer Greg Sorenson and the nephew of the company's president and wife, Todd and Jody Trickle.

The 32-team roller hockey tournament had a $250 entry fee.

A Greg Sorenson/Clint Sorenson Benefit account has been established for persons who would like to make a donation. Checks made out to Clint Sorenson Benefit may be sent to Virginia Blanchard, Norwest Bank AZ, South Tempe Office 38653, 7605 S. McClintock Rd., Tempe, AZ 85284.

CATTLEMEN:
Currently there is a difference of $150.00 between choice and select on a 700# carcass.
There seems to be little doubt that carcass quality will be very important in the year ahead.

Open house held at new school site

Erskine - Area residents had the opportunity to visit the new Win-E-Mac school recently and view the progress made in construction.

Students from the elementary school in Erskine and high school in McIntosh will share the new $7.9 million facility.

Construction is progressing on schedule, and administration plans to be in the new building in August. The Thirteen Towns

Roseau's Broten receives hockey's highest honor

Roseau - Neal Broten marked the end of his 17-year professional hockey career at a ceremony before the Dallas Stars' game at Reunion Arena recently.

His parents, siblings, other relatives and friends joined the 17,000 fans who watched as his Dallas Stars jersey was raised to the arena ceiling. Broten's wife and daughters stood by his side on the ice throughout the ceremony.

The Brotens plan to sell their Dallas home and live at their Wisconsin ranch where Broten plans to help his wife in her new business of raising horses. He and his family also plan to attend the Roseau County Fair this summer. Roseau Times-Region

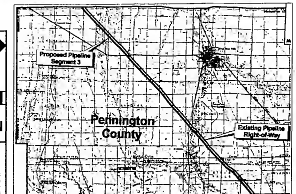
Waubun pair takes up adventurous new pastime



Waubun - PRO rallying is the latest pastime of Lorna LaGue and Todd DeFoe of rural Waubun.

PRO rallying is currently catching on like wildfire in America. The competition takes place on a course that includes minimum maintenance roads, logging trails or other dirt roads that have been blocked off. The event is usually several hundred miles long, can last for days and the driver doesn't know what the course will be until they begin the race.

Several types of 4-wheel drive, turbo-charged cars in different classes enter the race. All are street legal, insured and licenses. The cars average 90 miles an hour despite the corners and obstacles that make up the course.

Todd and Lorna have a Toyota Celica 4-wheel drive turbo car and are currently preparing for their first race in Atlanta, MI. - Mahnomen Pioneer

Lakehead Pipe Line is proposing to install a 36-inch crude oil pipeline through several counties in Northwest Minnesota including Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater.

Lakehead Pipe Line proposes new pipeline

Lakehead Pipe Line Company has requested support for the construction of a 36-inch crude oil pipeline through several counties in Northwest Minnesota.

According to a draft resolution presented to the Pennington County Board of Commissioners last week, 72 miles of new 36-inch pipeline would traverse parts of Pembina, ND, and Northwestern Minnesota counties of Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater and end at the Clearbrook facility. They are also adding one pump station at Viking.

Pennington County Auditor Ken Olson said the Pennington county board is waiting for revisions to the draft resolution before considering it. He said he doesn't anticipate any problems.

Olson said it will help taxpayers in townships and the county in general. He said he isn't sure how much it will help, but it's a definite benefit to the county.

According to information presented to the board the pipeline would follow the existing pipeline right-of-way. Olson said he was under the impression that many of the landowners had been notified by Lakehead Pipe Line of the proposed line. In any event, a number of meetings and or hearings will have to be held before construction begins.

Olson said he was told by Lakehead officials that they expect to start on the pipeline this fall but not reach Pennington County until 1999.

John Hayes, district manager for Lakehead Pipe Line in Bemidji, said they have notified many landowners and met with many county boards, but they have many more meetings and hearings. Hayes added that they are committed to the fair treatment of landowners upon whose property the pipeline is situated.

Lakehead hopes to begin work on more sensitive or difficult areas this fall. Hayes said the total miles of installed pipeline will be closer to 100 miles. The increase in crude oil is about 250,000 barrels a day.

The easiest way to explain why they're proposing the new line, he said, is to tell people that the shippers and refineries are asking them to transport more crude oil.

Much of the gasoline pumped, heating fuel used and asphalt laid in this region starts out as crude oil transported by Lakehead Pipe Line. Approximately 75 percent of all the crude oil delivered to Minnesota and 100 percent of Wisconsin's supply is transported through Lakehead Pipe Line's pipeline system

State announces spring road restrictions

Minnesota Department of Transportation is announcing that spring road restrictions will be in effect for central and northern Minnesota on state trunk highways beginning at 12:01 a.m., Wednesday, February 25, 1998.

Warm and wet weather has caused serious concerns about rapid deterioration in certain highway segments and these areas may be posted sooner. Drivers are asked to watch for and honor all posted signs. Anyone seeking additional information can call 755-2942 in Bemidji or 281-6069 in Crookston. For statewide recorded information call 612-405-6022.

Enhanced 911 discussed in several counties

Rural signing and addressing are the focus of discussions about an enhanced 911 system for Pennington County.

Pennington County Sheriff Gerald Moe sees rural addressing and signing as two separate issues.

Adopting a plan to address state requirements is becoming more of an issue locally. According to these requirements, the county must address the issue by November 1998 or start losing 911 funds.

The county receives about $28,000 each year which is earmarked for the 911 system. In a sense, the money comes from taxpayers because as customers of telephone companies they each pay a tax for the 911 system. The money is turned over to the state and the state disburses it to jurisdictions operating 911 systems.

The state is now requiring jurisdictions to operate enhanced 911 systems. These systems are designed to automatically provide locations and directions to 911 requests.

Pennington County operates a 911 system. The caller is identified automatically, and directions to the location are provided. But the loca-

Goodridge holds fundraiser for scholarship fund

Goodridge Education Association is sponsoring a scholarship fund drive in memory of Dr. David Brown who served as Superintendent of Schools at Goodridge from 1953 to 1980. The proceeds from several activities will be used to initiate a perpetual scholarship to be awarded to college-bound Goodridge seniors.

Brown was born to David L. and Elise L. (Wright) Brown in Fergus Falls on October 11, 1918. He died on July 21, 1997. He was a graduate from Fergus Falls High School, and North Dakota State University in Fargo in 1941. He later obtained master and doctorate degrees in Education and Administration.

Brown married Helen Elise Fisher in Fergus Falls on June 3, 1941. She died in 1984. During his career as an educator, he taught school in Wildrose and Karlsruhe, ND, before serving as Superintendent of Schools in Goodridge.

He also served in the Army Air Force, was involved in a number of organizations, and served as the mayor of Goodridge for 15 years.

Events begin on Friday, March 20. At 6 p.m. a pie and ice cream social will be held at the Goodridge Community Center. At 7 p.m. basketball games will be held at the new gym. The event will feature area organizations, past and present staff, students and alumni. Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for students grades 7 through 12, and $1 for students kindergarten through grade 6. Preschool children are admitted free of charge.

Other events are being planned for April and May. On Thursday, April 16, an elementary game night has been planned. It begins at 6:30 p.m. at the new gym. Admission is $3 for adults, and $2 for students grades 7 through 12. Elementary and preschool children will be admitted free of charge. Also at 6:30 p.m. the book fair begins. It will be held in the old gym.

The week of May 4 through 8 an elementary walk-a-thon will be held in conjunction with physical education classes.

Alumni, past staff, and area organizations/clubs are encouraged to participate in the March 20 basketball games. Teams will be organized by 5 to 10 year increments according to high school graduation years. To sign up, call 378-4133 by March 9.

Anyone interested in making donations to the scholarship fund, is asked to please send a check made out to GEA and mail to David Brow Scholarship Fund, GEA Treasurer, Goodridge School, Box 195, Goodridge, MN 56725.

TRF Principal receives service award

by Kathi Carlson
Northern Watch Reporter

Caring and insightful were two of the words colleagues used to describe Principal Glenn Espe when nominating him for the Minnesota Elementary School Principals' Association (MESPA) 1998 Distinguished Service Award.

Glenn was one of 12 Minnesota principals to receive the prestigious award last week at the 1998 annual MESPA held in Bloomington. Glenn is the principal at Challenger Elementary School in Thief River Falls.

According to a MESPA press release, "The awards honor principals whose leadership and sustained efforts are exemplary, and recognize those who have made worthy contributions to the operation of effective schools and learning programs."

The MESPA is a professional association with a membership of more than 900 elementary and middle school principals throughout Minnesota.

Glenn is originally from the Roseau area, the oldest of seven children. He has five brothers, and his only sister, Evadell Tangquist, also lives in Thief River Falls.

His education began in first grade at the Beaver School, a one-room rural school. The following year, the small rural schools consolidated and Glenn said, "circled like a wagon train" in Wannaska. He attended school there through the eighth grade. He attended high school in Roseau, graduating in 1957.

Following high school, Glenn attended teacher's training for a year in Thief River Falls. He began his career in the fall of 1958 at the school in Swift where he taught third, fourth and fifth grades. There was a total of 14 to 15 students in the three grades. He remained there for four years.

He then taught seventh and eighth grade and was the principal at the school in Holt. Anyone who is old enough to remember 1963 vividly recalls where he was when President Kennedy was shot. Glenn was at the school in Holt. It was also during his time there that he married his wife, Marge.

After leaving Holt, Glenn was the principal and sixth grade teacher at Middle River. He then taught sixth grade for two years in New Prague.

While educating children, Glenn was also working on his own education, attending night school. He received his Bachelor of Science degree in education from Bemidji State University in 1967.

Certified as a principal, Glenn returned to northern Minnesota where he was the elementary principal in Newfolden for five years. He received his Masters degree in administration from Bemidji State University in 1974.

For the past 22 years Glenn has lived and worked in Thief River Falls. He continued his education, receiving a Specialist degree in education from St. Cloud State University in 1978. For many years, he was the principal at Knox and Mark Twain Schools.

Following the retirement of Bill Derosier, Glenn was also the principal of Washington and Northop Schools for three years. He shook his head as he recalled that time. It wasn't possible to be at all four schools at once, and his schedule was often hectic. "Before I retired, it was my dream to see all the elementary students in one building," Glenn said.

His dream came true when Challenger School was built. When nominating him for his recent award, Glenn's peers wrote, "He led his staff in the planning and development of a new elementary school with many unique features including classrooms, resource and activity rooms, and technology to take teaching and learning well into the future."

While contractors built the building, it was Glenn Espe and his staff who made the facility a school. "It was fun to be part of the process," he said, and he is very pleased with the way it has worked out. Working together under one roof has enabled the staff to offer so much more to the students. "There's more going on," Glenn said. "And I've observed a positive attitude change, in both the staff and kids."

From teaching three grades in tiny Swift to being the administrator of a large, state-of-the-art facility in Thief River Falls, Glenn has seen many changes in education during his 40-year career. Special needs of individual children are met, and there are many more activities. "It's totally different," he said. Glenn cites the advancements in curriculum as the greatest change and says, "The students soak it up. They're ready for it." He notes that to be competitors in a global market, today's children will especially need skills in the math and technology used by business and industry.

Except for a six-year period early in their marriage, Glenn's wife, Marge, has also worked as an educator. She teaches science in Middle River in the mornings and spends afternoons in Greenbush as the school's career coordinator.

The Espe children are grown. Karmon is married to Rick Tronvedt, human resources director at Marvin Windows in Warroad. Karmon works out of their home and is the busy mother of three young boys, ten-year-old Kyle, eight-year-old Kasey, and Karter who is five. KayLyn is a registered dietitian in San Antonio, TX and is planning to be married on June 27. Karla and husband Steve Rachae live in Burnsville. Karla is the manager of a food service business in Shakopee, and the couple has a six-month-old daughter, Keira. Thane and wife Jenelle are in Moorhead where he is completing his education in biology at Moorhead State University. The Espes have also been the guardians of their nephew, Joshua Engevik, since he was six years old. Josh, now 19, is currently living in Bloomington and working in sales for Omaha Choice.

"The students soak it up. They're ready for it," said Espe.

Glenn Espe, principal at Challenger Elementary School in Thief River Falls, was one of 12 Minnesota principals to receive the Minnesota Elementary School Principals's Association 1998 Distinguished Service Award last week at the annual MESPA convention in Bloomington.

Operation Round Up Grant applications are due by March 9

Organizations involved in community projects and charities are encouraged to apply for funds from Operation Round Up.

Operation Round Up is a program adopted by Red Lake Electric Cooperative of Red Lake Falls. Customers choosing to "round up" their monthly electric bill provide funds for this effort. Presently, 3,400 Red Lake Electric Cooperative customers are choosing to contribute pennies each month to enhance their communities.

Funds will be donated primarily to non-profit organizations to help fund their specific projects or programs. Since the program began in 1993, $93,140 has been granted to community organizations and charities. The Red Lake Electric Trust Board of Directors determines contributions. Money will be donated for betterment of the community within the outside service area boundaries of Red Lake Electric Cooperative.

Organizations wishing to apply for funds should contact the Red Lake Electric Cooperative office in Red Lake Falls at 218-253-2168 or 1-800-245-6068. A short application form must be completed and submitted along with an organization finance statement. The next semi-annual meeting to determine grants will be held in mid-March. Grant applications are due March 9.

For more information contact Ron Kennedy, general manager of Red Lake Electric Cooperative.

Aren't you tired of cooking those heavy old meals? It seems like anything I make lately is bland and boring. I suppose it could be spring fever, but I think I need some spicy foods to perk up my cooking.

How about something Chinese to tempt those taste buds? Here's an easy one - put in to marinate in the morning and cook for supper:

CHINESE PDRK TENDERLDIN

2 pounds pork tenderloin
3/4 cup soy sauce
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup ketchup
1 clove garlic, finely chopped

Cut each pork tenderloin into two lengthwise strips. Mix remaining ingredients in large glass or plastic bowl and stir in pork. Cover and refrigerate at least 8 hours.

When ready to cook, heat oven to 350 degrees. Remove pork from marinade and drain. Place pork on rack in roasting pan and bake, uncovered, 40 minutes or until done (160 degrees on meat thermameter).

Here's a quick Chinese dish that sounds like it has plenty of zip:

SPICY CHICKEN WITH CELERY

4 boneless, skinless chicken breasts, halved (about 1 pound)
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon white pepper
5 stalks celery
3 green onions with tops
1 hot green chili or 1 teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons brown bean paste
2 teaspoons finely chopped garlic
1 teaspoon finely chopped ginger root

Cut chicken into 2 x 1/2 inch strips. Toss chicken, cornstarch, salt and white pepper in medium glass or plastic bowl. Cover and refrigerate 20 minutes.

Cut celery diagonally into 1/4 inch slices. Place in boiling water, heat to boiling and boil 1 minute. Drain and immediately rinse in cold water. Drain.

Cut green onions diagonally into 1 inch pieces. Remove stems and membrane from chili and cut into very thin slices.

Heat wok or 12 inch skillet until very hot. Add oil and rotate to coat sides. Add bean paste, chili, garlic and ginger root and stir fry 10 seconds. Add chicken and stir fry until it turns white. Add green onions and celery and stir fry one minute. Serve over hot cooked rice if desired.

Here's an interesting recipe for shrimp, something I know we don't eat as often as we should:

SHRIMPS DE JDNGHE

2 pounds raw unshelled shrimp
1/4 cup lemon juice
1 stalk celery, cut up
1 small onion, cut up
2 bay leaves
Topping
1/2 cup butter, softened
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1/4 cup dairy sour cream
1/4 cup chopped parsley
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon bottled steak sauce
1 teaspoon pepper
Dash pepper

Place unshelled shrimp in 6 cups boiling water. Add 2 tablespoons of the lemon juice and the celery, onion and bay leaves. Cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer gently until shrimp turn pink, about 5-6 minutes depending on size. Remove from heat and let shrimp cool in cooking liquid.

Meanwhile, cream softened butter with bread crumbs, sour cream, parsley, garlic, remaining lemon juice, Worcestershire, steak sauce, salt and pepper.

Drain, peel and clean shrimp. Place in 6 individual baking dishes (or one large baking dish). Cover shrimp with butter mixture and bake at 400 degrees until shrimp are heated through, about 15 minutes. Serve hot.

Here's a low calorie Mexican dish that would taste good even if you don't care about the calories - save the spicy recipe for summer time too:

TURKEY TACD SALAD

3 flour tortillas (8 inches in diameter)
1/2 pound ground turkey
1/3 cup water
1 to 2 teaspoons chili powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 teaspoon ground red pepper
1 (8 ounce) can kidney beans, drained
5 cups shredded lettuce
1 medium tomato, chopped (1 cup)
1/2 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese
1 small onion, chopped (1/4 cup)
1/4 cup reduced calorie Thousand Island dressing
1/4 cup reduced calorie sour cream
4 pitted ripe olives, sliced

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Cut tortillas into 12 wedges or 3x1/4 inch strips. Place in ungreased jelly roll pan and bake 6-8 minutes, stirring at least once, until golden and crisp. Cool.

Cook turkey, stirring frequently, until brown. Stir in water, chili powder, salt, garlic powder, red pepper and kidney beans. Heat to boiling, then reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, 2-3 minutes, stirring occasionally, until liquid is absorbed. Cool 10 minutes.

Mix lettuce, tomato, cheese and onion in large bowl. Toss with dressing. Divide on 4 dinner plates and top each with about 1/2 cup of turkey mixture. Arrange tortilla wedges around salad and garnish with sour cream and ripe olives.

(Recipe serves four and each serving contains 290 calories, 21 g protein, 24 g car, 13 g fat, 710 mg sodium.)

Here's an East Indian-type dish that can be made in minutes in your microwave - serve on rice or even atop fresh, crusty bread for a delicious sandwich meal:

CURRY BEEF SATAY

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons grated onion
1 tablespoon packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon curry powder
1 teaspoon soy sauce
2-3 drops hot pepper sauce
1 1/4 pounds beef top round steak, very thinly sliced (freezing for a bit will help you cut this very thin)
4 (8 inch) bamboo skewers
Salt

Combine oil, onion, sugar, curry, soy and pepper sauce in a large glass bowl and mix well. Add beef, stir to coat, and let mixture stand for 30 minutes.

Thread 2-3 slices of beef on a skewer and remaining meat on 3 more skewers until all meat has been used. Place skewers in microwavable rack set in shallow microwavable baking dish. Do not overcrowd the dish and arrange skews so meatier parts are facing the edge of the dish. If necessary, cook meat in 2 batches with slightly reduced cooking times.

Brush meat with any remaining curry mixture and micro on high for 3-4 minutes, rotating dish once. If desired, sprinkle lightly with salt just before serving.

Can't forget the Italian when we talk spicy - maybe this will tickle your fancy:

CHEESEBURGER DEEP DISH PIZZA

Pizza Dough
1 package active dry yeast
1 cup warm water (105-115 degrees)
2 1/2 cups flour
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
Filling
1 pound ground beef
1 can (16 ounces) tomatoes, drained
1 tablespoon instant onion
1 teaspoon dried oregano
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups shredded cheddar

First, brown beef and drain.

To make crust, dissolve yeast in warm water. Stir in remaining ingredients and beat vigorously 20 strokes. Let rest about 5 minutes before forming in greased 9x13 inch pan by pressing evenly on bottom and halfway up sides of greased pan.

To make filling, mix tomatoes, onion, oregano, salt, pepper and garlic powder, breaking up tomatoes.

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Sprinkle meat over dough and then sprinkle with 1/2 teaspoon salt. Spoon sauce over meat and top with cheese. Bake until cheese is light brown, 20-25 minutes.

Fraud takes many different shapes

by David Hill
Associate Editor

After covering law enforcement for over a dozen years now I've become distrustful of human nature and motives. Perhaps that's to my benefit in some circumstances. But there are those who are very trustful of human nature. I can say with confidence that I hear or will hear reports of at least four fraud schemes per year in Pennington County alone. I strongly believe, as well, that if one person reports being taken in a fraud, it has happened to many others who are too embarrassed to report the theft.

Fraud can come in many shapes or forms. The kind of fraud I'm talking about is delivered to mailboxes or spread across telephone lines. Local officials constantly ask me to tell readers not to pay for free gifts, give away their credit card numbers, social security numbers, bank account numbers or any private information. That information can be, and often will be used against you by people who have only their interests at heart.

It's not a problem that affects just local consumers. According to the Federal Trade Commission, consumers lose an estimated $40 billion a year to telemarketing fraud. Senior citizens often are the target of telephone scams. (The FBI estimates that as many as 80 percent of the victims are older people.) According to the United States Postal Service, it will deliver more than 180 billion pieces of mail this year, including some interesting, appealing, and attractive solicitations. Unfortunately, some of these solicitations come from scam artists.

Officials encourage citizens not to give out private information, but they also suggest that consumers could beat them if they recognized the lines they use. Some of the common phrases include: "You are a guaranteed winner of one of five valuable prizes"; "You have been selected to receive a fabulous vacation"; "This chain letter is perfectly legal"; or "Your assistance is needed to help transfer millions of dollars. All we need is your bank account number."

Don't become another victim. If you doubt what they advertise or think something is too good to be true, contact local law enforcement, or the National Fraud Information Center at 1-800-876-7060; or the Federal Trade Commission at (202) 326-3128; or the Postal Crime Hotline at 1-800-654-8896.

Hang up on telephone fraud, and cancel their subscription to your pocketbook.

What's right with families?

by David Hill
Associate Editor

In discussing juvenile crime I take a strong position with anyone who cares to listen. I maintain that if a juvenile gets in trouble, the juvenile's family should be involved. And when I say involved, I mean being held responsible and accountable for their children's actions too.

Unfortunately, over the years I haven't observed much change in the "juvenile problem". Any discussions about juveniles tends to result in asking that perennial question — what's wrong with children and their parents? Perhaps people aren't listening.

One study takes a different approach.

Seventy-eight percent of Minnesotans say their families are "very strong" or "exceptionally strong" and Minnesotans consistently rate their current families as stronger than the families in which they grew up, according to a study released from the Minnesota Family Strength Project. The respondents' age, number of years married, cultural/ethnic background or religious preference had no significant bearing on whether families considered themselves strong.

"The study tells us that if we're out there talking about how to save deteriorating families, people aren't likely to listen — because most of us see our own families as strong," said Terry Steeno, president and CEO, Family and Children's Service, which commissioned the research. "Instead of looking at what's wrong with families, this study tells us what's working in families, so we can learn from each other to build on family strengths."

Researchers from the Minnesota Family Strength Project talked to more than 2,000 families of all colors, shapes and sizes from throughout Minnesota, to find out what makes them strong. The project is a unique collaboration of Family and Children's Service, the Allina Foundation, the Minnesota Historical Society and Minnesota Public Radio.

The Minnesota Family Strength Project let families define what they consider to be "their family." Across the entire study, families who rate themselves strong had a broader definition of family. On average, they mention almost twice as many members as less strong families. Four times as many Minnesotans defined their families as large (22 members or more) than as "just myself." And families included pets as often as friends in their definition of family.

Five themes emerged from the research as the elements most central to family strength: communication, health (physical, mental and economic), time spent together, spirituality (important to families whether or not they attend organized worship services), and support (physical and emotional).

The top stresses reported by families were: no chance to unwind, uncompleted chores by children and arguments between parents and children. "This is consistent with past research that tells us it is not so much the crisis that tear families apart — it's the grind of day-to-day hassles," said Judy Watson Tiesel, Ph.D., family social scientist and designer of the research. "It shows us we need to get better at helping people cope with daily stresses, instead of waiting for a big crisis."

According to the project report, the research clearly reveals a connection between family strength and health. "This project draws us beyond the ordinary bounds of health care by focusing on strengths, not weaknesses, where our diagnosis usual begins," said Mike Christenson, executive director, the Allina Foundation.

And where do families turn when they need help? The top resource mentioned by Minnesota families was prayer.

LETTERS

Dear Editor:

I would like to personally congratulate all of the individuals and organizations who were involved with the recent Governor's Snowmobile Ride and MnUSA Rendezvous. As everyone knows who was associated with the event, it was a tremendous success. In fact, many people who have been involved in past Governor's rides, indicated that this was the best ever. That fact probably isn't surprising to anyone from northwestern Minnesota since we've known for years that when snowmobiling is involved, nobody does do it better.

Events like this have tremendous tourism implications for the area in the future, not only because we have a good trail system for people to ride on, but also because a big part of snowmobiling is based on the friends you make while you ar participating in the sport. Showing the Lieutenant Governor and the hundreds of snowmobilers from throughout the state who attended this event the tremendous hospitality of all the people in northwest Minnesota will be the biggest single thing we can do to invite people back in the future.

Again, the entire event was outstanding. It wouldn't have happened without a tremendous amount of hard work on the part of a lot of people. You should all feel very proud of a job well done.

Sincerely,
Chris Twomey
Chief Executive Officer
Arctic Cat Inc.

Dear Editor,

A recent release by DNR, published on Channel 3, states that they have uncovered no new leads in the destruction of the radioed timber wolves.

My opinion is if they should find them, they should be rewarded, rather than prosecuted. How well I remember a comment made several years ago by one of Northern Minnesota' Statesmen, a gentlemen from Gatzke, regarding the aerial shipment of two bitch wolves and one male from Northern Minnesota to Michigan to help offset the famous Michigan whitetail.

It went somewhat as follows, "If the Department of Fish and Wildlife really wants to do some good, they would release these wolves over Lake Michigan in open water."

Sincerely,
Norman L. Anderson

Enhanced 911 discussed in several counties

tion to a 911 request is entered manually. An operator for the county receives updates each week and enters the updates into the computer.

Sheriff Moe explained that one type of enhanced 911 system is based on rural addressing. Currently, most rural residents have a post office box number and a rural route number. That information isn't necessarily helpful to the emergency response team. What they need are directions to the residence. In order to address that problem, some counties have established rural addressing by assigning street addresses to each residence.

It's expensive, said Sheriff Moe, to install signs at every intersection. The last estimate he saw placed the cost at $114 per sign. The 911 funds the county receives cannot be used for rural signing, so taxpayers would have to pick up the cost.

Sheriff Moe said he's leaning toward an addressing system based on a Geographic Information System (GIS) digital mapping. The technology is available and becoming more popular. In addition, Sheriff Moe believes more residents will be going to wireless systems, and combined with GPS and other information, such a system can provide an effective tool for emergency personnel responding to an emergency 911 call.

The Minnesota State Patrol in this region has gone to a system that can identify and route emergency responders to 911 calls from cellular phones. Moe said he would like to see a system installed in Pennington county that is compatible with that system so that they can share a common database.

In another effort to help save money on such a project, Sheriff Moe is working with other counties to reduce the cost of the bidding process.

He estimates the total cost of such a system at $150,000, which does not include rural signing. Currently, they have about $45,000 in 911 funds for such a project. Moe also estimates that it would take about 18 months to implement such a system.

What system and direction the county takes, however will come down to a decision by the county board. According to the state, they have until November 1998 to come up with a plan.

MnSCU seeks candidates trustees board

Minnesotans interested in serving on the Board of Trustees of the Minnesota State Colleges and Universities (MnSCU) should apply by March 16.

MnSCU, the statewide system of community colleges, state universities and technical colleges became operational July 1, 1995 and is governed by a 15-member Board of Trustees. Four positions will be filled this spring.

"These positions represent a unique opportunity to nurture and guide public higher education in an era of continuing major changes," said Donald Sudor, chair, trustee candidate advisory council. "These are no ordinary times for higher education. The status quo cannot be preserved. That is why it is so critical that our Council recruit skilled, wise, and energetic candidates for the Board." The system has more than 145,000 students and 20,000 employees, and receives almost $1 billion in state funds, tuition, federal, private and other funds.

The Board provides leadership in such areas as academic programs, fiscal management, personnel, admissions requirements, tuition and fees, and rules and regulations. The Board also appoints the chancellor, who serves as chief executive officer of the system.

Applications for MnSCU's Board of Trustees will be processed by the Trustee Candidate Advisory Council, which will make its recommendations to Governor Carlson by early April. The Governor then appoints the trustees.

For application materials, contact Barbara Patterson at 612-296-9002. All applications must be submitted by 5 p.m. on March 16, 1998.

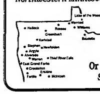
Volunteers help explain tax credits for working families

Minnesota families who are eligible for the federal Earned Income Credit (EIC) and the Minnesota Working Family Credit (WFC) on 1997 income taxes can obtain help from volunteer tax assistants at 450 Minnesota sites beginning Monday, Feb 2 through April 15. According to the Minnesota Department of Revenue, the EIC and WFC helped more than 200,000 Minnesota families share in $290 million in tax credits average $1,500 per family.

To find a site to obtain tax assistance, call the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Line at 612-297-3724 or 1-800-657-3989. The Department of Revenue reminds Minnesotans that they may qualify for the EIC and the WFC even if they don't earn enough to file an income tax return. The only way to get the extra money, however, is to file federal and state tax forms.

In general, those who are eligible for the EIC and the WFC include: workers who made less than $25,760 in 1997 and had one child at home. They may receive up to $2,542. Workers who made less than $29,290 in 1997 and had two or more children at home. They may receive up to $4,204.



Workers without children who made less than $9,770 in 1997 and are between 25 and 64 years. They may receive up to $382.

For additional information about tax credits including child care credit and property tax and renters refunds, call the Minnesota Department of Revenue at 296-6417 in the Twin Cities area or 1-800-937-5437 outside of the Twin Cities.

Why did Father Jack Davis leave the comfort of North Dakota for the poverty of Chimbote, Peru?

Robin Huebner

Mel Stone
KVLY-News11's Robin Huebner and Mel Stone spent two weeks with Father Jack in Chimbote. They saw families living a primitive way of life, witnessed a wake and funeral of a nine-month-old baby, then watched as Jack anointed an elderly lady who soon died. They met volunteers from Fargo and Sister Peggy, who has worked with Father Jack for 12 years. They asked Father Jack why he continues the mission, despite disease and danger.

Thief River Falls boys beat Marshall County Central...

Strong start sets up TRF win

Thief River Falls jumped out to a 15-0 lead and finished with a 13-point boys high school basketball win over Marshall County Central Tuesday, 56-43.

The Nordics have had a bad habit of falling behind at the start throughout the course of the 1997-98 season, but they rarely found themselves in that kind of trouble. And it was just too big a hole to climb out of. The visiting Prowlers led at the quarter stops 19-8, 31-18 and 42-29.

It was the second win in as many starts for the Prowlers, who had picked up just one victory in their first 17 games. The Nordics, who have been flirting with the break-even mark down the stretch after starting the season 8-3, dipped below .500 again at 10-11.

Matt Myers had a 16-point, 12-rebound game for the Prowlers, while Justin Walseth turned in a 13-point, 8-rebound performance. Matt Nelson led the Nordics with 11 points.

The Prowlers lost the services of Casey Skjerven during the game to an injury in the mouth area.

Thief River Falls was 22-for-49 from the field (45 percent). They struggled through an 11-for-24 free throw night. Marshall County Central also had trouble at the line with a 7-for-21 showing.

Both teams had Friday (Feb. 20) games, with the Nordics closing out the regular season against Stephen-Argyle, while the Prowlers finished their home schedule against Warren-Alvarado-Oslo. Thief River Falls will complete regular season play with games Tuesday at Roseau and Friday (Feb. 27) at Detroit Lakes.

Scoring

Hagen keys B/G-MR victory

Tiffany Hagen scored 20 of her game-high 29 points in the third quarter Tuesday to lead the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River girls past Warroad 70-36 in high school basketball.

The host Gators led 14-10 at the end of the first quarter and were up 28-19 at halftime before Hagen sparked a 31-8 third quarter blitz that opened up a 59-27 scoreboard gap.

"They couldn't stop her," said Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Tom Neibauer in describing the third quarter outburst by Hagen, a 5-7 senior. "She was taking the ball to the basket and hitting short jumpers."

Missy Smith had a 14-point, 10-rebound game for the winners and Kara Kuznia contributed 10 points. Lisa Fry scored 23 points for Warroad.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River shot an eye-opening 56 percent from the field (31/55) and went 9-for-15 at the free throw line. Warroad made 8 of 16 free throws.

"That's probably the best game we've played in three years," noted Neibauer.

Led by 6-2 Heather Evans, Warroad stayed close in the first half with a strong rebounding performance. But The Gators adjusted, playing in front of her in the second half when they got their share of rebounds.

Pressure defense employed by Badger/Greenbush-Middle River also played a major factor in the outcome as the Gators, who won the first meeting between the two teams earlier this year by just 51-50, came up with 16 steals.

The Gators took a 15-6 record into their regular season final Thursday at Lake of the Woods.

Scoring

	1	2	3	4	T
Warroad	10	6	8	6	30
B/G Middle River	14	14	31	11	70

Warroad - Holly Pahlen 1, Christy Watson 1, Heather Evans 8, Jessica Johnson 3, Lisa Fry 23.

Wildcats handle Gators 54-41

A Tuesday showdown between two of the top area boys high school basketball teams wound up being an unexpected one-sided affair when Tri-County breezed to a 54-41 win over Badger/Greenbush-Middle River at Karlstad.

The Wildcats led 13-9 at the end of the first quarter and had a 21-15 halftime edge. The Gators then helped seal their own fate by opening the second half with five straight turnovers and wound up facing a 34-22 deficit to start the fourth quarter. Both sides wound up playing reserves over the final four minutes.

"We did not play good basketball," reported Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. "We played too tense. I was very disappointed in our performance."

Seth Olson scored 17 points, Tryg Spilde 11 and Travis Hjelle 10 for the Wildcats, who were 22-for-45 from the field (49 percent) and 5-for-8 at the free throw line. Daryl Wockenfuss netted 14 points and Richard Wockenfuss had 10 for the Gators, who went 17-for-47 from the floor (36 percent) and 6-for-11 at the line.

"We had a hard time getting anything going," said Sparby. "They're too quick; we couldn't press them. And we turned the ball over."

The Gators had a 29-25 rebound edge, but also topped the turnover charts 17-13.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River fell to 15-5 with the loss. The Gators had a Friday (Feb. 20) game at Kittson Central before hosting Red Lake County Central Monday in the regular season finale.

Scoring

Greyhounds beat RLCC boys 73-48

Red Lake County Central struggled Tuesday while losing a 73-48 boys high school basketball game to Fosston at Oklee.

The Mustangs managed to stay close in the first quarter, 21-17, but fell behind 41-28 at halftime and trailed 59-32 at the end of the third quarter.

"We got out-rebounded and we turned the ball over," reported Red Lake County Central coach Chris McLean. "They beat us in every phase of the game. They played extremely well, and we didn't play very well."

The loss dropped the Mustangs to 7-13 heading into regular season-ending games on the road Friday (Feb. 20) vs. Norman County East and Monday against Badger/Greenbush-Middle River.

Mark Lorenson scored 15 points and Nick Waldal had 12 for the Mustangs. The Greyhounds had four double figure scorers – Brad Ouerr and Joe Simonson with 11 points each, Casey Holland and Nate Illies with 10 apiece.

LOW, Sacred Heart stop Grygla-Gatzke

Setbacks at the hands of Lake of the Woods and East Grand Forks Sacred Heart stretched the Grygla-Gatzke boys high school basketball losing streak to eight games while dropping the Eagles to 3-17 heading into regular season-ending contests Friday (Feb. 20) at Roseau and Monday at home against Tri-County.

Lake of the Woods emerged with a 71-63 overtime victory Friday (Feb. 13) at Baudette. Sacred Heart won 59-47 Tuesday at Alvarado.

Lake of the Woods 71
Grygla-Gatzke 63

A three-point shot at the buzzer by Lake of the Woods' Eric Holen sent the game into overtime, and the Bears went on to beat Grygla-Gatzke 71-63.

Lake of the Woods, after leading at the quarter stops 24-21, 36-29 and 46-42, trailed 54-51 in the final seconds of regulation time. The Eagles actually got a hand on Holen's game-tying shot, but despite being tipped, the ball went through the net at the horn.

The Bears opened overtime with another three-point shot, then went on to make 10 of 14 extra-session free throws to win going away.

It was the third overtime loss of the year for the Eagles.

Grygla-Gatzke featured a 1-2 scoring combination in Phil Brateng with 25 points and Alex Anderson with 20. The Bears had four double figure scorers, led by Tony Caldwell with 19 points.

SPORTS BRIEFS

U-M keeps eye on Sanden

Thief River Falls' Kyle Sanden may see his playing time reduced with the University of Minnesota men's basketball team due to health reasons.

According to the Star-Tribune of Minneapolis, the 6-11 redshirt freshman, the Gophers' starting center since early in the year, experienced symptoms from a fainting condition that plagued him during the off-season while playing Saturday (Feb. 14) against Michigan State.

Sanden has been taking medication to control the condition, and it was the first time this season he has had an episode during a game. Playing hard for extended periods of time apparently aggravates the problem, and Minnesota head coach Clem Haskins voiced his concern about Sanden's status for the first Big Ten tournament that could produce four games in as many days.

"It's going to be awfully tough," Haskins told the Star-Tribune. "It will be very, very difficult – I think that's kind of a no-brainer – physically he will not be able to do that."

Sanden, who is also nursing a sore thumb, has been averaging 19.8 minutes per game. Back-up center Antoine Broxsie will be getting more minutes, according to Haskins, in order rest Sanden.

Alex coach not rehired

Denise Anderson, one of the state's most successful high school volleyball coaches, will not be directing the Alexandria program in 1998.

Anderson posted a 396-109 record in 18 years at the school. The Cardinals, who have won Section 8AA titles four of the past five years, captured the Class AA state tournament in 1996, finished second in 1991 and 1994 and took the consolation title in 1993. Last fall Alexandria was unbeaten and ranked No. 1 in the state before being upset in first round state tournament play.

But apparently reacting to parental concerns, Dr. Dennis Rislove, Superintendent of School District 206, informed Anderson she would not be issued an extracurricular contract for next year. He told the Echo Press in Alexandria that a substantial amount of controversy exists and he felt it was in the best interest of the players and the program to make a change at this time.

Anderson was named Class AA volleyball Coach of the Year in 1991 and 1995 and last fall was inducted in the Minnesota Volleyball Coaches Hall of Fame. Twenty-three of her players have gone on to play college volleyball.

Moorhead defender Betty Charlton stayed with Thief River Falls' Laura Follett on her drive during Thursday's high school basketball game in the Lincoln gym. The Spuds beat the Prowlers 58-44.

Spuds' sophomore does in TRF, 58-44

First half was a wash, but Moorhead took charge in the third quarter Thursday and went on to beat Thief River Falls 58-44 in girls high school basketball.

It was the regular season finale for the Prowlers, who finished 6-16. The Spuds went home with a 13-9 record.

Moorhead had a 15-14 first quarter lead and a 27-26 edge at intermission. The lead changed hands seven times and there were five ties in the first half when each team had a four-point lead – the biggest spread over the first 16 minutes.

But all that changed at the start of the second half that opened with sophomore guard Andrea Shogren hitting a three-pointer from the top of the key and senior center Stacy Van De Loo taking the ball to the basket on a drive following a Thief River Falls turnover.

Stephanie Leach countered with a basket from the middle for the Prowlers, but Shogren then hit three straight baskets to swing the game in the Spuds favor – banking in a short jumper, taking a steal in for a fast break lay-up and knocking down a short jumper on the run following another Thief River Falls turnover. Shogren would finish the night with a game-high 23 points.

"She (Shogren) was coming off that top pick, and we didn't do a very good job picking it up and getting through it," explained Thief River Falls coach Jeff Loe.

Moorhead had a 42-30 cushion as the third quarter ended.

"They came out and hit some shots, and we missed some shots," noted Loe. "The first half was pretty fast-paced, and we might have been a little tired."

It was still a 12-point game when Thief River Falls put together a mini-run to chop the difference in half as Beth Olson connected from underneath, and hit a shot from the side that was followed by a Nicole Kopari drive through traffic to make it 44-38 with 4:16 to play.

The Spuds' Bethany Gilyard scored from the side and the Prowlers' Laura Follett sank two free throws to keep it a six-point difference with 3:29 remaining.

But Moorhead held off the Thief River Falls comeback at the free throw line. The Spuds hit eight straight foul shots over the final 2:53, and when they finally did miss – with 41.6 seconds on the clock – an offensive rebound led to a game-ending basket by Kirsten Larson.

Gilyard, a 6-0 senior, joined Shogren in double figures for the Spuds with 10 points. Kopari led the Prowlers with 13 points.

It was the second victory of the season over the Prowlers for the Spuds, who won by a similar 54-46 margin earlier, but Loe was more than satisfied with the Thief River Falls showing. "The effort was there," he said. If we play as well as we can, that's all I can ask."

Moorhead was 23-for-49 from the floor (47 percent) and wound up with an 11-for-15 night at the free throw line. Thief River Falls went 19-for-40 from the field (48 percent) and 5-for-8 at the line. The Prowlers out-rebounded the Spuds 24-15, but they also had more turnovers, 22-10.

Sparby, Gators top Lake of the Woods

Stefanie Sparby scored 11 of her game-high 23 points in the second quarter Thursday to jump-start the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River offense and spark the Gators past Lake of the Woods 58-51 in girls high school basketball at Baudette.

The two teams played to a 14-14 first quarter draw before Sparby fueled a Badger/Greenbush-Middle River run that produced a 32-18 halftime spread. The Gators opened up a 45-26 third quarter gap.

"Our guards really pressured their guards," said Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Tom Neibauer. "They weren't even getting close to the basket."

But the Bears' inside game, lead by Kimi Bragdon and Heather Hanson, did put together a fourth quarter offense that made it interesting down the stretch.

Tiffany Hagen and Missy Smith joined Sparby in double figures for the Gators with 16 and 12 points, respectively. Bragdon scored 14 points, Erin Beckstrand 12 and Hanson 10 for the Bears.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River shot 47 percent from the field (24/51) and made 9 of 14 free throws. Lake of the Woods had an 0-for-6 free throw night.

The win completed a 16-6 regular season for the Gators, who beat the Bears 46-45 in an earlier match-up.

Vettleson scored eight of her nine points in the first half as Red Lake County Central took a 14-7 first quarter lead and went up 22-10 at intermission. The Mustangs pulled away 43-21 in the third quarter when O'Neill and Chervestad combined for 19 of the 21 Red Lake County Central points.

O'Neill finished with 24 points and Chervestad had 17, along with 15 rebounds. Jenni Morinville also hit double figures on the boards with 11 rebounds.

It was the fourth straight win for the Mustangs, who haven't given up more than 37 points in their last three games.

Red Lake County Central was 25-for-57 from the field (44 percent) and 11-for-20 at the free throw line, with all the free throws coming in the second half. TRF Principal receives award

After a 40-year career in education, Glenn has thought ahead to retirement. He plans to work at a different type of business, do a little traveling and enjoy his favorite pastimes. He golfs and snowmobiles and enjoys singing and reading. "There's a lot of good literature, even children's literature, that I haven't yet had the opportunity to read," he said. He is also active in Kiwanis and at Our Saviour's Lutheran Church where he serves as a deacon and chairman of the building committee.

Simple words describe Glenn Espe, the educator and the man — easy-going, friendly, positive, caring and principled. One could not begin to guess how many lives he's touched in his long career.

In decribing Glenn and the 11 other recipients of the Distinguished Service Award, MESPA President Gary Sorenson said, "These men and women are outstanding educators, leaders in our profession, and are truly representative of the very best in Minnesota public schools."

If one of Minnesota's best could go back and do it all over again, would he do things differently? "I wouldn't change a thing", Principal Espe said. "It's been wonderful."

Bob and Marlene Hjeldness adopt foster child

by Kathl Carlson
Northern Watch Reporter

April Ann Hjeldness is a lucky little girl. Her parents, Bob and Marlene, are lucky, too. For Bob and Marlene, April is a dream come true, and had it not been for last year's flood, things might not have turned out the way they did.

While their mailing address is Oslo, the Hjeldness family lives on the North Dakota side of the Red River in Grand Forks county. Marlene is a nurse practitioner at Altru Hospital in Grand Forks, and Bob is manager of the Cenex stations in Oslo and Argyle. In addition to three-year-old April, Bob and Marlene are the foster parents of Dominic, who is four years old.

Marlene is a 1974 graduate of Lincoln High School and the daughter of Clara Olson and the late Clarence Olson, the seventh of their eight children. At the age of 19, she was diagnosed with lupus erythenatosus.

Marlene describes lupus as a disease of the autoimmune system. The autobodies of its victims attack the body's own tissue. Lupus typically strikes during the twenties and thirties, and female victims outnumber males nearly six to one. The cause remains unknown, and while there are a number of treatments to alleviate symptoms, there is no known cure. At the time she was diagnosed, women were advised not to have children.

In Marlene's case, her autobodies attacked and eventually destroyed her kidneys. She was living in Denver when she went into kidney failure. Her big family rallied around her. "When I woke up, they were all there. I thought I was dying," Marlene said.

At first Marlene did so well on dialysis that she wasn't even put on the waiting list for a new kidney, and when it was determined that she needed a transplant, she only waited one month. She had a kidney transplant in 1986. For reasons that cannot be explained, the lupus symptoms disappeared after the transplant.

Despite her illness, Marlene received a Bachelors degree from the University of North Dakota and pursued a career as a registered nurse. It was while she was in school in 1988 that she met Bob.

After five years, Marlene's body rejected the transplanted kidney. After a six month wait, she had a second transplant in 1992 on her birthday. She and Bob were married later that year.

Beginning in 1994, Marlene returned to the University of North Dakota on a part-time basis in pursuit of her Masters degree in nursing and training as a nurse practitioner. She returned to school full-time in 1996.

As busy as they were, the Hjeldness' wanted to share their lives with children. Marlene's brother had been involved in foster care for five years, and Bob and Marlene decided to check into it. They completed the necessary paperwork, were trained and went through the required home study. They were licensed as foster care providers in March of 1996.

April came to them on May 23, 1996 at the age of sixteen months. Marlene had just completed her education, and the couple was in the midst of building a house. While the shell of their new home had been built and moved from Vemdale, the interior was unfinished. The mobile home they had been living in on their property had sold, and Bob, Marlene and April moved into a small apartment with no air conditioning during what Marlene referred to as "the hottest May in history!"

When April came to them, she didn't care who took care of her. Left so often by her parents with so many different caretakers, the toddler had never formed an attachment to anyone. "April had never bonded with anyone," Marlene said.

It didn't take her long, however, to bond with her foster parents, and she went through the normal stage of not wanting them out of her sight and crying when left in the care of others. That stage passed as she became secure in the knowledge that Marlene or Bob would return for her.

Dominic joined the Hjeldness family in January of 1997. He is of Native American heritage and is one of eight children.

The Hjeldness home is about 20 miles from Grand Forks where Marlene practices at Altru Hospital with Dr. Phillip Mann, a nephrologist. Dr. Mann was Marlene's doctor during her bout with kidney disease. She works from 8 a.m. until they are done for the day, usually around 5 p.m., and she is on call every fifth weekend.

The children are cared for at a home-based day care in Grand Forks, and Dominic attends school through the Headstart program.

Because of the multiple snowstorms last year, commuting was often difficult. "It seems like I had about one day off a week," Marlene said.

April and Dominic came to Thief River Falls to stay with Marlene's sister Helen Anderson and her family on the Thursday before the big flood hit in May. Marlene remained at the hospital in Grand Forks for a week. With many of their patients on dialysis, Dr. Mann and Marlene had to make arrangements for them to have their treatments elsewhere. When the hospital closed and all of the patients had been transferred, Marlene joined the children in Thief River Falls by way of Fargo. For the three weeks she was here, she volunteered at the college where East Grand Forks nursing home patients were housed.

Concerned for the businesses he

Homark to show homes in GF Mar. 1

Red Lake Falls - Because the winter shows building in Crookston was not available, the fifth annual manufactured home show for Homark Company will take place on Sunday, March 1 at the South Forks Pavilion in Grand Forks.

While the show was put together for dealers, it is open to the public, and every home the company is showing for 1998 has a new floor plan.

In 1997, over 33 percent of new homes sold in the U.S. were manufactured homes. By 2005, the projection in this industry is that 50 percent of new homes sold will be manufactured. The Gazette

Wildcat breaks state steals record

Karlstad - Tryg Spilde, Tri-County Wildcat's senior guard, has broken the state record in steals. He gained five steals at a game in Grygla recently to reach 368 career steals, breaking the record of 363.

"He's earned it," said coach Kent Hanson. "To score alot of points is something that many athletes can do, but setting a steals record involves hard work and determination." North Star News

Scrap Iron Run still on for March 7

Baudette - As the snow melts away and the ice on the Rainy River gives way to flowing water, Baudette's annual Scrap Iron Run is still on for the first weekend in March.

The event encourages owners of snowmobiles of 1976 vintage or older to come out for an afternoon of fun. Awards are given to participants at the end of the day — People's Choice, Hard Luck Award and the Most Cosmetically Challenged sled. This year riders will shoot for the BB Award, an award whose description is being kept secret until the day of the ride. The Northern Light

Crookston woman authors book of WWII memories

Crookston - Vera McKenna vividly recalls growing up in Nazi occupied Czechoslovakia during World War II and has written a book titled Close Calls: Remembering World War II in Czechoslovakia.

McKenna was five years old when the war started and 11 when it ended. The book describes daily living during war in the capital city of Prague and on a farm where she spent the summers. The Crookston Daily Times

Council supports teen's dream of TV station in Bemidji

Bemidji - Bemidji City Council voted unanimously recently to sign a resolution of support for bringing a television station to Bemidji.

Sixteen-year-old Josh Peterson told the council members that he plans to go into broadcast journalism and that he doesn't want to have to leave his hometown to do it. The 10th-grader has built a model of the station he would like to see built in downtown Bemidji with a big window behind broadcasters, displaying the lakefront with Paul Bunyan and Babe. The Pioneer

Comment sought on project in Polk, Red Lake counties

St. Paul District of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is seeking comment on the Louisville/Parnell impoundment project being planned by the Red Lake Watershed District in Polk and Red Lake counties.

Considered to be a relatively small project to relieve some flooding in the area, the Louisville/Parnell impoundment would be located in the southeast quarter of Section 13 in Polk county and the southwest quarter of Section 18 in Red Lake county. The site is southeast of Euclid and southwest of Dorothy.

Total cost of the project including land acquisition, legal and engineering fees, is about $341,000.

The dam and affected wetland are both in Section 13. Water from the impoundment would eventually outlet into the Red Lake river about five miles east of Crookston.

According to the Corps of Engineers notice, the proposed project is a flood control impoundment and wetland mitigation bank intended to provide flood detention within the Red River drainage basin. It includes a 210-foot-long main dam to create an impoundment/wetland mitigation bank, two short inlet channels, upstream ditch plugs and raised culverts to create additional wetland behind an ancient beach ride, and a one and one-half mile long outlet channel to Judicial Ditch 60.

Objectives are to reduce local flood damage, provide gated storage to allow downstream drainage prior to release of the impoundment water, provide 10 percent more storage (400 acre feet) within the JD 60 watershed and create approximately 37 to 41 acres of a wetland mitigation bank for use by the Minnesota Department of Transportation.

Related to the project is a potential future spot removal of accumulated sediment and culvert replacement on JD 60 to allow flows from the impoundment to be released without downstream flooding. The ditch plug and dam would increase water level in the wetland by two to two and one-half feet, with an additional "bounce" of up to two feet of water during a 25-year precipitation event.

Interested parties are invited to submit written facts, arguments or objections to the Department of the Army, St. Paul District, Corps of Engineers, Regulatory Branch (Attention: 98-01808-IP-JJY), 190 Fifth Street East, St. Paul, MN 55101-1638.

Any person may also request, in writing, within the 30-day comment period, that a public hearing be held to consider the application. Such requests must state, in detail, the reasons for holding a public hearing. A request may be denied if substantive reasons are not provided or if there is otherwise no valid interest to be served.

According to the Corps of Engineers, the decision whether to issue a permit will be based on an evaluation of the probable impact, including cumulative impacts, of the proposed activity on the public interest.

Factors to be considered are conservation, economics, aesthetics, general environmental concerns, wetlands, cultural values, fish and wildlife values, flood hazards, floodplain values, land use, navigation, shoreline erosion and accretion, recreation, water supply and conservation, water quality, energy needs, safety, food and fiber production and, in general, the needs and welfare of the people.

The Louisville/Parnell project would be located two miles south and about two miles east of the much larger Parnell Impoundment in Polk county, on which work was started last summer, according to Red Lake Watershed District engineer Brad Johnson.

The Parnell project, in Sections 3 and 4 of Parnell township, will consist of east and west pools, with the east pool having a depth of about three feet and the west pool having a 20-foot dike on the west end. Construction cost on that project is about $1.6 million with total costs of over $2 million.

"Daughters of Africa" presented at Northland

Mixed Blood Theatre's production "Daughters of Africa" will be presented free for the public on Monday, March 2, at 12 noon in the college theater.

The play features Thomasina Taylor, now in her fifth season touring the show, accompanied by keyboardist Roland Wilson. The production is directed by Warren C. Bowles.

A music-driven history of African American women, "Daughters of Africa" features music made famous by Lena Horne, Bessie Smith, Billie Holiday, Aretha Franklin and others in a celebration of famous as well as unheralded African American women.

Women portrayed range from slave ship survivors to movie and stage stars. Included are Harriet Tubman, who conducted hundreds to freedom via the underground railroad; Elizabeth Freeman, whose legal struggle abolished slavery in Massachusetts; Madame C. J. Walker, America's first black millionairess; and many others.

The special presentation is being sponsored by Northland Community and Technical College as part of Women's History Month and Black History Month, and by the minority student services program of School District 564.

Caucus night next Tuesday

Political caucuses will take place Tuesday, March 3, throughout Minnesota. In Pennington county the Independent-Republican caucus will be at the Franklin middle school library and DFL caucuses at Northland Community and Technical College cafeteria and the Goodridge senior center. All start at 7 p.m.

Agricultural Disaster application approved by Pennington board

Pennington County Commissioners approved application for an administrative Agricultural Disaster Declaration at their board meeting Tuesday, February 24.

The disaster declaration is not a presidential disaster declaration but an administration declaration, said Howard Person, Minnesota Extension Agent.

The declaration would make available emergency loans through the Agriculture Department of Consolidated Farm Service Agency, said Glenn Schafer.

Schafer explained that the declaration is for production losses due to excessive moisture and crop disease experienced during the 1997 growing season. Schafer wasn't sure what kind of dollar loss Pennington county farmers experienced last year, but estimates place the loss at about 35 percent county wide.

Schafer said all of the counties in Northwest Minnesota with the exception of Roseau county have applied for the disaster declaration.

He explained the declaration would come from the state and from the United States Secretary of Agriculture. To obtain the declaration, the application had to come from the FSA and county board. FSA, he said, had applied for the declaration about two weeks ago and now the county board has applied for the declaration. Schafer expects to hear whether the application was approved by the end of next week.

In the past, he said, the declaration would have opened a number of programs to producers. All that has changed now. The only thing available, as a result of the declaration, will be low interest (3.75 percent) emergency loans.

Schafer said some farmers in the county have already expressed interest in the low interest emergency loans available through the program. He said he expects increasing interest. To be eligible for the loan, farmers must show a loss of at least 30 percent.

Young Authors conference in TRF March 10-11

"Personal Best Team Player" is the theme of this year's Young Authors conference in Thief River Falls March 10-11. The event, which is sponsored by the Northwest Service Cooperative and held at Northland Community and Technical College, is expected to bring several well-known authors, and hundreds of children from throughout the region to Thief River Falls.

Over 260 children, grades 5-8 will participate in the event each day, according to organizers. Authors scheduled to visit with the children include: Robin Silverman, a free-lance writer and author; Holly Ristau, a librarian and story teller; Will Weaver, fiction writer, coach and teacher; William Durbin, writer and teacher; Rick Ponzio, fiction writer, playwright, storyteller, actor and educator; Mattie Clark, an award-winning folklorist; John Coy, author of Night Driving, and writing specialist; Faythe Dyrud Thureen, writer and teacher; David LaRochelle, author and illustrator; Mary Casanova, award winning author of Moose Tracks, and many other books, and Gretchen Beito, local writer and historian.

After introductions, break-out sessions will be held. During the break-out sessions students will be able to visit with the authors, and learn from their experiences. Time has also been set aside for participants to attend a bookfair and get autographs from the authors.

Authors and Presentations

Mattie Clark will explore the richness of the African-American folklore. Examine the proverbs of the grandmother and the secrets in those proverbs that were passed on from generation to generation. Students will find out how those secrets will help them be their personal best and a team player as well.

John Coy, author of Night Driving, will teach students that seeing clearly is an essential aspect of writing well. Memories will be explored paying attention to the details that make stories richer.

Faythe Dyrud Thureen will help students examine connections between fictional characters and conflict and create their own exciting yet realist characters.

David LaRochelle, author and illustrator of 20 books for children and families, will demonstrate the stages of creating a children's picture book. He will also show his illustrator's portfolio and give the participants specific tips that they can use in creating their own illustrations.

Mary Casanova, award winning author of Moose Tracks, Riot, and most recently Wolf Shadows, will given students a chance to turn a pocketful of pebbles — your own experiences — into stories.

Gretchen Beito, local author and historian most notably author of

Beltrami residents can't agree on garbage plan

Grygla - About 50 Grygla area residents who live in Beltrami County met recently to discuss solid waste services in the county. Residents who live near and north of Grygla are upset about the current system which requires them to bring their garbage to a compactor located at Fourtown. For some, that amounts to a round trip of over 50 miles.

The current system which includes stationed compactors in five locations in the county replaces a number of unsupervised dumpsters scattered around the townships. The Grygla Eagl

SOUPÇON

Sherry LaCoursiere

All of today's recipes use regular-sized canned soup, so stock up on it and get ready.

Here's a dish that's just as quick as those helping hamburger ones, and it's made from scratch:

HE-MAN SPANISH RICE
1 pound ground beef
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 large clove garlic, minced
1 can condensed tomato soup
1 1/2 cups water
1 1/2 cups quick cooking rice, uncooked
1 tablespoon Worcestershire
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

In skillet, cook beef, green pepper, onion with garlic until vegetables are tender. Stir to separate meat.

Add remaining ingredients, cover and cook over low heat for 10 minutes, until liquid is absorbed. Stir occasionally.

This sounds so simple and so good - I would cook some carrots and potatoes around it, and other veggies, like my favorite parsnips:

YANKEE POT ROAST
3 to 4 pound beef pot roast
1 can condensed onion soup
1/4 cup water
2 to 4 tablespoons flour

In large Dutch oven or similar pan, brown beef in shortening or oil. Pour off fat.

Add soup, cover, and cook over low heat 2 1/2 to 3 hours or until meat is tender. Stir occasionally.

Gradually blend water into flour until smooth and slowly stir into sauce in pan. Cook, stirring, until thickened.

I remember eating Western sandwiches when I was little, but I still haven't been able to come up with a recipe that tastes like they did then. They have to be served with dill pickles, though:

WESTERN BURGERS
1/2 cup chopped cooked ham
1/4 cup coarsely chopped green pepper
1/4 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter
1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
6 eggs, slightly beaten
Dash of pepper
6 hamburger buns, split and toasted

In skillet, brown ham and cook green pepper and onion in butter until tender.

Blend soup, eggs and pepper and add to ham mixture. Cook over low heat.

As mixture begins to set around edges, gently lift cooked portions with large turner so that thin, uncooked portions can flow to the bottom. Continue gently lifting cooked portions until eggs are completely set, but still moist. Serve on buns.

Here's a gentle little Chinese soup that would be great for a light lunch or a perfect first course for your next fancy meal:

EGG DROP SOUP
(DON FAR TUNG)
2 cans condensed beef broth
2 soup cans water
1 cup cooked peas
1/4 cup thinly sliced green onions
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1 egg, slightly beaten

In saucepan, combine all ingredients except egg. Bring to boil.

Gradually pour egg into simmering soup, stirring gently until egg is set. Serve immediately.

And for dessert - a delicious spicy cake - would you believe - made with more soup:

TOMATO SOUP CAKE
2 1/4 cups cake flour or 2 cups regular flour
1 1/3 cups sugar
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon soda
1 1/2 teaspoons allspice
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
1 can condensed tomato soup
1/2 cup shortening
2 eggs
1/4 cup water

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Generously grease and flour 2 round layer pans or a 9x13 inch pan.

Measure dry ingredients into large bowl. Add soup and shortening and beat at low speed of mixer for 2 minutes, scraping constantly.

Add eggs and water and beat 2 minutes more, scraping frequently.

Pour into pans and bake 35 to 40 minutes. Let stand in pans for 10 minutes, then remove to rack to cool. Frost with cream cheese frosting or favorite white frosting.

Variations of cake: After mixing, fold in 1 cup chopped nuts or 1 cup raisins, bake 35-40 minutes, or fold in 1 cup of chopped nuts and 1 cup of dates and bake 40-45 minutes.

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING
2 (3 ounces each) packages softened cream cheese
1 tablespoon milk
1 pound sifted confectioner's sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Blend cream cheese and milk. Add powder sugar and blend well, then add vanilla and mix. Frost completely cooled cake.

Newfolden fire department to purchase radios

With a donation of $875 received from Great Lakes Gas Transmission Company, the Newfolden Volunteer Fire Department will purchase two portable two-way radios.

Fire Chief Keith Rud accepted the donation Monday evening from Bob Giffen, superintendent of the Great Lakes pumping station located 10 miles south of Newfolden in the area served by the Newfolden fire department.

"The radios will be used by firefighters at fire scenes to communicate with one another and with the base station," Chief Rud said. "They will enhance firefighting efficiency and safety, benefitting property owners, area residents and firefighters alike. The department thanks Mr. Giffen and Great Lakes for this important donation to our department and community."

Post Mortem On The Nagano Winter Olympics

In the puff of a snowboarder's joint, the 1998 Winter Olympic Games at Nagano, Japan, have come and gone. And they appeared once again to not have lived up to the considerable media hype, especially the men's hockey portion of the event.

Battling the effects of the flu bug and being homebound during much of the Olympics, we spent a number of waking hours blinking through half-open eyes at television coverage of the Olympics. It was evident throughout the games that the CBC of Canada was far superior in its coverage to CBS in the United States.

There were a few flashes again in this year's Winter Olympic Games of what has been alluring about these sporting contests over history. There were the superlative efforts of unlikely winners, the failure of favorites and, in some cases, the ability of favorites to live up to expectations— their own and those of others.

Perhaps no single event saved the 1998 Olympics from being one of the most lack-lustre in history as much as the women's figure-skating championship. The flawless and exuberant performance of 15-year-old Tara Lipinski in winning the gold medal in that event renewed faith in the Olympics as being something of which dreams are made.

Polished, prepared and professional as Lipinski was, she let her emotions flow as she completed challenge after challenge in her long program with a joyous girlish grin. And when the music ended, the flowers descended and the judges' scores ascended, her shriek was an uninhibited expression of pure excitement. This, at last, was what Olympic victory was all about.

The U.S. women's hockey team made an indelible mark on Olympic history by winning the first gold medal ever in that event. Even that golden moment was tarnished earlier following a preliminary round game when one of the U.S. players made an uncalled for remark to one of the Canadian team members.

Entrance of players from the National Hockey League into the men's hockey portion of the Games sucked most of the enthusiasm and a lot of the interest out of that area of competition. No longer could a nation watch its top amateur players come together with high hopes for another miracle. Instead, the professionals took over with great fanfare and little humility and [illegible] themselves and their country with uninspired play and post-elimination vandalism.

It was appropriate, we believe, that the team with the fewest NHL players on its roster won the gold medal. The Czech Republic bested Russia in the gold medal game with a 1-0 score by playing a total team game with a determined effort from the opening faceoff. The Czechs hustled, they were first to the puck, they cleared their zone efficiently and they smothered the Russian offense.

It was also appropriate, we believe, that the U.S. and Canadian teams were both washed out of medals of any color at all. The U.S. press had made it a foregone conclusion that this country's NHL elite would contend for gold, while the Canadian press acknowledged that anything less than a gold medal for Team Canada would be a national catastrophe.

No Olympics would be complete without some controversy, and this was provided at the Nagano games by Canadian snowboard slalom champion Ross Rebagliati and his positive test for marijuana and the rigged block judging in the ice dance program. Rebagliati was allowed to keep his medal through a three-member commission's decision. The acknowledged inequities in the ice dance judging remains unresolved.

There were redeeming high points, such as the record-smashing performances in speed skating; the recovery of downhill skier Hermann Maier from a spectacular crash to win two gold medals in later events; and the unbelievably gritty performance of Canadian figure skater Elvis Stojko who won a silver medal despite skating with the excruciating pain of a severe groin injury.

It isn't difficult to understand who inspired Stojko's first name, but what set of parents would name their little daughter Picabo (pronounced peek-a-boo) as the Street family did? The name of this gold medal skier sounds like an avenue of peep show houses.

And just think—in only four years it will happen all over again at Salt Lake City, Utah. Maybe by then some more "new" sports can be added—hotdog billiards or slalom bowling—to take the pressure off such venerable activities as snowboarding and aerial skiing. And you can bet the pros will be back on the hockey ice again.

We can hardly wait.

Thanks To Dave, Kathi And Mike

As noted in passing in the above editorial, the editor missed a full week of work last week while doing battle with the flu bug—and mostly losing. It was the most extended period in nearly 44 years of employment that I have ever been off the job for illness or injury, and the most consecutive days off the job for any reason, vacation or otherwise.

Having been blessed with generally good health and good luck and the uncanny ability to have brief sickness strike on weekends, I am not [illegible] to leaving my co-workers in the position of having to do my work.

I want to publicly thank associate editor Dave Hill, reporter Kathi Carlson and sports editor Mike Lundgren for extra effort during my absence. Dave was especially busy in trying to be two people in two positions at one time.

Like so many others we have heard about, I am regaining strength and stamina, but not nearly fast enough. But it was good to have good people step up to the task at hand when the need was there. Once again, my thanks.

Johnston herd leads DHIA report for Dec., 1997

Dairy herd of Todd and Jay Johnston at Angus led the Red Lake -Pennington Dairy Herd Improvement Association for the month of December, 1997, according to Randy and Margaret Peterson, supervisors for the association.

The Johnston herd of 63 cows, 86 percent of which was in milk, averaged 72 pounds of milk, 2.4 pounds of butterfat and 2.3 pounds of protein.

In second place was the Wayne Vettleson herd of Oklee, which is milked three times a day. The herd of 145 cows, 83 percent of which was in milk, averaged 64 pounds of milk, 2.5 pounds of butterfat and 2.0 pounds of protein.

Third place herd was the small cow herd of the Northwest Agricultural Experiment Station at Crookston. Eighty-five percent of the 60-cow herd was in milk and averaged 61 pounds of milk, 2.3 pounds of butterfat and 2.1 pounds of protein.

Tom and Diane Kolstoe of Oklee had the fourth place herd. Eighty-nine percent of the 44-cow herd was in milk and averaged 61 pounds of milk, 2.1 pounds of butterfat and 1.8 pounds of protein.

Beyer Farms of Red Lake Falls was in fifth place. Eighty-eight percent of the 67-cow herd was in milk and averaged 58 pounds of milk, 1.9 pounds of butterfat and 1.8 pounds of protein.

Other herds in order in the top 15 included the following with number of cows in the herd, percentage in milk, pounds of milk, butterfat and protein listed respectively.

Walter Bros. Farm, 211, 86%, 57, 2.2 and 1.8; Gerald and Loretta Visser, 64, 92%, 56, 2.1 and 1.8; Northwest Agricultural Experiment Station (large cow herd), 52, 81%, 54, 2.2 and 1.8; Wayne Nelson, 41, 90%, 54, 1.9 and 1.9; and Bob Schindler, 62, 76%, 54, 1.9 and 1.7;

Also E. Duane and Faith Knott, 91, 86%, 53, 2.0 and 1.6; Tom Willett, 54, 81%, 53, 1.8 and 1.6; Greg Zak, 73, 85%, 52, 2.0 and 1.7; Kevin and Beth Roppe, 35, 91%, 51, 2.0 and 1.6 (tie); Leonard and Marge Geske, 32, 94%, 51, 2.0 and 1.6 (tie); Gary and Grant Gullekson, 59, 78%, 51, 1.8 and 1.5 (tie); and Wesley Bring, 35, 89%, 51, 1.6 and 1.6 (tie).

The supervisors point out that herd averages are adversely affected by the number of dry cows since the amount of product is averaged over all cows in the herd to give the dairyman a record of the herd's earning power for the month.

Eagles handle MCC girls in Sub-Section 31A semifinal game

Marshall County Central threw a first half scare into Red Lake Falls before the Jodi Purath-led Eagles pulled away from the upset-minded Nordics in the second half to win 70-49 in the Sub-Section 31A girls high school basketball tournament semifinals at the University of Minnesota-Crookston.

The 4-19 Nordics led the 20-2 Eagles, ranked No. 2 in the Class A state polls, 10-8 at the end of the first quarter and were down just 27-25 at halftime. But Purath, a 5-9 senior playing the post, scored 28 of her game-high 38 points in the second half as the Eagles opened up a 48-36 third quarter spread.

"The girls came out ready to play," said Marshall County Central coach Alice Dahl. "They played well, but we just could not stop Purath. We tried several different girls on her, but I've never seen moves like that."

Miki Waterworth scored 15 points and Kristi Kilen had 10 for the Nordics.

Sub-Section 32A girls high school basketball...

Gators knock off Wolfpack

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River forced 20 Kittson Central turnovers to build a lead, then hit free throws down the stretch to stay in front Thursday as the Gators knocked off the Wolfpack 54-44 in the Sub-Section 32A girls high school basketball tournament semifinals played at Northland Community and Technical College.

Mistakes plagued Kittson Central from the start. The Wolfpack turned it over 14 times in the first half, and seven of those came in the first five minutes, setting the tone for the night.

"Our pressure defense forced some turnovers," noted Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Tom Neibauer. "That's the way we've played all year."

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River never trailed Kittson Central did gain an early-game tie at 6-6, but a free throw by Kelsey Foldesi was followed by back-to-back three-point plays by Foldesi and Tiffany Hagen to give the Gators a 13-6 lead. It was 18-11 at the end of the first quarter.

Kittson Central was still within 22-18 when Emily Dahl hit a wide-open 12-foot jumper shot with 5:51 left in the second quarter, but the Wolfpack picked up only a single free throw the rest of the half and trailed 27-19 at intermission.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River took charge when Kara Kuznia banged one off the glass, then Melissa Smith knocked down a free throw and a basket on the inside for a 27-18 spread before Jessy Webster finally ended a 5:48 Kittson Central scoreless spell with a free throw in the final seconds of the half.

Twice the Wolfpack made second half comebacks, but could not overtake the Gators. A 10-point Badger/Greenbush-Middle River lead was chopped to 35-31 when Webster scored on a rebound with 13.2 seconds left in the third quarter.

But The Gators met the challenge by opening the final period with a 7-0 run as Hagen went through the middle, Stefanie Sparby hit one from the corner and Smith, who was often open underneath to finish off the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River press-breaker, completed a three-point play with a drive and a free throw.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River had a 46-33 cushion with 4:59 remaining following back-to-back baskets underneath by Smith.

That's when the second Kittson Central rally kicked in as Darcey Lundberg connected from the side, Jamie Visness hit a three-point shot and Jana Lindegard scored on a drive as the 13-point gap closed to 46-40 with 2:30 still to play.

However, a clock-eating Badger/Greenbush-Middle River delay game worked to perfection, drawing fouls and leading to an 8-for-8 showing at the free throw line over the final 1:31.

"That was kind of early to go into a full delay game," admitted Neibauer. "But the kids did a nice job with it. We want the ball in the hands of our best free throw shooters and make them foul us."

And that's exactly what happened as Sparby and Kuznia both hit two sets of free throws to make it a double-digit spread.

"We got real strong games from Stefanie and Kara, and Melissa played her best game of the year," said Neibauer. "We went to her (Smith) underneath and she came through for us."

Kuznia finished with 16 points, Smith 14 and Sparby 13 for the winners. Freshman Jamie Visness came off the bench to lead Kittson Central with 10 points.

The Gators shot 47 percent from the field (18/38) and had a game-winning 17-for-21 night at the free throw line. The Wolfpack shot 42 percent from the floor (19/45) and had a quiet 3-for-6 free throw game. Kittson Central out-rebounded Badger/Greenbush-Middle River 23-21, but the 20-12 high figure in the turnover department erased edge on the boards.

The two teams split a pair of regular season, with Kittson Central winning the most recent encounter 49-39.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River is 17-6.

Mustangs advance in 30A

Red Lake County Central girls grabbed an early lead, held off a second half Win-E-Mac comeback and claimed a 64-45 Sub-Section 30A girls high school basketball tournament semifinal win Thursday at Crookston High School.

The Mustangs, who lost a 53-51 overtime decision to the Patriots earlier this month, were in charge 19-9 at the end of the first quarter, and they maintained a 30-19 halftime spread. It was a 46-27 game before Win-E-Mac closed the third quarter with an 11-0 run that suddenly produced a gym full of scoreboard-watching.

However, Angie Chervestad opened the fourth quarter with a jump shot that put an end to the comeback and breathed new life into the Mustangs, who coasted home with an easy win.

"We played some pretty good defense in the first half," reported Red Lake County Central coach Rick Koivisto. "The only real lapse we had was at the end of the third quarter, but Angie's basket got us going again."

Katie O'Neill scored 22 points to lead the winners, while Chervestad turned in a 15-point, 11-rebound game and Jenni Morinville added 11 rebounds as the Mustangs beat the Patriots on the boards 40-19. Nicki Hole led Win-E-Mac with 17 points.

Red Lake County Central went 25-for-56 from the field (45 percent) and 12-for-16 at the free throw line. Win-E-Mac was 18-for-59 from the floor (31 percent) and 8-for-15 at the line. The Patriots topped the turnover charts 20-16.

The Mustangs are 16-7.

Wolverines beaten by Eagles

Chrissy Benson scored 22 points to lead East Grand Forks Sacred Heart to a 56-49 Thursday Sub-Section 31A girls high school basketball tournament semifinal win over Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke at the University of Minnesota-Crookston.

The Eagles, who lost to the Wolverines by a 70-52 margin two weeks earlier, trailed 17-12 at the end of the first quarter, but went ahead 25-24 at halftime and held on to that one-point through three quarters, 37-36.

"In the second half, they went to a 2-3 zone and packed the inside," explained Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke coach Mike Gast. "We needed to hit the outside shot and just couldn't do it."

And even with a 31-25 rebound edge, the Wolverines weren't able to speed up the game. "We didn't get our running game going, and that's our bread-and-butter," pointed out Gast. "We just didn't rise to the occasion. It was a very disappointing loss."

The Wolverines were 20-for-54 from the field (37 percent) and 9-for-17 at the free throw line. The Eagles went 19-for-48 from the floor (40 percent) and 15-for-21 at the line.

Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke fell to 11-12 with the loss.

Prowlers edge Roseau 50-49

Thief River Falls overcame an 11-point third quarter deficit Tuesday en route to a 50-49 boys high school basketball win at Roseau.

It was just the fourth win against 17 losses for the Prowlers, who led 13-12 at the end of the first quarter, fell behind 30-24 at halftime and trailed the 15-6 Rams 42-37 heading into the final quarter.

Thief River Falls won it with a strong defensive effort down the stretch that limited the Rams to a single field goal over the final 5 1/2 minutes.

The Prowlers could have padded a one-point lead in the final minute, but they missed the front end of two bonus free throw situations - the first with 33 seconds to play and the second with 12 seconds to go.

Roseau controlled the rebound on the second Thief River Falls miss and had a shot for a win at the buzzer, but it was off the mark.

Matt Myers scored 13 points and Kyle Waterworth had 11 for the Prowlers, who were 21-for-60 from the field (35 percent) and 6-for-12 at the free throw line. Tristan Sjaaheim, Isaac Lang and Justin Kjos all had 14-point games for the Rams, who went 15-for-22 at the line.

It was the third win in the last four games for the Prowlers, who closed out the regular season Friday at Detroit Lakes. They won just one of their first 17 starts.

MCC girls beat Ponies in 31A

The halftime speech was short and to the point, according to Marshall County Central coach Alice Dahl, whose team trailed Warren-Alvarado 24-17 at intermission of their Sub-Section 31A girls high school basketball tournament match-up at Northland Community and Technical College.

"I told them they had to play defense and start putting the ball in the hoop, or the season was going to be over," said Dahl.

The Nordics responded by outscoring the Ponies 21-13 in the second half to come out a 38-37 winner.

It was just the fourth win of the 1997-98 season for the Nordics. One of their 19 regular season losses came at the hands of the Ponies, 58-50, two weeks earlier.

"The kids have worked hard all year," pointed out Dahl, "and they were finally rewarded for their effort."

Marshall County Central was within 28-27 at the close of the third quarter. The Nordics were still down one, 37-36, with 18 seconds to play when Mandi Blawat came up with a steal. A time-out call with 11 seconds to play was promptly followed by an Alicia Halvorson basket – the only points of the night for the eighth grader.

Warren-Alvarado-Oslo still had 8.1 seconds to work with and put up the final shot, but it was off the mark.

Senior Miki Waterworth scored 12 points and grabbed 9 rebounds for the Nordics, while sophomore Kristi Kilen had a 10-point, 14-rebound game. Katie Loeslie and Roxanne Adrian led the Ponies with 14 and 11 points, respectively.

Marshall County Central didn't shoot well in the first half, noted Dahl, but the Nordics' second half gave them a 49 percent 17-for-35 shooting figure for the night. Warren-Alvarado-Oslo shot only 33 percent (16/48). The Nordics went 6-for-14 at the free throw line, where the Ponies were 3-for-4.

Warren-Alvarado-Oslo finished with a 41-39 edge on the boards, which included 20 offensive rebounds, and Marshall County Central topped the turnover charts 16-9.

Goodridge regular season ends with victory over Bears

Goodridge finished its 1997-98 boys high school basketball season with a win Tuesday – a 59-51 road victory over Clearbrook-Gonvick.

It was a 9-13 finish for the Huskies, who lost a 64-47 early-season decision to the Bears.

Clearbrook-Gonvick opened with a 14-11 first quarter lead, but Goodridge went ahead 26-24 at halftime and had a 42-37 third quarter advantage. It was a four-point game midway through the final period when a lay-up by Jared Eidelbes capped a patient, shot-searching possession by the Huskies, who carried the momentum to the end.

"We started out with a zone in the first quarter and they were beating it," explained Goodridge coach Eric Mickelson. "We switched to a man-to-man, and played it pretty aggressive."

The defensive change worked. And 50 percent 22-for-44 shooting from two-point range kept the Goodridge offense going. "We took some good shots, and they went in," noted Mickelson.

Ben Hanson and Jim Scheef both had a double-double outing for the Huskies – Hanson with 19 points and 16 rebounds, Scheef with 11 points and 10 rebounds. Eidelbes added 15 points to the Goodridge total and Chad Johnson contributed 11 rebounds as the Huskies beat the Bears on the boards 50-35.

Seth Dorman scored 14 points to lead Clearbrook-Gonvick. The Bears, who missed a number of shots from around the basket, struggled through a 29 percent 19-for-66 shooting performance.

At the free throw line, the Huskies were 15-for-24 and the Bears went 9-for-16. Goodridge topped the turnover charts 15-14.

Northland students visit legislature

Six student senate members at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls recently visited the Minnesota state legislature at the State Capitol in St Paul

Student senators Stacy Narlock, Erica Altepeter and Cami Sorenson —all graduates of Lincoln high school in Thief River Falls—and Carrie Cameron, Devin Grugal and Jennifer Gustafson, all of Warroad, were accompanied on the trip by student senate advisor Rick Nelson

While in St. Paul, the group participated in a student rally, visited area legislators, testified before the higher education budget committee and received a close-up view of the state's political process.

Jenny Gustafson, a 1996 Warroad high school graduate, testified before Sen. LeRoy Stumpf's higher education committee. She addressed the need for the capital bonding improvements at Northland to complete the consolidation of what was once two separate colleges.

While Gustafson was testifying before the committee, President Orley Gunderson of NCTC contributed to the discussion via interactive television from the Northland campus—the first time this has been done. According to Nelson and Dr. Gunderson, Gustafson's presentation was well received by the committee

Northland students also had the opportunity to visit with Sen. LeRoy Stumpf, Sen. Jerry Janezich, Speaker of the House Phil Carruthers, Rep. Jim Tunheim, Rep. Bernie Leider, Rep. Tim Finseth and Rep. Mary Jo McGuire.

Members of the NCTC student senate have also been very active on local issues that affect student life programming on campus, Nelson said.

"The members from Thief River Falls and Warroad have played a key role in making Northland a better place to get a quality education and have an enjoyable experience," he said. "It's great to have students like these who understand the importance of being politically active locally and on the state level."

The student trip to St. Paul was sponsored by Northland Senate and the Minnesota Community College Association.

Bob and Marlene Hjeldness adopt foster child

manages, Bob remained on the dike side of the river near Oslo and stayed at the home of a friend. On the weekends, he boated across the river, borrowed a pickup and drove to Thief River Falls to visit his family.

After a month, Bob, Marlene and the children returned to their home. An aerial photograph taken during the flood showed their house, located one and one-half miles from the Red River, totally surrounded by flood waters. Their home is built on a crawl space, and water was within about 18 inches of the main floor. Sugar beets and other debris were everywhere, and the landscaping planned for last summer didn't get done because it took so long for everything to dry out.

April's biological parents were displaced by the flood and relocated in Minot, ND with the youngest of their four children. April had two older siblings who were also in foster care. For people who didn't quite have it all together, the flood made a bad situation worse, and in June, they requested that the foster parents of their three children adopt them.

The Hjeldness' were thrilled, and on December 31, 1997, Bob, Marlene, April and Dominic and the couple's extended families gathered at the Grand Forks Court House. The adoption was final, and little April became their daughter. Photographs reveal a very happy day.

April, who turned three in January, is a beautiful child. Her dark brown eyes are like bottomless pools and the ends of her thick, sandy brown hair turn under just right.

She is friendly, and as she busied herself with a set of magnetic paper dolls, she didn't hesitate to describe the various colors and clothing items. April's language skills and quick wit showed a bright, happy child.

Dominic also thrives in the Hjeldness home but is expected to eventually be returned to his biological parents. Bob expressed concern that when the time comes, Dominic not simply disappear from their home. The two children are like siblings, playing together and engaging in an occasional squabble.

Bob and Marlene are both happy about a recently enacted law that allows children to be in foster care for no more than 15 months. Either biological parents work out the problems that resulted in the foster care situation so that their child can be returned to them or they are asked to relinquish their parental rights. This law will keep children from being tied up in the foster care system for what sometimes is many years.

Marlene and Bob are sensitive to April's biological family. A photograph album that Marlene has put together for April includes a picture of her and her older sister, adopted by a family nearby, making cookies together at the Hjeldness home before Christmas. Pictures have also been exchanged with her biological parents in Minot.

There is still some work to be done on Bob and Marlene's house. A large entry with lots of closet and storage space and a big family room remain to be finished, and there's some siding that needs to be hung on the exterior of the addition. The work awaits the return of a busy local carpenter.

While there are always things to do, the interior of the main dwelling appears finished. Its warm, comfortable atmosphere includes the evidence of children wherever one looks. A pair of cocker spaniels wander about demading their share of attention.

Observing the happy household, one would never guess that anyone had ever been sick or that the children living there had not been loved and showered with attention from the moment they were born.

February 8th was another special day as the Hjeldness' along with their extended families gathered for April's baptism at Zion Lutheran Church in Oslo. Her sponsors were her teenage cousins, Keith and Kyle Anderson and Katie Olson of Thief River Falls.

When the flood waters receded, little April was the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow for Bob and Marlene Hjeldness, or as Marlene says, "April was the answer to our prayers."

Ag surveys combined to save farmers time

Within the same time frame that the 1997 Census of Agriculture is being conducted, the National Agricultural Statistics Service is also conducting the nationwide Agricultural, Resource Management Study.

The statistics service says it had designed a questionnaire that combines these two studies and will take considerably less time than it would to complete the surveys separately.

Both are comprehensive studies which ask detailed information about agricultural operations in order to provide valuable information that producers, policy makers and analysts depend on to make well-informed decisions for the agricultural community.

In Minnesota, about 850 producers will have input into those decisions through the integrated Agricultural Resource Management Study conducted during February and March. Information obtained from these producers will help show how agriculture is doing as a whole, how the various types of enterprises within agriculture are performing, and whether some sectors are more financially vulnerable than others.

"Only through information gathered from farm operators can reliable, objective facts be merged into data used in many ways that benefit the local, state and national agricultural sector," states Michael Hunst, state statistician.

Producers selected to participate have been notified by letter. Interviewers representing the Minnesota Agricultural Statistics Service will visit them, at the farm operator's convenience, to complete their reports.

"This survey is the only barometer available that each year measures the economic well-being of our farms," Hunst added. "It is very important to measure these changes that take place in production and prices because the situation in agriculture changes so rapidly."

The Agricultural Resource Management Study is the only study used to examine the changing role of farm and off-farm employment among family farms and ranches. The study will also help evaluate the impact of adverse weather on 1997 producers' net income and cash flow.

Ag census gives record of trends

Census of agriculture conducted every five years provides a record of trends and changes in agriculture in states and counties as well as the nation. Report forms for the 1997 census are due on February 2.

Previous census reports, for instance, show the decline in number of farms in Minnesota, how agricultural income is divided and value of products sold.

The 1992 census of agriculture shows that there were 75,079 farms in Minnesota, that total value of agricultural products sold was $6,4771,004,000, and that the total value included $3,054,747,000 (47.2%) from crops (including nursery and greenhouse crops) and $3,422,257,000 (52.8%) came from livestock, poultry and their products.

In 1959 there were nearly twice as many farms in Minnesota as there were in 1992 (145,662 in 1959). Only once during that period did the farm numbers cease to decline—an increase from 98,537 to 98,671 from 1974 to 1978.

Farm production in 1959 was valued at $1,211,750,000 or about one-sixth (18.6%) of the 1992 total. Value of agricultural products sold increased each census period from 1959 to 1992 with the exception of the 1982 to 1987 period when the total fell by $263 million from $5,939,629,000 to $5,676,376,000.

In 1992 Minnesota had 25,666,944 acres of land in farms, of which 83.3% was cropland, 3.8% pastureland, 7.6% woodland and 5.3% other land.

Compilation of survey reports from the 1997 census will provide additional comparisons with prior years.

One Possible Effect of El Nino: Early Planting

There's been no shortage of speculation about El Nino, especially after the erratic weather that has resulted in snow in some areas of the South this winter, and most recently, the monsoon-like conditions on both coasts.

So far, we in the Northern Plains have been lucky. But it's hard for Northern Plains farmers not to speculate about how El Nino may affect grain prices or crops this summer.

After the 1982-83 El Nino, the most recent that compares in scope to the current warming pattern, the North Dakota wheat crop was hurt by drought. On the other hand, yields in areas of Minnesota that year were quite good. This kind of localized effect makes predicting next year's crop season difficult.

Typically, the cooling phase that occurs after El Nino peaks (usually in December or January) will determine the weather pattern's effect on the subsequent growing season.

Mark Seeley, climatologist at the University of Minnesota, says El Nino's influence on our growing season may come in more indirect ways, such as a less-frozen soil profile, which may allow for an earlier start on planting– almost an anomaly given the late start of the last few planting seasons.

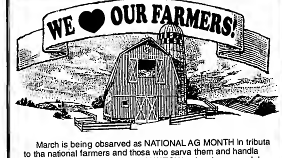
Seeley will discuss possible effects more in depth in his presentation, "El Nino or El Nonsense, How the Next Growing Season May Be Affected," at 10 a.m. March 5, at the Small Grains Institute, South Forks Pavilion, Grand Forks, N.D.

Weed, Insect Control Tips For Small Grains

Research has shown that herbicides generally are not needed for green and yellow foxtail control in small grains if the small grain is well established before the foxtail emerges, according to the University of Minnesota Extension Service.

However, early spring seeding does not help to reduce many cool season annual weed problems, such as wild oats. Research has shown that barley is more competitive with wild oats and some broadleaf weeds than the other small grains. Seeding barley on fields that have heavy weed infestations may help reduce the cost of controlling these weeds by taking advantage of the competitiveness of barley. Semidwarf spring wheats are less competitive with weeds than tall varieties.

When it comes to insect problems, economically-sound management involves: 1) using overall good production practices, 2) knowing which insects pose serious economic threat, 3) recognizing high risk situations, and 4) using sound, cost effective management practices.



During the crop season, it is of utmost importance to examine the field weekly or, better yet, twice weekly. It may even be profitable to hire this done. In all cases when an insect pest is found, the decision as to what may be needed is based on how much potential damage will be prevented in dollar value against the cost of prevention. The grower should always expect to make some profit above control costs. If the grower is unsure about this decision advice should be sought from a neutral professional such as a county agricultural agent or consultant.

Rich Zollinger, North Dakota State University extension weed specialist; and Ian MacRae, U of M entomologist, will preview which weeds and insects to scout in 1998, at 11:30 a.m. March 4, the first day of the Small Grains Institute, at the South Forks Pavilion in Grand Forks, N.D.

Crops to Consider in a Small Grains Rotation

Michael Peel, NDSU extension small grains specialist, has prepared a crop rotation table that includes four groups of crops which can be used in designing a rotation.

The crops are grouped based on their susceptibility to disease. For this reason crops in a particular group should not follow each other in rotation. This is of greatest concern where disease problems are the most prevalent.

There are many crops adapted for production in North Dakota and some surrounding regions. Rotational benefits are maximized when crops from a common group do not follow each other in a rotation. A crop can be substituted for one from the same crop group in a rotation without destroying rotational benefits. Including warm and cool season crops in a rotation will spread out planting and harvest work loads.

According to the table, if the first year planting is a cool season, crops such as wheat, barley, durum, oats (scab is generally not a problem on oats), winter wheat or rye, the second year's crop in the rotation should be a warm season crop such as corn, sudangrass or millet.

Third year planting could be a cool season crop such as field peas, lentils, canola, mustard or crambe or warm season crop such as dry beans (pinto, navy, black, etc.), soybean, sunflower or safflower. Fourth year of the rotation could have a cool season crop such as potato, sugar beet or flax or warm season crop such as buckwheat or flax. Alfalfa, a perennial, could be planted in the fourth year.

Generally the cool season crops are planted and harvested earlier than the warm season crops. Including both in a rotation will spread out planting and harvest work loads.

The broad leaf crops that are adapted for production in our area are not susceptible to scab, making them attractive to include in rotation with wheat. One viable rotation for the northern-growing area may include "first year, wheat; second year, canola; third year, barley, fourth year, flax". This includes fours years of cropping with four crops, the advantage being a year break between each small grain crop and three years between any two crops. This not only reduces the probability of scab on the small grain but reduces the likelihood of sclerotinia on canola.

Both wheat and barley are from the same crop group and one could be substituted for the other, or another crop from group I, in either the first or third year. Likewise a crop from group III could be substituted for canola in year two and a crop from group IV could be substituted for flax in year four.

Some of the crops are not viable options for particular regions depending on environmental conditions. For example, while soybeans and corn are quite productive in southeast N.D., moisture becomes a limiting factor as you move west, decreasing the productivity of these crops.

Remember these factors when making rotational decisions:

1) No two crops from the same group should follow each other in consecutive years;

2) Small grains should not follow corn;

3) Including a legume in the rotation will provide a nitrogen benefit to a succeeding grass crop (sugar beets should not follow a legume);

4) Including both warm and cool season crops in a rotation will spread out planting and harvest dates. Additionally, when soil moisture is a limiting factor, alternating a full-season crop with a short-season crop will conserve soil moisture.

Equally important when planning a rotation is to consider the potential for control of insect pests, available markets for a crop, and the potential for herbicide residue and its effect on a subsequent crop in the rotation.

Peel will discuss crop rotation considerations more in depth at the Small Grains Institute, 10 a.m., March 4, at the South Forks Pavilion, Grand Forks, N.D.

Three Basic Elements To A Marketing Plan

Ed Usset, a wheat market analyst with the Mendota Company and the University of Minnesota, says there are three basic elements to a wheat marketing plan:

1) Know and control your costs.

"Wheat is a commodity, and for long-term survival in a commodity market, you must be a low-cost producer," he says. Knowing where your costs (including storage) are means knowing where profit barriers lie.

2) Respect the odds.

Dr. know when to expect seasonal price movements. Since 1968, the average November wheat price has exceeded the average August price in 21 of 29 years, or 72% of the time. Since 1987, November and December wheat prices have exceeded the average August price in seven of 10 years, or 70% of the time. November and December prices averaged 22 and 32 cents higher, respectively, versus August in this period.

The seasonal rise beyond December is less pronounced and concentrated in the tail end of the marketing year. Usset notes that seasonal price movements in wheat have become sharper since loan rates were decreased in 1986.

"Ask yourself what you can do to avoid wheat sales at harvest," says Usset. "Seasonal price moves strongly suggest that most sales should be completed the end of December. Wheat stored for sale beyond December should generally be held to the April/May period for best return, if any. But holdings to late spring do entail much greater price risk."

3) Know your basis.

The effective use of more sophisticated marketing tools such as futures and options requires a solid knowledge of the basis, which is the relationship between your local cash price and the futures price. Familiarity with the basis will help in knowing when to sell cash wheat, forward contract for new crop or deferred sales, sell futures against wheat held in storage, sell wheat and buy futures or call options, or buy put options to guarantee a minimum price.

Usset will offer more detailed tips in putting the 1998 marketing plan in place, at the Small Grains Institute at 11:30 a.m. March 5, at the South Forks Pavilion in Grand Forks, N.D.

Wheat Head Coverage Key To Fungicide Applications

Pressure, nozzle opening, forward speed and volume are all variables that may affect the efficacy of fungicide applications to control diseases in small grains. That's what Terry Gregoire, North Dakota State University extension agronomist, is finding in research he is conducting on fungicide applications.

In research he conducted last year, various fungicide treatments were applied with commercial equipment to wheat in northeast N.D. Various pieces of equipment were used and ground sprayers varied in width from 55 feet to 90 feet. Percent of scab was determined by counting infected spikelets in 7 heads at 10 locations (70 heads total) in each treatment that was about a half-mile long.

The Maddock treatment site had no response, perhaps because the treatments were applied too late at the late bloom stage. The most effective for reducing scab infection were the initial Benlate/Mancozeb treatments followed by two sequential treatments of Mancozeb at mid to late bloom. The early bloom application of Benlate/Mancozeb was more effective in reducing scab than the early bloom application of Mancozeb alone.

A lower application pressure at the Devils Lake site appeared to be less effective at 10 gallons per acre than the Michigan site where 70 psi was used. All Mancozeb and Benlate/Mancozeb treatments at Cando had lower percent scab than other sites. The Cando site application was at 27 gallons per acre and 70 psi suggesting that with Benlate and Mancozeb fungicide performance may be enhanced by increasing pressures and gallons applied to the head.

Gregoire's experiments last year using nozzles directed toward the head at 60 psi resulted in the lowest percent scab compared to nozzles directed down at 40 psi. More research is needed to determine what methods give the best coverage of wheat heads in a fungicide treatment.

At the Small Grains Institute March 4 at the South Forks Pavilion, Grand Forks, N.D., Gregoire will discuss his research on applying fungicides more effectively, in a 2:30 p.m. discussion.

14 Generalities About Soil Compaction

Alice Jones, University of Nebraska extension soils specialist, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, offers the following facts on soil compaction:

1) In a single year, nearly 90 percent of a field is compacted by normal field operations using a conventional tillage system.

2) Compaction can reduce yields up to 60% depending upon the depth of compaction and its severity.

3) Compaction has been shown to persist up to nine years when it is very severe and deep in the soil profile; persistence for three to four years is common.

4) In a Nebraska survey from the late 1980s, about 40% of fields had some compaction; only about 10% of the fields had compaction severe enough to cause yield reductions.

5) Improperly adjusted packer wheels can compact soil around the seed restricting much of the root growth to the top four inches of soil; this is especially true with wet soil conditions.

6) Country roads often have axle load limits of 10 tons while large combines or grain carts, when fully loaded, can have axle loads up to 40 tons.

7) Confining wheel traffic to specific traffic lanes in a field is an excellent way to manage compaction.

8) To minimize compaction at harvest, unload grain from the combine at the end of the field or at a traffic lane established across the field, rather than on-the-go.

9) Dry soils can be hard but this does not necessarily indicate that the soil is compacted.

10) There are many visual symptoms of soil compaction that can be observed in the field – dark soil streaks, ponded water, accelerated runoff, increased power requirements, excess soil moisture, delayed crop emergence and poor crop growth, crop color, abnormal root development, and early plant water stress.

11) Slight and moderate compaction will not typically affect yield; however, management practices should be changed to minimize the development of further compaction.

12) CRP fields should have no compaction because of the lack of wheel traffic and tillage over a 10-year period.

13) To determine if soil compaction is really a problem, holes must be dug in the field to visually inspect the growth patterns of crop roots; the crop is the ultimate integrator of the soil environment.

14) Compaction can influence plant nutrition, pest problems and control as well as plant growth.

15) Which is better for getting a grip on soil compaction, tires or tracks? Vern Hofman, North Dakota State University extension ag engineer, will discuss this issue at the Small Grains Institute, March 4, at 1 p.m. in the South Forks Pavilion, Grand Forks, N.D.

March 5 Workshop On Farm Viability, Profitability

Danny Klinefelter, director of The Executive Program for Agricultural Producers at Texas A&M University, will lead the mini-seminar "Exploring Ways to Enhance Farm Viability and Profitability." March 5 at the Holiday Inn in Grand Forks. Registration begins at 4:30 p.m., with the program running from 5 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., supper included.

The seminar is free to members of the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers and North Dakota Grain Growers Association, sponsors of the event. Cost is $20 per person for nonmembers.

Klinefelter's executive program at Texas A&M began in 1991 and has attracted farmers from across the United States and Canada. Its two-week long sessions challenge farmers to address topics that will decide their success into the 21st Century. In the March 5 workshop in Grand Forks, Klinefelter will discuss three topics relating to farm viability and profitability. 1) Finance- using alternative equity instruments and buy-sell agreements to achieve owner objectives 2) Marketing– not options or futures, but where Klinefelter believes more marketing will head- using and negotiating production contracts. 3) Operations–Finding ways to improve farm operating efficiency.

Preregistration is appreciated; call Marge at the MAWG, 1-800-242-6118.

SGI to offer Pest ID Clinic

Jochum Wiersma, University of Minnesota small grains specialist, will have a crop pest identification clinic at the 1998 Small Grains Institute, March 4 and 5 at the South Forks Pavilion, in Grand Forks. Wiersma notes that at last year's clinic, most crop producers did not recognize many of the crop problems displayed, such as stem rust, heat canker, and root rot. Wiersma is also on the SGI program, discussing "Scab, What Can Be Done Dodge This Bullet?" at 1 p.m. March 5.

Gimse Wedul, daughter of Maynard and Rosie Wedul of Thief River Falls, recently graduated from flight attendant training with Northwest Airlines in Minneapolis. Pinning on her wings was Marilyn Wallberg, formerly of Thief River Falls, who first talked to Gimse about being a flight attendant during a career day at Lincoln high school.

Wedul receives flight attendant wings from Marilyn Wallberg

When Gimse Wedul of Thief River Falls received her flight attendant wings with Northwest Airlines in Minneapolis, she thought it would be appropriate if they were pinned on by the person who piqued her interest in an airline career.

At her invitation, former Thief River Falls resident Marilyn Wallberg attended the ceremonies February 12 at the Greentree Motel near Northwest Airlines headquarters in Minneapolis and performed the ceremonial pinning.

It was 32 years ago in February when Marilyn graduated from what was then called stewardess training with Northwest. She has been a flight attendant continuously since that time, including many years in Thief River Falls where her husband John taught mathematics in the local school system. They moved to Becker in 1997.

It was during a career day program at Lincoln high school when Gimse met Marilyn and learned about the flight attendant program. Mrs. Wallberg was one of the volunteer career counselors at the event. Gimse continued to remain in contact and receive encouragement from Marilyn to pursue her interest.

Gimse graduated from Lincoln in 1992 and went on to the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks. She majored in English and Spanish while attending UND for five years and worked for Northwest as a ticket agent at the Grand Forks airport for the past two years.

She entered the flight attendant class in early January and was one of 42 to graduate. There were reportedly 17,000 applicants for the flight attendant class.

The program provides five weeks of intensive training and includes training flights on weekends. Mrs. Wallberg said attending the graduation and pinning on the wings brought back many memories from her own graduation experience.

Maynard Wedul, who graduated from pilot training in the U.S. Air Force and received his pilot's wings in January of 1954, said his daughter has planned to be a flight attendant ever since high school days.

Gimse is based in Detroit, MI, and has made her initial flight to begin her flight attendant career.

Coyo Come Home, will help students write dramatic scenes about team efforts of a local fire department.

Robin Silverman, a free-lance writer and author, will help students discover more of their talents and strengths and be shown some new, exciting ways to make good things happen.

Holly Ristau, a librarian at Mahnomen Public Schools, and storyteller, will hear, read and share a story that demonstrates positive attributes of characters in conflict.

Will Weaver, father, fiction writer, coach and teacher who lives in Bemidji and has written five books of fiction, will visit with students about sports fiction. Weaver says it's about characters who came alive on the page. Tips will be shared on how to write short stories and novels, with a focus on character development, vivid details and plotting. Students will also participate in short writing exercises.

William Durbin, writer and teacher, will focus on how to compose a work of non-fiction. He will discuss the composition of his sports biographies of Tiger Woods and Arnold Palmer. Students will be introduced to a series of pre-writing activities which will help them discover subjects of their own.

Rick Ponzio, a professional fiction writer, playwright, storyteller, actor and educator, will help students ask questions based on observations about the world around them. Using metaphor and personification, students will develop original myths that are whimsical, poetic, entertaining or cautionary.

Card of Thanks

CARD OF THANKS

I want to take this opportunity to say a big "Thank You" to Dr. Fortin, the nurses, therapists and 2nd floor and ICU of Northwest Medical Center. I also want to thank my children and their families for being there when I was hospitalized and after I came home. A special thanks to Jason for bringing me to the emergency room when I needed to get there and to all who visited, sent cards and flowers, remembered me with prayers and helped in so many other ways. I am thankful to the homemakers, health aides and nurses who have made it possible for me to be home. May God bless all of you.

National Arbor Day Foundation offers pine trees

National Arbor Day Foundation is offering 10 white pine trees to each person joining the non-profit Foundation during March of 1998 as part of its "Trees for America" campaign.

Annual membership in the Foundation is $10. The six to 12-inch trees will be shipped postpaid along with planting instructions at the right time for planting between March 1 and May 31. They are guaranteed to grow or will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive The Tree Book with information about tree planting and care, and a subscription to Arbor Day, the Foundation's bimonthly publication.

To join, send the $10 contribution by March 31 to Ten Free White Pine Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, Nebraska.

MCC students offered networking program

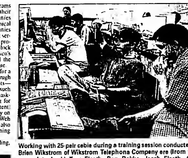
Twelve students at Marshall County Central high school at Newfolden are involved in the Cisco Networking Academies curriculum on the principles of designing, building and maintaining computer networks capable of supporting national and global organizations.

According to instructor Mark Jorgenson, the school district made application for the curriculum and was accepted. The curriculum was started in January and plans are to complete one-half of a one-year program this year.

The second half of the program will be offered in the 1998-99 school year and those who complete the program and pass an examination will receive an Associate Degree in physical networking. The second half of the program will include a strong emphasis on hands-on training and experience.

Jorgenson said the students involved include four members each from grades 10, 11 and 12. The seniors will not have the opportunity to complete the second half of the program, but will benefit from the first portion of the training.

Students involved in the curriculum include seniors Troy Elseth, Ben Rokke, Garrett Magner and Craig Wawrzyniak; juniors Jacob Elseth, Chris Moose, Andy Filer and Steve Rud; and sophomores Denise Magner, Chad Donarski, Nick Ueland and Ben Waterworth.



According to information provided by Jorgenson, the program uses regional academies (service cooperatives, community colleges or district offices) as hubs, each of which supports a minimum of 10 local academies (high schools, vocational-technical schools or community colleges).

These regional academies teach the teachers who oversee programs at the local academies under their jurisdiction. Local academies receive mentoring and technical support from the regional academies and are backed with SMARTnet services—a service and support program that provides around the clock access to assistance from Cisco's technical assistance center and the Cisco Connection online web site.

Cisco provided course work for a complete range of basic through advanced networking concepts—from pulling cable through such complex concepts as subnet masking rules and strategies. Format for the classes reflects the content: interactive lessons stored largely on the classroom's Cisco MicroWeb server. The academy design also accommodates diverse learning styles.

For those who learn by reading,

Wild Rice River open in February

Ada - No one can remember ever seeing the Wild Rice River flowing in February. This year was a first with the river opening last week.

High water levels, precipitation and ice jams contributed to some localized flooding with water covering two to three thousand acres of land and topping some area roads southwest of Ada. However, Wild Rice Watershed District administrator Jerry Bennett reported Monday morning that things on the river are in pretty good shape. Norman County Index

No room at the jail

Crookston - No adult cells are available at Northwest Regional Corrections Center in Crookston.

In fact, no cells are available for any adult prisoner north of Interstate 94 according to Red Lake County Commissioner Lee Nielson, who is also chairman of the board of the Northwest Regional Corrections Center. The Gazette

Grandpa coaches two grandsons at Kittson Central

Hallock - Senior Josh Deere and his sophomore brother Mitch of Kennedy have the rare privilege of calling their basketball coach "Grandpa." Coach Louis Deere has been coaching basketball for 34 years.

Recently Coach Deere watched as Josh hit the 1,000 point mark for his high school career. Kittson County Enterprise

Community expresses concern to school board

Gonvick - Over 50 residents of the Clearbrook and Gonvick communities attended a recent Clearbrook-Gonvick School Board meeting recently.

One of the main questions was whether or not the board was moving in the direction of a new school.

The issue of discipline problems was also raised.

The board assured residents that they are moving ahead with the building project and following a time line. The discipline issue was one that the board refused to address at the meeting as many of the issues are confidential and private.

Town meetings will provide the community with updates on the school's progress. The Leader-Record

Whitey's to stay in East Grand Forks

East Grand Forks - After Whitey's Restaurant was destroyed by the flood of 1997, management was forced to purchase a building in the downtown area of Grand Forks.

Recently a building opened up in downtown East Grand Forks, and once Whitey's management found out, it jumped at the chance to return to East Grand Forks.

The historic bar and restaurant hopes to open its doors in late August, only two doors down from its original location. The Exponent

Pennington county DFL caucuses were held in Thief River Falls and Goodridge Tuesday evening. Sixty-eight people were at the caucuses at Northland Community and Technical College where the above photo was taken. County DFL chair Rick Nelson served as convener in Thief River Falls and associate chair Lori Olson as convener in Goodridge.

Gubernatorial straw votes taken at precinct caucuses

Merv Kading, Pennington county Republican chairman, served as convener for the precinct caucuses Tuesday at the Franklin middle school media center in Thief River Falls.

In straw votes taken at the Democratic Farmer-Labor and Republican precinct caucuses in Pennington county Tuesday evening, March 3, Hubert H. (Skip) Humphrey and Allen Quist emerged clear winners among those in attendance.

In a year when there are approximately a dozen announced candidates for governor in the two major parties, the interest in a straw vote at the precinct caucuses was higher than normal. The DFL organized its straw vote on a statewide basis with results to be reported to the state party. Pennington Republicans took their straw vote spontaneously on a motion from the floor on a local interest basis only.

Attention in the DFL caucuses was focused on the "My Three Sons" trio of Skip Humphrey, Mike Freeman and Ted Mondale—whose fathers respectively are former U.S. Senator and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey II, former Minnesota Governor Orville Freeman and former U.S. Senator and Vice Presidential candidate Walter Mondale.

In a combined total of votes from Thief River Falls and Goodridge caucuses, Humphrey received 39 votes, Freeman nine and Mondale seven. Mark Dayton and John Marty received three votes each and 11 voters were undecided. Doug Johnson received no votes. There were 68 people in attendance at the caucus site in Thief River Falls and nine at the caucus site in Goodridge.

At the Republican caucus, Allan Quist received votes from half of the 32 caucus participants. His 16 votes among 30 total votes cast were followed by nine votes for Lt. Gov. Joanne Benson and five for Norm Coleman. Dick Borrell received no votes.

At the three caucus sessions—Republicans at Franklin middle school media center and Democrats at Northland Community College in Thief River Falls and the senior center in Goodridge—most of those attending were elected delegates to the county conventions.

Pennington county DFL convention will be held Sunday, March 29, at 1:30 p.m. at the Heritage Community Center in Thief River Falls. Some precincts had no representation at the caucuses, according to county DFL chair Rick Nelson, while others had more people attending than allowable county delegates.

County Republican convention will be Friday, April 3, at 7 p.m. at the C'mon Inn in Thief River Falls.

Third Extravaganza set in Middle River

Middle River Community Club isn't about to let a good thing end. The club will conduct its third annual Extravaganza Saturday, March 28, at the American Legion club rooms in Middle River.

The Extravaganza has a number of things going for it. It's affordable to most people (tickets are $25), it's an entertaining and enjoyable social evening, there are 150 prizes available to be won—and all of the proceeds are used for area growth, initiative and community development programs.

Through the first two years of the Extravaganza, a total of nearly $6,000 has been raised for use on community improvements including softball fields, sand volleyball courts, playground equipment, development of the horse show arena into a team penning and team roping facility and assistance to five homeowners establishing residency in the community.

Because of the size of the American Legion club, the number of tickets sold for the Extravaganza is limited. The event includes a social hour beginning at 5:30 p.m., dinner served at 7 p.m. and drawing for the many prizes.

Committee members include Joann Anderson, Melissa Nelson, Lorie Kilen, Roger Ryha, Laverne Nelson, Becky Rantanen, Lee Carriere, Steve Holm, Marla Augustine and Clayton Troskey.

Many of the details for the event were finalized at a meeting of the committee held Wednesday evening in Middle River.

Annual Farmer-Merchant Mixer slated March 16

Agribusiness committee of the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce will host its annual Farmer-Merchant Mixer Monday, March 16, at the American Legion club rooms in Thief River Falls.

The mixer will begin at 5:30 p.m. with the dinner to include ham, potato salad, beans, pickles, bread and butter, coffee and milk. One free drink ticket is also issued with each admission. Sign-up will be held at the door for a smear tournament to be available during the evening.

Admission to the mixer is free for all farmers in the community. Business people may purchase tickets at $8 each from agribusiness committee members or the Chamber of Commerce office at 681-3720.

Activity acelerates for annual ice show

As the March 21 and 22 dates for the 23rd annual ice show in Thief River Falls approach, activity for the show begins to accelerate. Theme for the show this year is Imagination Celebration.

According to Ila Anderson, show director, members of the local skating board have been busy putting the show together. At a recent meeting of the board, Angie Dobias was elected to serve a three-year term on the board.

Members serving on various committees include Kim Novak, JoDee Reierson and Peggy Genereux, publicity, tickets and programs; Angie Dobias, lighting; Janette Mosbeck, flowers; Melissa Hestekind and Rochelle Anderson, photo assistants; Harlan Kirkeide, Rochelle Anderson and Melissa Hestekind, scenery design; Peggy Genereux, parking; Janet Mosbeck and Margaret Peterson, picture and parent helpers. Tickets and programs were designed by Margaret Peterson and Ila Anderson.

Tickets for the show will be on sale in advance at Hugo's Supermarket at $4 for adults, $3 for senior citizens and children in grades six through 12, and $2 for children in kindergarten through fifth grade. At the door ticket prices will be 50 cents higher than advance prices.

Recreational skaters and members of the Thief River Falls Skating Club are currently practicing for the show. More than 250 skaters will present different dream-type themes in this year's show.

Assistant directors Kelly Amundgaard and Jeremy Anderson join additional skating instructors Hilary Teie, Stephanie Pederson, Tanya Severinson and Vicki Meunier in choreographing the program.

Eighteen-year-old Caio Neto, an 18-year-old Brazilian exchange student, loves the snow in Minnesota and has participated in a number of snow-related outdoor activities since arriving here in January. The Virgil Erickson family of rural Holt is Caio's host family. He is attending Marshall County Central in Newfolden.

Brazilian student enjoying our snow

by Kathi Carlson
Northern Watch Reporter

Snow made a big impression on Caio Ribeiro Neto when he stepped off an airplane in Thief River Falls on Saturday, January 24. The 18-year-old Brazilian had never seen snow before.

Caio (pronounced Ki-o) is a foreign exchange student attending Marshall County Central in Newfolden. The second thing that impressed him is how friendly the people are. Included are the many friends he's made at school and his host family - Virgil, Cathy and Andy Erickson of rural Holt. Andy is a freshman at MCC.

Caio's flight from Piracicaba, Brazil to Miami, FL took between nine and ten hours. From Miami, a four-hour flight took him to Minneapolis where he boarded a Northwest Airlink plane which took him to Grand Forks and finally, to Thief River Falls. While he had flown within the boundaries of his own country before, Caio had never been on an airplane so long. And while he successfully reached his destination on schedule, his luggage did not, and he had to return to Thief River Falls the next day to

Ojibwe class a hit at Waubun school

Waubun - Waubun Schools added an Ojibwe Culture, Crafts and Language class to its curriculum this year as a senior independent study elective. During the first semester, 38 students took the course, and 55 students are in the class this semester.

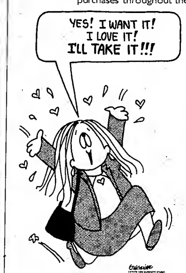
The students have a tee-pee and enjoy bead work, loom work and leather work. They have gone ice fishing and recently went to Bass Lake where they had their own fishing derby, using a hook and sinker and no modern tackle. The Mahnomen Pioneer

Invite teachers to apply for lignite seminar

To promote a broader understanding of the role lignite energy plays in this region of the country, Otter Tail Power Company will pay registration and transportation costs for 10 elementary and secondary teachers from its service area to attend a three-day seminar entitled Lignite—Our Regional Resource: Energy, Economics and Environment.

The seminars will be held at Bismarck State College in Bismarck, ND, June 3-5, 10-12 and 17-19. One graduate semester credit from the Center for Economic Education at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks will be available to teachers who complete the seminar.

Teachers will learn how lignite is mined and converted into energy for use by millions of consumers and businesses in the Upper Midwest. Classroom presentations will include economic impacts and environmental issues. Mine and plant tours will be part of the activities as well. Teachers will receive curriculum materials for future use with their students.



Applications are now being taken from teachers interested in attending the seminar. To apply call 218-739-8751 or write Corporate Communications, Otter Tail Power Company, P.O. Box 496, Fergus Falls, MN 56537. Deadline for application is March 31.

THANK YOU

Thank you to the many friends and relatives who made expressions of kindness, sympathy and prayer during the recent illness and death of our mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, Alyce Konickson.

Thank you to the nursing staff of Northwest Medical Center, the staff of Pioneer Memorial Care Center, Pastor Johnson for his comforting words and the ladies of Immanuel Lutheran Church for serving lunch. Special thanks to the staff of Valley home for making a caring home for Mom during the last 1-1/2 years of her life.

SOUPÇON

Sherry LaCoursiere

It's Lent, and I guess it would be a good time to have a few non-meat recipes, so here they are.

Here's a quick mixing batter for those fishy fillets you'll be serving during Lent:

FISH BATTER
4 cups sifted flour
2 cups cornstarch
1 level teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons dry mustard
2 teaspoons baking powder
4 tablespoons sugar

Add water to make consistency of pancake batter, dip fish and fry.

And here's the tartar sauce to go with the fish:

TARTAR SAUCE
1 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped dill pickles
1 tablespoon minced parsley
2 teaspoons chopped pimento

Mix all ingredients together and keep refrigerated.

Salmon's on sale now and here's that old favorite that Grandma used to make - she always served it with creamed peas:

SALMON LOAF
2 cups cleaned and flaked red or pink salmon
1 cup cooked Minute Rice (Grandma used bread crumbs)
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons parsley flakes
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 can cream of mushroom soup (undiluted)
2 eggs, separated

Blend egg yolks and soup well. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Add rice, lemon juice, parsley flakes, salt and onion. Add salmon to this mixture.

Bake in preheated 325 degree oven for 1 hour.

Why not have pizza - It is simple to make without meat and tastes delicious:

FRENCH BREAD PIZZA
1 long French bread
1 large bag of shredded mozzarella cheese
1 large can pizza sauce
Vegetable toppings, like mushrooms, onions, black olives, green pepper or whatever you like.

Cut bread in half the long way. Spread pizza sauce on both halves, all the way to the ends.

Sauté vegetables slightly in a little butter in fry pan. Sprinkle on vegetables and cheese and bake at 350 degrees for about 15 minutes or until cheese is melted.

EASY CLAM CHOWDER
4 tablespoons butter
1 large onion, chopped
3 cups water
12 ounces frozen hash brown potatoes
2 (6 1/2 ounce) cans minced clams and liquid
Salt and pepper to taste
1/3 cup sherry (optional)
1 (12 ounce) can evaporated milk

Melt butter and sauté onion. Add water and bring to a boil. Add hash browns and bring to a boil. Simmer 20 minutes or until soft.

Add milk, clams and liquid, salt and pepper and sherry. Bring to the boiling point (but do not boil) and serve.

Pancakes, waffles and French toast all make a substantial meatless meal - here's an easy pancake recipe you'll use often - It's my son-in-law's recipe, so we know it's good:

BUTTERMILK PANCAKES
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 1/2 cups flour
1 cup buttermilk
2 eggs
1/4 teaspoon salt

Mix dry ingredients in bowl. Mix eggs and buttermilk in another bowl and add dry ingredients. Double the recipe if needed - leftovers are great in the microwave.

And how about a nice, spicy egg dish to top everything off:

HUEVOS MEXICANOS
2 tablespoons butter
4 eggs, lightly beaten
Salt to taste
1 whole can green chili, sliced
1 tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped (optional)
1/2 cup grated sharp Cheddar cheese

Melt butter in skillet. Add eggs and scramble, making certain eggs remain moist! Add salt to taste.

Add chili and toss lightly with eggs. Add tomato, stirring gently just to heat through. Remove to serving plate and top with grated cheese.

Good Neighbor campaign fights lung disease

Over 12,000 volunteers throughout Minnesota are asking their neighbors to make a contribution to help fund programs such as school health education, summer asthma camps for kids with asthma, education for adults and kids with asthma, quit smoking classes, lung disease research, clean air programs and more.

"Lung disease is the third leading cause of death in our country," stated Mike Bisanz, president of the American Lung Association of Minnesota. "The Good Neighbor Campaign is an opportunity to spread the word that lung disease is largely preventable and to give people an opportunity to support the fight against lung disease, the third leading cause of death in our country."

For more information on lung disease, call the American Lung Association of Minnesota or the Good Neighbor Campaign at 612-227-0814 or 1-800-642-LUNG.

David Swenson, Baudette, author of The Interfacers

David C. Swenson, a Lake of the Woods county commissioner and retired bank president at Baudette, has written a 226-page fictional novel recently published by Eastern Dakota Publishers of Fort Wayne, IN.

David is a graduate of Lincoln high school in Thief River Falls and the son of Lowell and Marge Swenson of Thief River Falls. His wife Nancy is the daughter of Bob and Eunice Flynn of Thief River Falls. They have three children.

In the book's foreword, the author writes: "This book is pure fiction. It has been liberally sprinkled with quotations from several writers and texts. I have referred to the sources of the quotations by a reference mark after the quotation and a source guide at the end of the novel.

"With the exception of the quotations, any similarities to real people, places and events are purely coincidental. Were they not, we would be forced to completely rethink our relationships with mankind and the universe."

Swenson says he has been interested in spiritual and religious matters since his teen years. A 1970 graduate of the University of North Dakota, he spent 24 years in industry and banking and enjoys playing classical violin. Nancy is also a UND graduate, a nationally registered paramedic and teaches emergency medicine in northern Minnesota.

David says that more than five million Americans have survived their own near-death experiences and over 50 million have had contact with deceased loved ones.

"Modern medicine performs new miracles each day at a dizzying rate," he said. "Science may be closer than we realize to developing equipment which will help us observe the electromagnetic essence of life and discover what really does happen to that essence when it leaves our physical bodies. Do we survive physical death?

"When our hair stands on end and we get goosebumps, did we just feel a draft or have we sensed an encounter with an energy field we cannot detect with out other physical senses? Each of us must judge for ourselves."

The Interfacers is described as a medical and spiritual thriller involving trauma surgeon Dr. Ben Bradley who, along with a small research team, has developed an Electromagnetic Energy Field Monitor they hope will be helpful in diagnosing and treating patients in life-threatening situations.

Designed to "sense the natural electromagnetic fields that are the core of every living thing," the machine displays haunting images that Dr. Bradley is ill-prepared to accept despite his own suppressed memories of a childhood near-death experience.

Camp MOE To Be Sold

Mons and Olga Engelstad, who donated the property which was developed into Girl Scout Camp MOE southeast of the Thief River Falls regional airport, would be pleased to know about the many days of pleasure their donation has brought to many hundreds of girls over the years. The camp was named with the initials of the donors—M.O.E.

Year after year the young scouts look forward to the week of camping activity where they have separate campsites in the woods, duties to perform, crafts and activities to enjoy, citizenship rules to learn and especially an opportunity to stay at the camp overnight.

The Thief River Falls community in general, and local service clubs in particular, have embraced the camp and its programs, donating money, materials and time to improve the site with a building, well and other facilities. In all, the camp has been well maintained, well run and well appreciated by scouts, leaders and parents alike.

So it was with a good deal of surprise and concern that local scouters learned a few weeks ago that the Pine to Prairie Girl Scout Council, official owner of the camp property, had decided to close the camp and sell the property. The action was part of a decision which also involves disposal of the Grafton (ND) Girl Scout Cabin and discontinuance of leases for Camp Tonweya and a Fargo satellite office.

"Therefore Camp MOE will remain closed and not reopen for use in May," wrote Carole Roach, executive director of the council, in a letter to Ginny Armstrong of Thief River Falls. Ginny has been involved with Camp MOE and its programs for many years.

"The disposing of the property including the land, buildings and equipment will take place in the months ahead and that process has already begun. Please forward to me a set of keys to the gate and all the buildings immediately as we will need to have access to the property in the near future."

After many years of conducting popular and successful programs at the camp, local scouters are understandably reluctant to have the property sold out from under them and converted to some other use. Hurried efforts are being made to form a local non-profit corporation in the hopes that it could acquire the property and continue programs on a local basis.

From a practical standpoint, the camp grounds and facilities developed there don't have a lot of dollar value. The land is wooded, fairly low, and is generally not desirable as either agricultural or residential property. The headquarters building would be all right for storage or perhaps a garage, but is best suited for what it was built to do—provide an inside activity area and shelter for campers.

If the property is sold on bids (although it has not been announced that a bid process will be followed), we would expect the private interest in it should not be very high and a local non-profit group should not have a great deal of difficulty in raising enough money to acquire it. For that matter, we think the Girl Scout Council has little to gain from selling it. The local Girl Scout program is a worthwhile endeavor and local support to the extent needed has never been lacking. It could be expected that such support will continue and even increase.

Pine to Prairie Girl Scout Council could have been a little more diplomatic in the manner in which it determined the disposal and notified area leaders. It also could have had the courtesy to involve local scouters early-on in the decision-making process.

Should the situation come about which would allow a local purchase for continued camp use, perhaps the best interests of area youngsters will have been served. The land could pass from a disinterested owner to a highly interested and motivated one which would likely expand use and continue improvement of the property.

We will be keeping an eye on the developments with the hope that our community's young people will continue to have opportunity for a convenient, low-cost, structured and supervised yet enjoyable camping experience for many years to come.

To Much Information

While we try to take precautions to avoid it, a duplication of news stories may occasionally appear in The Times or the Northern Watch. How, you might wonder, could anyone be so dull or unobservant to write the same story information twice? That is a very reasonable question.

The answer is that one person doesn't write the same story twice. Two people use the same information to write the same story. Still doesn't make sense? Here's what happens.

Not too many years ago when we had two issues of The Times each week and also published the Northern Minnesota Shopper's Guide—which carried virtually all advertising— news material submitted by various individuals and organizations was sent by mail or delivered in person to The Times. It was reviewed by one person who either assigned or did the writing and that was that.

More recently, with The Times and Northern Watch both carrying news items, some suppliers of news material would send a copy to each publication. With a couple of people on the news staff handling submitted items, it became fairly easy for one person to get one of the copies and the second person the other. Assuming each copy was an individual submission, both writers then prepared the similar stories.

Sometimes an alert proofreader would get both copies and call the duplication to our attention. More often the two stories would go to different staff members handling proofreading tasks and the duplication would go unnoticed.

With luck, the compositor manually putting the pages together would notice the duplication which had eluded the writers and proofreaders and ask about the two stories. Or a staff member reviewing the pages posted on make-up boards might happen to notice two similar stories and ask about them.

Now the page composition is done electronically by more than one person and duplication is less likely to be detected at that stage of production.

To further complicate matters, technology has created FAX machines and the Internet. Now we find that a number of news sources, particularly government agencies and political office holders, will send the same information by FAX, via the Internet and by mail—and frequently by all three means to both The Times and Northern Watch. As a result, we receive six separate copies of the same information, usually at different times which could involve intervals from hours to several days.

Naturally, we try to communicate among ourselves regarding items that are submitted to us, especially when we recognize the sources which send multiple releases. But if schedules don't mesh, or a staff member is gone for a day or two, or it just plain gets too busy to do much communicating, duplications in writing can happen.

Anyway, if you read an item in one of our publications and think it seems a bit familiar, you may be right. You could have read it in someone else's publication, or you could have read it twice in one of ours. If the latter is the case, we apologize for inconveniencing you. We really have enough to do so that we don't need to write the same stories twice. But it happens.

POLICIES

The staff believes that there is greater credibility in letters signed in print and will not withhold names of writers from publication.

Responses Invited: Letters critical of individuals or other entities may be shown to those individuals or representatives of those entities in advance of publication with an invitation by newspaper staff for response in the same issue as the original letter.

Corrections: If an error is made in news or advertising publication, the staff encourages readers to call it to our immediate attention by calling 681-4450. We will attempt to correct the error or clarify the misunderstanding in the next issue.

LETTERS

To The Editor:

Our nation has been built on compromise and cooperation and has thus prospered for nearly 225 years. Recently, however, environmental issues have moved increasingly toward the margins. Although we as Americans have become environmentally aware, we've failed to become environmentally educated.

Last year Nathan Zohner, a 14-year-old student in Idaho, used a simple experiment to prove this observation. He entered a project in a science fair warning people of the dangers of "Dihydrogen Monoxide" or DHMO. He described DHMO as a substance potent enough to cause sweating and vomiting, a major component of acid rain, capable of decreasing the effectiveness of automobile brakes and found in cancerous tumors. It can cause severe burns in its gaseous state or even kill if accidentally inhaled.

Fifty people were asked to sign a petition banning the substance. Forty-three signed it, five said no, two were neutral. Only then did he reveal that DHMO is water.

Our society has taken the rhetoric of environmental protection to drastic lengths. Americans today fear everything from drinking water to raindrops, and we are spurred on by leaders who are masters of fiction and doomsday scenarios.

Most Americans consider themselves environmentalist. Our children deserve to live in a world which affords them the same environmental opportunities that we enjoy today. While the environmental fringe continues to dominate public policy, 70% of Americans believe they should not have to choose between environmental quality and economic growth. They are correct.

Society must answer the questions of environmental protection with a new commitment to pragmatism. Through education and awareness we'll be able to pursue environmental policy in ways that ensure the best interests of all.

Creating environmental fears means big money to environmental groups. The budgets of 10 of these groups total $603 million, including the following:

The Nature Conservancy, $275 million; National Wildlife Federation, $77 million; World Wildlife Fund, $55 million; Greenpeace USA, $47.6 million; Sierra Club, $39 million; National Audubon Society, $37.3 million; Humane Society of the U.S., $19.2 million; Environmental Defense Fund, $18.5 million; The Wilderness Society, $17.9 million; and Natural Resource Defense Council, $17.4 million.

Sincerely,
Dave Zavoral

East Grand Forks to receive first state computers

Schools in East Grand Forks and Ada-Borup and Edison high school in Minneapolis will be the first recipients of refurbished and upgraded computers under the state's "Computers for Schools" program. They were selected because they were affected by severe flooding last spring.

As part of the program, inmates at the Stillwater and Lino Lakes correctional facilities refurbish and upgrade donated computer equipment for Minnesota schools. Several hundred computers have already been completed at Stillwater.

"This is an excellent opportunity for our inmates," noted Fred LaFleur, Minnesota Commissioner of Corrections. "They are learning a valuable skill that can help them become productive members of society when they leave our facilities."

Under a federal tax law change passed last year, companies may take a 100 percent tax deduction for computer equipment they donate within the first two years of purchase. Those interested in donating computers or learning more about the program may call 1-800-939-6000.

Members of the group are Claude Hopper, manager and bass; Connie Hopper, alto; Dean Hopper, lead; Kim Hopper, soprano; Shannon Childress, pianist and bass; Michael Hopper, drums; and Taylor Barnes, bass guitar.

Warroad

The origin of Warroad's name go back to the time when the area was on the path that warring Sioux and Chippewa tribes used enroute to battle. Fur traders, loggers, and commercial fisherman also left their marks adding to the uniqueness of the town and making Warroad rich with history.

Warroad is the only American port on Lake of the Woods — the 100th largest lake in the world. Lake of the Woods has 65,000 miles of shoreline and 14,000 scenic islands. With permits, fishing is possible in both American and Canadian waters.

Wildflowers bloom throughout the area from early April until late October with over two million orchids covering the 75 miles along Highway 11 through the area. Among these orchids are the Showy Lady Slipper, Minnesota's State Flower.

Warroad's population of approximately 1,832 and its visitors enjoy a host of fine public facilities. The Library and Heritage Center is one of the most beautiful in the state. City Hall is housed in a restored train depot and is on the National Register of Historical Buildings. Swimming facilities include a state-of-the-art indoor pool which compliments the outdoor pool located near the city park. The Gardens, Warroad's newest ice arena, is Olympic-sized and seats about 3,000. The overflow during tournements is handled by a second ice arena next door. Located just north of the city, the 18-hole, championship-level Warroad Estates Golf Course is open to the public and challenges even the most accomplished golfer.

Modern facilities highlight Warroad's School District, and additional educational opportunities are available for citizens of all ages through the Community Education Department. School and city are joint partners of the athletic complex.

Many of Warroad's residents are employed by the local industries that have made Warroad famous as the home of "windows, walleyes and hockey sticks." In recent years, Christian Brothers hockey stick factory and Marvin Windows have had a significant impact on the local economy. Both of the companies operate on the world market and were begun by entrepreneurs who have called Warroad home for their entire lives. Also, agriculture, forest products and tourism have been a natural part of the Warroad area economy since its earliest days.

A variety and growing number of retail and service oriented businesses cater to Warroad's residents and tourists.

Also known as Hockey-town, USA, Warroad is home to the Warroad Lakers, an amateur hockey team that has been a competing member of Manitoba, Ontario and Minnesota hockey leagues for over 50 years. The Warroad Warriors high school hockey team has captured a number of state titles.

Hunters, fisherman and outdoor enthusiasts can enjoy their sport in all seasons. Lake of the Woods is a fisherman's paradise, and the hunting areas surrounding Warroad are abundant with big game and waterfowl.

A campground which includes full-service hook-ups and primitive sites is located on the edge of the city adjacent to the lake. The grounds offer rest rooms with showers, picnic areas, look-out towers and fish cleaning houses. A playground, outdoor pool and miniature golf course are located nearby.

Dining and entertainment options are available at a number of Warroad clubs and establishments. Blackjack and slot machines are offered daily at the casino. Many of Warroad's clubs offer live entertaiment, and the Warroad Summer Theater offers five plays a season, including a dinner theater performed in some of Warroad's finer eating establishments.

Warroad is a community for all seasons, and civic pride will be evident again this spring and summer as residents and tourists view "Petunia Row" — thousands of flowers planted on the main road through town.

North Sub-Section 8AAA boys high school basketball...

Prowlers lose to Cards 75-61

Alexandria built a big lead, then turned back a third quarter Thief River challenge Thursday en route to a 75-61 North Sub-Section 8AAA boys high school basketball tournament opening round semifinal win.

The host Cardinals hit their first four shots, three of them from three-point range, in building a 25-7 first quarter advantage. They led 39-20 at halftime.

After falling behind in the first quarter, Thief River Falls out-scored Alexandria 54-50 the rest of the way. But the fourth-seeded Prowlers were never able to catch the top-seeded Cardinals.

Down by as many as 23 points, the Prowlers chopped the difference under double figures at 51-43 before a third quarter-ending Alexandria basket produced a 10-point gap to open the final period. The Cardinals promptly re-opened a 24-point spread before another Thief River Falls surge cut 10 points off the difference by game's end.

"The kids never quit," said Thief River Falls assistant coach Al Buhl. "They played a great ball game."

The two teams left the court with exact opposite records: Alexandria 19-4; Thief River Falls 4-19. The Cardinals were ranked No. 8 in the final regular season Class AAA state poll.

Four Alexandria scorer hit double figures, led by Brad Meichsner with 22 points. Jeremy Swanson led Thief River Falls with 16 points and Matt Myers had 12, while both Kyle Waterworth and Cody Huschle fell a point short of joining them in double figures.

The Prowlers were 24-for-50 from the field (48 percent) and 6-for-8 at the free throw line, where the Cardinals went 7-for-16.

"Going in as the No. 4 seed playing the No. 1 seed, we knew three things had to happen if we were going to play with them," explained Buhl. "We had to shoot better from the field than we had been shooting; we had to shoot better from the line; and they had to be a little off. They weren't."

Gators third in Class A state wrestling tourney

A second place finish in the Class A team competition by Greenbush-Middle River/Badger and a runner-up finish by the Gators' Tim Blumer at 152 pounds in the Class A individual matches highlighted results for area wrestlers taking part in the 1998 Minnesota state high school wrestling tournament Feb. 26-28 at the RiverCentre Arena in St. Paul.

Greenbush/Middle River-Badger opened the Class A team tournament with a 42-10 quarterfinal win over Wheaton-Herman-Norcross. The Gators wrestled Janesville-Waldorf-Pemberton to a 22-22 semifinal draw, but lost a tie-breaking criteria decision – a 7-6 J-W-P advantage in individual wins. The Section 8A champions came back to beat Goodhue 35-16 in the third place match.

Violinists Denny (left) and Benji Seyler, sons of Dr. Benjamin and Merilyne Seyler of Thief River Falls, performed Friday, March 6, with the Greater Grand Forks Symphony Orchestra in its family concert production of "Peter and the Wolf." Youth and adult symphonies presented the concert at the Chester Fritz Auditorium on the University of North Dakota campus. The youth symphony also presented Rossini's "Barber of Seville." Performances were at 10 a.m., 1 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Meetings today on northwest Minnesota failing farm economy

Many elected officials are expected to participate in two meetings scheduled today (Saturday, March 7) at 9:30 a.m. in Kiehle Hall on the University of Minnesota campus in Crookston and 2:30 p.m. at the city hall in Hallock. Subject of the sessions is the failing farm economy in northwest Minnesota.

Rep. Jim Tunheim of Kennedy organized the sessions. He said that U.S. Senator Paul Wellstone would attend the Crookston meeting and that both meetings would be attended by Seventh District Congressman Collin Peterson, state Farm Service Agency director Wally Sparby and former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland of Roseau.

State Representatives to attend include Phil Carruthers, Brooklyn Center, Speaker of the House; Ted Winter, Fulda, Majority Leader; Steve Wenzel, Little Falls, agriculture committee chair; Bernie Lieder, Crookston, transportation and transit finance chair; Edgar Olson, Fosston, property tax and tax increment finance committee chair; Tim Finseth, Angus, and Doug Peterson, who chairs the Right To Be Rural task force.

State Senators planning to attend are LeRoy Stumpf, Thief River Falls; Roger Moe, Erskine, Majority Leader; Doug Johnson, Cook, tax committee chair; and Dallas Sams, Staples, rural development committee chair.

"Farmers in northwestern Minnesota are facing a very serious situation," Rep. Tunheim said. "These meetings bring legislative leaders to northwestern Minnesota so they can see and hear first-hand what affect five years of poor wheat production and extremely low market prices are having on farmers."

Local farmers, crop experts and members of the clergy have been scheduled to testify at the meetings. Rep. Tunheim said he hopes the legislators and other officials will be moved by what they see and hear and join in the effort to get the federal farm bill changed.

"Hopefully, having Minnesota's leaders speak out on our behalf will bring about change," Tunheim said. "It's been tough for a small group of farmers from northwestern Minnesota to bring about change on our own. By working together we will made a difference."

Those who were unable to attend either meeting but who are interested in submitting written testimony may send it to Rep. Jim Tunheim, 509 State Office Building, 100 Constitution Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55155-1298. Questions about the meetings can be directed to his office at 612-296-9635.

Two workshops on Alzheimer's disease planned

Workshops entitled Day-to-Day With Alzheimer's will be presented Thursday, March 12 at 7 p.m. and Friday, March 13 at 1:30 p.m. in the downstairs meeting room of the Pennington county courthouse in Thief River Falls.

Glenice Johnson, extension educator, will present general information on stages of Alzheimer's, practical tips on improving communication and daily routines, and resources available for caregivers or family.

Some segments will use videos of real family situations to illustrate these stages and methods. There is no charge for the session and it is open to the general public.

"Many families are living with or providing care for a loved one with Alzheimer's Disease or other types of dementia," Johnson said. "Frequent pacing or wandering, repetitious questioning, hiding objects or other confusing behaviors can be frustrating or frightening for family members."

For further information or answers to questions, call the Pennington county extension office at 683-7030 or 1-800-681-2116.

Premature sprouts may feel the bite of winter

On the calendar it's still winter, but confused bulbs in the yard and garden may be sending up shoots in response to soil temperatures that are more typical of April than early March.

Deborah Brown, horticulturist with the University of Minnesota extension service, says there isn't much a gardener can do to protect new growth from below freezing March temperatures. But she adds that most young plants are hardy and won't be harmed unless temperatures plunge into the teens.

"If we do get snow as predicted," she said, "it is an excellent insulator and won't damage either the foliage of young plants or tight buds. It may flatten them temporarily, but most will recover once the snow melts."

There isn't anything that homeowners can do to prevent premature bud swelling on trees or shrubs, according to Brown. If buds are lost because of cold weather, the tree or shrub will produce secondary buds in their place.

"This happened to many plants last spring," she said. "It can stress a plant to have to produce several rounds of buds before finally leafing out. If it happens that way again this year, some plants will be weakened."

She adds that grass can go in and out of dormancy without causing any permanent damage.

"Who knows?" Brown said. "Meteorologists are predicting continuing warmer than normal weather and an early spring. But this is Minnesota, and gardeners here know that we have to roll with the punches."

claim his belongings.

"I love the snow," he said as he watched fat flakes fall on Thursday afternoon. When he left his home, it was summer in Brazil where, he says, the temperatures often reach 100 degrees. The change in weather must have been almost as drastic as going from a city of 300,000 people to a farm in rural Marshall county.

Caio joined the senior class at Marshall County Central on Monday, January 26 and admitted he was "a little" nervous that first day. The school bus was a new experience for him. The bus stops at the Erickson home at 7:15 a.m. and arrives at the school around 8:15. The early morning hours, however, were not new to him as school begins at 7 a.m. in Brazil.

Caio's family in Brazil consists of his mother, two sisters, ages 15 and 6, and a 10-year-old brother. His father is deceased. He was born in Sao Paulo, a city of 13 million, and has lived there several times as well as in a number of other cities in Brazil.

His mother owns a school where English and Spanish are taught. The students are two-years-old and up, and the languages are studied for a variety of reasons. His mother's school is associated with a number of foreign exchange programs. "I heard a lot about the USA that made me interested," Caio said. He cited that it was his mother who provided him with the opportunity to participate in the exchange program. When asked if he was homesick, he said "a little" for the first couple of weeks. "It's better now," he added.

Caio began attending school at the age of three, but school at that age, he said "is just for enjoyment. I learned to read and write at the age of six." The school day begins at 7 a.m. and ends at 12:30 p.m. The academic year runs from February until December with a break in July when students have the entire month off. Caio graduated from high school in Brazil in December.

In Brazil, he says that school is much more intense. There, he studied math, biology, physics, chemistry, history, Portuguese and English. There are no "fun" electives there. The good universities in Brazil are government-owned and free to attend, but the student must pass an entrance exam to get into the schools, a test that Caio refers to as "very difficult." When he returns to Brazil, he hopes to get into a university, and someday pursue a career in public relations.

At MCC, he has an English class that emphasizes mass media, physical education, computers and "Problems of Democracy," a social studies class. He indicated that classroom behavior is much less rigid here. "The students don't talk to each other (in the classrooms) in Brazil."

Language has been Caio's biggest challenge here. Portuguese is the official language of Brazil, and the English he was taught in school is very different from what is spoken here. "Sometimes the teachers use technical language," he said. A question about slang required an explanation and example, and when he understood, Caio described it as a "difficult thing." Considering that he has spoken English regularly for only a few weeks, he is easy to understand and communicate with.

Sports are not offered in the schools in Brazil to the extent that they are here. More often, they are enjoyed in clubs with memberships that are very expensive. At MCC, he has enjoyed participating in basketball practice, attending varsity games and watching host brother Andy play on the ninth grade team. Soccer is the most popular sport in Brazil, and some basketball and golf is played there but no football or baseball.

Dressed in a plaid shirt over a white T-shirt and jeans, Caio looked like an ordinary high school student and said that the styles are very similar in Brazil. Lee and Wrangler jeans are sold there. Because of the tropical climate, shorts are worn often. He commented that the girls wear dresses more often here and are usually worn only at parties in Brazil. He added that the dresses there are sleeveless with narrow straps and much shorter. Shoes are are the same popular brands worn in the United States. Uniforms are worn at almost all of the Brazilian schools.

McDonalds, Pizza Huts and Kentucky Fried Chicken can all be found in Brazil. While there are differences in the foods eaten in the two countries, there are also many similarities. "I like the food here," Caio said. Venison was one of the new foods he's eaten here and liked. Because juice or soft drinks are served with meals in Brazil, "Drinking milk with meals is very strange to me," he said. He also noted that he was unfamiliar with the large mugs we use to drink coffee. In Brazil, tiny cups are used. The strength of the coffee, however, is similar between the two countries.

For entertainment, the teenagers in Brazil go to discos, musical clubs for young people. Bicycles, skateboards and rollerblades are also popular. Carnival is celebrated each year during the four days before the Christian observance of Lent. Caio described the event which is held in the streets as "informal" and "a big party." Caio saw "Titanic" before coming to the United States. American movies are shown in Brazil at the same time as they are here, most in English with Portuguese printed across the bottom of the screen.

Cars are the same in the two countries and owned by everyone in Brazil except the very poor. You must be 18 years of age to obtain a driver's license, something Caio has to look forward to when he returns home.

The government of Brazil is a democracy, but like many young people, Caio questions how that can be so when military service is an "obligation." However, of the 3,000 eligible 18-year-olds in his city, only 300 were needed and selected to serve. Much to his relief, Caio was not among them. "I don't like war," he said.

According to Caio, about 25 percent of the population is poor. "We have a big middle (class) and a little bit rich. The rich are very rich. But we are changing. Salaries are going up. The rules are changing," he said when talking about the Brazilian economy. A variety of ethnic groups constitute the population of the country.

While Catholics make up about 85 percent of the Brazilian population, Caio says that Protestants are increasing in number. About ten percent of the population practices such local religions as macumba and candomble which combine African spiritual beliefs with Catholicism. Like many of Brazil's Catholics, Caio did not actively practice his religion. He has, however, attended St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Middle River regularly with his host family.

According to Caio's host mother, Cathy, he fits in well with their family. He enjoys having a "brother" closer to his age. "Andy is in Montana right now," Caio said. "I miss him." With 14 years between him and his closest sibling, it is good for Andy to have Caio around, too.

The Ericksons have hosted exchange students before. Two years ago, a German student spent the entire school year with them, and they have also had four Japanese and a Norwegian stay with them while participating in a 4-H exchange.

Cathy and Virgil are the parents of six, and Caio has become "uncle" to their 14 grandchildren, the latest born on February 13.

The Ericksons farm in Marshall county, and Cathy also works part-time at The Times. Caio will be with them until sometime in June and will get to experience spring planting and calving time.

On a trip to International Falls, Caio had the opportunity to enjoy snowmobiling and visit Voyageurs National Park. He has also been skiing at Buena Vista in Bemidji with a church group from Nazareth and Silver Creek Lutheran Churches. At a basketball game, Caio met Henquire, another Brazilian exchange student who is attending school in Roseau.

Caio's been on a shopping trip to Grand Forks, and describes the shopping malls in Brazil as much larger. However, he hasn't been to the largest mall in the world. That will change in a couple of weeks when he and his host family travel to Minneapolis. March 21st is Exchange Student Night at the Target Center. In addition to taking in a Timberwolves game, the Ericksons plan to take Caio to the Mall of America.

After hosting a number of exchange students and being a mom, Cathy concludes, "Young people are the same all over the world. Their feelings are the same. They all want and need to be special." Cathy is right. Looking like the boy next door, Caio is a special young man who just happens to love snow. Hopefully, he will have had enough of it by the time spring rolls around and will continue to enjoy his stay in Minnesota.

Twenty of the county's 30 precincts were represented at the caucuses.

County DFL chair Rick Nelson presided at the Thief River Falls DFL session and county associate chair Lori Olson was convener at the caucus site in Goodridge. County chairman Marv Kading was convener at the Republican caucus site. Attendance at all caucuses in the county was smaller than two years ago when a Presidential election was in the offing.

Neither of the parties had any candidates for election make an appearance at the caucuses, although both had campaign materials from candidates to distribute and several messages from candidates were received to be read to those in attendance.

Some 20 to 25 resolutions submitted at the Republican caucus site were turned over to a resolutions committee for consolidating before being presented at the county convention. Kading said there were fewer resolutions than usual in part because of a previously announced party platform which may have included interest areas of a number of local party members.

Nelson said that resolutions at the DFL caucuses dealt with such items as funding the Endowment for Minnesota's Children which involves education from birth to age five, higher reimbursement for livestock killed by timber wolves, and a couple dealing with the area agricultural economy and property rights.

At the county conventions delegates will be elected to the state party conventions where candidates for office will be endorsed.

Brian Wikstrom of Wikstrom Telephone Company explains how to handle 25-pair cable during a session of the Cisco Networking Academies curriculum at Marshall County Central high school in Newfolden. Mark Jorgenson is the classroom instructor for the program.

MCC students offered networking program

text is available. More visual learners can focus on the course material's extensive graphics and QuickTime movies.

To promote development of the personal skills that underpin successful careers, projects require students not only to resolve technical issues, but also to successfully address network users' needs.

Through the Cisco Networking Academies program, high school and college students can learn the information needed to prepare them for the Cisco Certified Networking Associate exam. This certification positions them for immediate openings in a talent-hungry job market or for engineering and science focused college studies.

Jorgenson said the program has had the advantage of visiting instructors from area business, including Brian Wikstrom of Wikstrom Telephone company in Karlstad and Matt Proulx of LaBine Electric in Argyle.

Photos accompanying this article were taken at Newfolden with an electronic imaging camera and relayed to the Thief River Falls Times via the Internet. The digital images were enhanced for publication following receipt.
